LONDON, Oct. 1.—In the House of Commons this afternoon Sir Edward Grey, the British Foerign Minister, said it was reported that German and Austrian officers had arrived in Bulgaria to direct the movements of the Bulgarian army, and if such was the case the situation must be viewed with the utmost gravity.

THE GERMAN REPORT.

BERLIN (Official) Oct. 1.—The statement to-day says: "Enemy monitors bombarded Lombartzyde and Middlekerke yesterday without result."

The British yesterday attempted no attacks against our positions. North of Loos our counter-attacks made further progress, despite fierce enemy resistance. We captured a few prisoners on this section of the front.

All French attacks in the Artois and Champagne regions, including a violent onslaught Northwest of Massiges, broke down under German fire, it was officially announced.

TORONTO, Oct. 1.—A special cable from its London resident correspondent received by the Toronto Star to-day says: We expect important news from the Dardanelles shortly.

German Infantry Was Mowed Down By French Machine Guns In Attempted Advance

Enemy Used Many Deadly Devices in Recent Futile Offensive ---Had to Fall Back to Their Own Trenches After 20-Hour Fight

PARIS, Oct. 1.—A graphic description of the German Crown Prince's unsuccessful counter-attack in the Argonne for the purpose of relieving the pressure in the Champagne has been obtained from a wounded French officer.

About 4 o'clock in the morning he says, the German artillery began to fire spasmodically between Four de Paris and Bourenille. Then suddenly the B-dante plateau became the theatre of a violent cannonade, and explosive shells fell regularly all about our first line trenches. Our artillery replied.

It was recognized as undoubtedly the preparation for a big German attack. It was like being in the midst of hell. The noise was deafening, the air shook and the earth flew in every direction, often falling back upon us. No one wavered, although our position was almost untenable.

Despite the volleys of our artillery the Germans increased the number of their explosive shells, and soon their bomb-throwers joined in. Big aerial torpedoes came shooting from every side and burst with a formidable noise, covering our men with smoke and earth. There were already many dead and wounded.

Suddenly the German artillery was silenced and from their lines came jets of flaming liquid. They squirted a mixture of tar and gasoline, which formed a column of flame and smoke. Soon the space between the jets was filled with smoke, and we could see nothing. The wind blew toward us and an insufferable heat wave passed over our line.

Then suddenly through the smoke poured the German infantry. Our machine guns mowed down their ranks and an uninterrupted rifle fire shook the woods. The Germans fell over each other, but as the foremost men disappeared more came to take their places. Their attacks waves finally reached our trenches and then terrible hand-to-hand fighting began on the smoking, flaming ground. It was almost impossible to distinguish friend from foe.

Meanwhile the reserves began to advance as the German artillery ceased to fire, but soon the Germans in agreement with a barrage, fire of asphyxiating shells. This region of gas had to be passed at any price.

The order was given and the men plunged through the smoke cloud, only to meet new barring fire a few hundred yards beyond. This also they crossed and found themselves face to face with the battle line. Then before the Germans knew what had happened our reserves were upon them. They tried for a moment to resist. They tried to hold the ground, defending every inch and stump, but soon their line wavered and here and there units fled. After twenty hours of fearful fighting the Germans fell back to their trenches.

Mayor Buller States That Conditions Of Labour Here Are Above Average

In Winnipeg yesterday, Hon. T. W. Crothers, Minister of Labour expressed the opinion that there would be little unemployment in the industrial centres of Canada this winter, except among un-skilled labourers.

In this connection, Mayor Buller recently drew attention to the fact that Peterborough was experiencing conditions that were most encouraging. It would be found, he said, that few cities or towns in the Dominion were as satisfactorily conditioned as Peterborough has been throughout the summer. Prospects comparatively promising appear for the fall and winter. The Mayor declared that the local citizens are unaware of the sound position of Peterborough in this respect for the reason that attention has been directed toward more serious affairs and there have been no opportunities of making comparisons. It is stated as a fact that no young man who desires to work need be unemployed in the city at the present time. In fact numerous instances have been reported of work being found to men, but for [illegible] reason the reports [illegible]

"Peterborough Presents Possibilities Unsurpassed."

FRIDAY, OCT. 1, 1915

ONE WAY TO BERLIN.

(Hamilton Spectator)

An Athens despatch brings the almost incredible news that Austro-German troops to the number of 300,000 men are in motion toward the Serbian frontier, in the direction of Orsova. If it is true, it can only mean that the Kaiser hates to give up his cherished dream of Asiatic dominion, and wants to make at least one desperate throw toward Constantinople in the hope of getting through there before affairs become more alarming in the west.

Orsova is on the Danube river, at the point where Serbia meets Rumania and both abut on Hungary. The Bulgarian border is only about thirty-five miles away, but the intervening country is mountainous so much so that it was thought the easier, though longer, route through the Morava valley would be preferred. If Serbia is unable to withstand the onset, and if Bulgaria is willing to give right of way across her territory, Constantinople may be relieved before, with the forcing of the Dardanelles, all Germany's hopes with regard to the Ottoman Empire are dashed to the ground.

But these are two very big ifs for one thing. Bulgaria seems now overtaken by a Cabinet crisis. There are indications that the pro-German element is being eliminated and the pro-Russian element strengthened. If so Bulgaria will not allow Austro-German troops to cross her borders, even if they got so far. And for another, if Serbia was able to make so stout a defence against Austria when alone, what will she not be able to do, even though the Austrians are stiffened by a minority of Germans, when Serbia has the British and the French in active co-operation?

A British officer on the general staff of the force at the Dardanelles, interviewed at Athens, predicts the beginning of a new move on the part of the western allies against Germany, by way of Macedonia, Serbia and Hungary. That, he says, will be found the shortest way to Berlin, and the crucial fight will occur between Buda-Pesth (Hungray) and Breslau (Silesia.) This is not only interesting, but highly probable. Indeed, some of the allied troops are said to have already been landed at Salonica. If so, Greece must have given her consent. for Salonica is in the part of Macedonia now Greek. King Constantine, though not strongly anti-German, retains his ire against Bulgaria, and the promptness with which Bulgaria was followed by Greek mobilization was eloquent in itself. If Greek territory can be used, what is there to hinder an Anglo-French advance from the Aegean sea straight through Serbia to Hungary? If we can spare more men for a tussle in that quarter than Germany can, why might we not be in Berlin by way of Buda-Pesth and Breslau far more quickly than by way of Antwerp and Cologne?

THE NEXT CANADIAN ELECTION

In considering the question of the date of the next general election in Canada, the Kingston Standard advises the Liberal newspapers of Canada to be calm, says the Toronto Star. That is good advice, whether addressed to Liberals or to Conservatives. The Standard goes on:

Would it not be well for them to restrain themselves until we see exactly what proposals the Government will make in respect to this matter, and what answer the Opposition will offer to the proposals. If the Opposition is reasonable and fair in the matter and is really sincere in its desire not to have a war-time election, then there need be no election."

That is right. That is what we have been contending since war was declared. We want no election to-day. We want no election during the war. We know that the present Parliament will last until near the end of the year 1916. Therefore, we are not worried or anxious at present. Whether Parliament meets in the fall of 1915, or in the early winter of 1916 there will be plenty of time to consider the matter.

But whenever a newspaper talks in this calm, reassuring way, the Toronto News says that such a newspaper is trying to evade the issue, and is engaged in some kind of political plot, trying to trap the Borden Government and lure it on to ruin. As yet there has been no proposal of a postponed election emanating from the Borden Government. Yet the News continually talks as if such a postponment had been proposed and rejected. There is no agreement as to the length of the proposed extension. Sometimes the News talks of two or three years, sometimes of a year or two, sometimes of an indefinite postponement. The Star's position is that there should be no election during the war, but that the right of the people of Canada to elect a new Parliament as soon as possible should be respected. The News says that the Star is "silent acquiescence" in its view. What the News mistakes for silentness is a thoughtful frame of mind. We want to avoid an election during the war. We want also to preserve the rights of the people of Canada to elect new representatives when the mandate, given in 1911 has expired. We want the Parliamentarians of Canada to discuss the means of prosecuting these two aims. If the war and the present Parliament end about the same time about the end of 1916, there will be no trouble. If the Government wants a few months to arrange its affairs after the close of the war, very likely that could be arranged.

The Kingston Standard asks the Liberal newspapers to be calm. But the Toronto News is not satisfied when they are calm. It is obsessed with the delusion that papers which preserve an appearance of calm are really Liberals in disguise. What the plot is we do not know. The News lately has even tried to say that the Liberals would prefer an election in December, 1916, or why the Conservatives would prefer one in 1917 or 1918.

THE BALANCE OF POWER.

The "balance of power" has been an instrument in our hands for this work of ours—for self-defence through the vindication of the liberties of Europe and, therefore, in particular, of the liberties of the smaller nations of Europe. It was for this end that we became partners in the Triple Entente, and it is for this end that we are now at war. The Austro-German attack upon Serbia, Luxemburg, and Belgium, the wilful provocation of Russia and of France at a moment carefully chosen, the completeness of Germany's preparation and her dishonourable offers to England, are so many proofs, that we were wise in restoring to our old weapon against exorbitant and unscrupulous ambitions. That Germany harbours such ambitions is too plain for argument. From the day when the blindness and the cowardice of Europe suffered her to upset the "balance of power" by laying France exhausted at her feet, they have grown by what they fed on.

Decade by decade, we can trace in her literature, in her press, in the speeches of her Sovereign and of her public men, in her every act as a State, the steady expansion of her aims. She has never rested content at an equal among equals. She aspires to be more than a European power—more than a world-power. She would be the world-power. All other nations are to cower before her; to tremble at the least rattle of her "destructive sword" and to gaze with servile awe upon her "shining armour." And this supremacy of hers is to cover and to blight the whole world of human activities.

She is to be first in arms, first in finance, first in industry, in trade, and in commerce; and, so fortified and assured in her greatness, she is to impose her thought, her ethics, her manners, and her civilization on admiring and submissive mankind. Many instructive features in this colossal vision of Teutonic patriotism, and some of the more immediate measures proposed to realize it, may be learned from the business-like petitions to the German Chancellor which we noticed on Saturday. It is in effusive confidences like these, and not in the inspired paragraphs prepared and exported for neutral consumption, that the true scope of Germany's ambitions may be seen. Belgium, France, Russia, and England above all, are to be trampled in the dust before her, so that they may never again dispute her mastery of the world.

Does any honest "pacifist," however unwise he may be, counsel England and her Allies to submit to a pretension so insolent and so unjust? That would be treason to civilization. Does anyone suppose we can defeat it in "splendid isolation" or suggest any practical means of defeating it, except to restore and to maintain a "balance of power"? None surely can ask us to put our trust in another "scrap of paper," or bid us hearken to the treacherous suggestion from both sides of the Atlantic that Germany desires peace. Aye, Germany desires peace; but peace upon what terms. We do not know them all, but we know that they would make her the mistress of Europe. That is the stake at issue. Our success means the continuity of the old civilization under which we have inherited and developed our ideals of public and of private right, of law, of freedom, and of humanity. Our failure means a rude breach in that secular process and the consecration of doctrines incompatible with those ideals and fatal to them.

This war, we repeat, is to us a war of principle, of right and of wrong between which there can be no compromise. The "balance of power" is a means to the end. The means are fair and honourable; their efficacy has been tried and proved. The end is just and sacred; upon it hangs the future of our race and of mankind. Two of the noblest thinkers that race has given the word on either side of the Atlantic had to face a like conflict fifty years ago. Both were democrats, both were deeply religious, both were passionately devoted to peace. But when Abraham Lincoln was fighting the battle of freedom, the fear that beset John Bright was lest the sword should be sheathed too soon. He wanted "no end of the war and no compromise" until the objects of the war had been completely and irrevocably won. Neither will we hear of peace or compromise until the object of this war has been won—until England and Europe are delivered from the standing menace of German aggression and the "balance of power" is effectively restored.

"THEY ALSO SERVE."

(From Punch.)

(Week by week they are waiting for a chance which never comes. Some of them, to the envy of their comrades, have had their day—in the Dogger Bank, the Heligoland Bight, the Falkland Islands, the Dardanelles. But for most of them the day is still to come. It is impossible to describe the strain of waiting for it."—The Archbishop of York, in The Times.)

The saucy Arethusa met the warships of the foe,
And the Lion and Undaunted helped to send them down below;
But remember, oh remember, while we make their praises ring,
That the men who do the waiting also serve our Lord and King.

The Emden key things lively from Seychelles to Singapore,
But don't forget the others when you cheer the victors' pluck,

Von Spee was smiling broadly when he neared the Falkland Isles—
But he hadn't made allowance for our gallant Sturdee's wiles.
So he and his went under—and we cheer to hear the news;
Yet the men who do the waiting are as stout as Sturdee's crews.

The British Tigers ramped and roared. The cruisers wouldn't wait;
They scuttled hard for port and left the Bluecher to her fate.
But the men who do the waiting deserve our thanks as well.

They are ready, yes, and longing for the signal to advance,
But they haven't yet been given all the other fellow's chance.
They fret to join the melee, they are eager for the call;
And the men who do the waiting have the hardest job of all.

But the "Day" is not far distant when the thunder-roll shall peal,
And the German fleet to meet their fate shall follow out of Kiel;
The guns shall lift their voices in irrevocable blast—
Then the men who do the waiting will have got their chance at last.

SOME KIND THOUGHTS FOR LONDON.

(British Paper.)

The Taglische Rundschau demands in fiery language the destruction of London. It says:

"Justice, every element of human justice, demands the destruction of London. There is, in the whole world, no better target for aerial attack than the city of London, that gigantic, complex assemblage of lofty, ancient warehouses with their enormous stores of all descriptions, and their inviting situation in narrow streets. If only such raids can be repeated again and again, the result may be assured."

Sir John Simon admits the vulnerability of London to such attack and at the same time points out that one of the chief results was the destruction of a stable and the killing of a bantam rooster.

The Neuste Nachrichten encourages its readers by asserting that London already has been partially destroyed by the Zeppelin raiders, and declaring that the remainder is soon to go. It adds:

"Our brave air heroes are not inspired by blind hatred or raging anger, but a solemn and religious awe at being chosen instruments of a divine wrath.

"When they see London breaking up in smoke and fire they will live through a thousand lives of immeasurable joy, which all at home must envy. At last the long-yearned for punishment will fall on England and its people."

What Has Great Britain Done? The Wall St. Journal Answers

What has Great Britain done? asks the Wall Street Journal, and then answers the question as follows: Her navy, her financial credit, and a small expeditionary army were all that were asked by the Allies. They would have been entirely contented with these, but Great Britain gave much more than that. Her navy wiped the German menace from the seas. It locked up the vaunted German navy, which, without Great Britain's participation, could have battered France into submission in a fortnight. It has removed the submarine peril far more effectively than any of the wordy admonitions of Washington.

But instead of her first expeditionary army, which totalled 150,000 men instead of the 125,000 expected, she has placed upwards of 1,000,000 men in the field, without counting the Colonial and Indian troops, and has 2,000,000 more in readiness. The relatively small strength of her line in northern France is quoted. But it is curious to hear from German sources of captured Highlanders in Alsace. Relatively to all the others, Irish, Canadian, Australian, New Zealand and Indian, the proportion of Great Britain in this contribution is overwhelming.

"But her service, in this instance voluntary, merely begins here. She is the principal guarantor for a credit here of $10,000,000. But she has lent already to her allies Russia, Italy, Serbia even Rumania, more than $2,000,000,000. That is twice the credit we are extending, mainly for the benefit of our own commerce with or best customers. What has Great Britain done? What hasn't she done?

"She has conquered every German colony, with the single exception of the Cameroons, now starving itself into impotence. By her own enlightened system of colonial government the Boers have wiped out the German colony in Southwest Africa, the French Canadians are fighting on the Belgian frontier, the Irish are, characteristically, fighting in the thickest of the fray and the supposed subjects Hindoos and Mohammedans are cleaning up all the German political gains in Turkish Asia. And there is more than this.

"If it were not for the British mastery of the seas, where would our own export trade be? Even with an uncertainty on the ocean, the trade with our short-sighted politicians grudge to the Allies, because Germany is in no position to receive it, would not exist at all. To leave out of the argument the inviolability of treaties and the rights of neutral and peaceful nations, all the moral issues involved, on the plain question of advantage to our present and future interests, can we ask ourselves with any show of consistency or plausibility,

"What has Great Britain done?"

RUMOUR DISTURBED THE BELGIANS

The story of how Belgium became a most panic stricken because of a widely current rumour to the effect that the Commission for Relief in Belgium, as a result of the crisis in the relations between the United States and Germany, would be compelled to cease its activities for the relief of the destitute non-combatant population of the country, was told in the offices of the commission yesterday by Tracey B. Kittredge, of Berkeley, Cald., who has been in Belgium for seven months in the interest of the commission, and has just returned to this country for a brief vacation.

"Hardly a day passed in the Province of Limburg, where I was stationed for seven months," said Mr. Kittredge, "that I did not receive touching demonstrations of the gratitude of the Belgian people and of their almost absolute dependence on the commission. I remember that just after the Lusitania was sunk the rumour spread that the Americans were about to leave Belgium, and that the Commission for Relief in Belgium was going to suspend its work. I was seen to leave town in my automobile, and as I had a suit case with me the rumour spread every where that the end of the commission's activities was at hand.

"On my return I was besieged by people who demanded if it were true that we were to abandon the relief work and them. A woman who had been receiving all of her food and milk for her babies from us came to me and almost in tears asked if we were going to leave her babies with nothing more to eat. I was very happy to be able to assure her that there was no danger of the commission suspending its work. For weeks afterwards, everywhere I went, even in the most remote villages, I met echoes of the same story, and the same uneasy fear that the people were to lose their one source of food.

"For under the present conditions in Belgium, it is only the work of the American commission and the presence of the Americans that insures to the people a regular food supply. Conditions for the moment are fairly satisfactory. Most of the acute distress has been relieved. But this does not mean that the commission is no longer necessary. It emphasizes rather the thoroughness and efficiency of the commission's work, and but shows the complete dependence of Belgium at this time on the commission."

How Submarine Fires Torpedoes

Some of the latest makes of torpedoes intended to be used by battleships, cruisers, destroyers and other surface vessels have a range of from 7,000 to 10,000 yards. The torpedoes used on submarines are of a special type designed to deliver an unusually heavy charge of explosive. Being designed for a relatively short range, they require less air capacity and smaller engine power than those for use by surface vessels.

The weight thus saved is added to the charge of the explosive carried, which, in some of the most up-to-date German torpedoes, amounts to 420 pounds of trinitrotoluol. When one of these powerful projectiles hits a vessel she is practically doomed because if the rent torn in the hull is insufficient to sink her at once the wrenching and twisting of her plates due to the expansive energy of the gases liberated within the hull result in water seepage to such an extent that she is almost certain to founder in a short time.

In the present war submarines have been found the most efficient of all vessels using torpedoes for, being invisible, they are able to get so close to their quarry as to fire with fatal accuracy. Although the torpedo moves through the water at a speed of 40 knots an hour [illegible] very difficult to hit a fast-moving vessel at a distance of [illegible] yards, because [illegible] make allowances and time [illegible] ing vessel with any accuracy.

RESERVE MAN-POWER OF TEUTONS IS LESS THAN 2,000,000, SAYS BELLOC

With Losses to Sept. 1 at 7,000,000, Three-fourths Permanent, and Five Millions at Various Fronts, Military Writer Finds Few of 12,000,000 Left

Professor Belloc in three previous articles has given in detail expert estimates of the strength after more than a year of conflict, of the warring Powers. He fixed the Teutonic losses at 6,500,000 men up to July 31.

Considering the character of the recent fighting in Russia, to say the very least, the Teutons have now lost—that is, by the first day of September, 1915—in men killed, wounded, prisoners and sick, including losses permanent and temporary, over 7,000,000 might be to exaggerate the figures, though, in strict proportion to the 6,500,000 arrived at for the earlier date, the end of July, that figure is too low. But to say that the Austro-German total losses now reach 7,000,000 would be to remain strictly within the truth.

Now, of such losses we can only count three-quarters as permanent from various causes. Although the enemy perpetually suffers temporary losses which more than make up for the return of men to the front, yet of really permanent losses which can never return in useful time to the field, we cannot now allow for the enemy even in the first week of September, 1915, more than 5,250,000 with safety.

The Teutons Force on Four Fronts

Let us next see what this figure of total loss means to his total position at this moment.

The elements for determining the Teuton forces upon the various fronts are the reports sent in by the allied commanders facing those fronts.

The Teuton forces actually present upon the various fronts fall into four groups—the western front, from the Swiss mountains to the North Sea; the southern front against Italy; the eastern front against Russia, and the southeastern against Serbia and watching the Roumanian boundary.

It is important for the purposes of our calculations that we should count the least number with which the Germans and Austrians can act upon the various fronts.

Upon the western front the Teutons have never had less, even at the most critical period, than 1,600,000 men actually present upon the fighting line. They have increased of these forces considerably since the Winter having found that there were very dangerous points in the line because it was too thin, and having run the risk of seeing it pierced more than once (though no general offensive has yet been launched against them) even in local attacks. It is certain that they have increased it now to no less than 1,800,000.

On the eastern front against Russia the Teutons have certainly more than 2,600,000 actually in the first fighting line.

Of course, with its reserves and communications, it is very much over that figure, but we are concerned for the moment only with the actual fighting line, and we know, I say, that there is more than 2,600,000.

250,000 Austrians on Italian Front

The Austrian forces upon the Italian front are also fairly well known. The Austrians have maintained there from the beginning of the Italian menace about 250,000 men. The total engagement of Austrians now present, killed, wounded, prisoners and sick, used up by that front since May must be more like nine corps.

Lastly, we have the forces watching the Serbian and Roumanian borders. This is the unknown quantity in the problem, but also it is luckily the least important factor. We will put it at the lowest possible figure, so as to be within the mark, and count it at 150,000 or only four full corps.

Since this article was written the Austro-German forces on the Serbian line have been increased to over 500,000 men.—Ed. American.

Remember that these figures are absolute minima. There may be more than 1,800,000 men west of the Rhine; there are certainly not less. There may be very many more; there must be many more than 2,600,000 men in the very front line against Russia. There are certainly not less. So with the quarter million between the Adriatic and the Trentino; so with the 150,000 upon the Danube-Save and the Transsylvania front.

Adding together these minimum numbers, we get over 4,800,000 men. Now it must be remembered that this figure (4,800,000) is absolutely the very least number necessary to the maintenance of the enemy's fronts as they are now developed.

It would be wise to say that the real number, counting a hundred accessory units drawing rations upon the very front, top the 5,000,000 mark.

Well, if the enemy at this moment the opening of September, 1915, has suffered in permanent losses 5,250,000—with a great margin of temporary losses still in hospital or removed from the fighting line; if his total potential cannot be—as we have proved that it cannot be—much over 12,000,000, and if his front originally demand close on the 5,000,000—what remains?

What remains as a theoretical maximum is easily computable—it is a trifle less than 2,000,000 reserve manpower, and I have no doubt that some people would, up to this point in my argument draw, from my own figures (though not acknowledging their source), the conclusion that the Teutons had 2,000,000 fresh and hearty young men ready to fall upon us and eat us up, unless we speedily accept a shameful peace.

To begin with, behind the men on the absolute fronts there are at least a million occupied upon communications in the strict sense of that term. Next, let it be remarked that of set purpose the enemy has expended in his attempt to attain victory, in spite of failure, his best human material. The margins he can now call up are, for the most part, those rejected for physical reasons—those too young or those too old.

Lastly, if I may be excused a homely metaphor, the provision of the last reserves of an army cannot be compared to drawing water from a tap; it must rather be compared to the pouring of treacle out of a jug.

Like Southern States in Civil War

When a government is at its last stretch for men, as was Napoleon in 1815, or as were the Southern States in the last year of the American Civil War, numerical calculation upon paper begins to fail. The very last hundred thousands are not what the first hundred thousands were. The proportion of auxiliaries to the fighting line increases alarmingly. Transport chokes, provision wavers; the end of any effort is never exact and clean; it peters out.

The Teutons still have many hundred thousand in reserve. Millions they've have not. And with the approach of Autumn and Winter they approach actually declining numbers in the field.

We must never lose grasp of the converse and less pleasing truth that a decision reached by the Teutons in their favor would altogether upset this balance. Supposing one of the allies to make peace, or supposing one of the allied forces to be virtually put out of action, it is manifest that the fronts here examined would no longer be the same, and that the balance the Teutons would have in hand for action in a then reduced field would be immensely increased.

Prize Winners At Exhibition of School Children's Work

Immaculate Conception Scholars Made a Fine Showing With Vegetables, Poultry, Household Work and Woodwork—This Event Will Likely Become an Annual One and Should Develop Each Year

The first fair of the Immaculate Conception school was held on Tuesday. It was a new department for the children and their teachers, but any previous doubts as to its success were dispelled when the entries began to come in. As a result there was keen competition for practically all the prizes and not one of the youthful exhibitors but found a new pleasure in the fruits of his or her work. The display of vegetables was particularly good, and the girls fancy work was also worthy of special mention. In their woodwork the boys' attempts were somewhat crude for it was remembered that they were only beginners of the third book and for this first attempt the finish that comes with practice and experience was not expected. One lad's sleight which he had made was well done. Both boys and girls competed with poultry exhibits, the girls showed considerable promise in their domestic work, especially in cooking. Altogether this amateur exhibition was quite a success, so much so that it is expected to be an annual event. The prizes were awarded as follows:

Best notes in agriculture—Won by Madge Walsh.
Best essay on gardening—Farman Holland.
Best collection of exhibits—Michael Clancy.
Best piece of woodwork—Arnold Clancy.
Best piece of fancy work—Helen Hennessey.
Best piece of plain sewing—Norberta McAuliffe.

The assessment returns for this year, upon which the taxes for 1916 will be based, have been completed and turned over to City Clerk Armstrong. The figures give Peterborough a total assessment of $15,493,030, and a population of 20,653. The increase in assessment over last year's figures is $38,205, and the decrease in population is 227. The number of taxable persons has increased by 8, while a substantial decrease in births is recorded. It will be a source of satisfaction to many to learn that the number of dogs in the city indicates a decrease of 95—thanks to the activity of the police force and a few reckless motor car drivers.

The actual figures for the city are given below.

The Present Month

A New Month (October) Commenced To-day---A Sketch of the Characteristics and History of October

Written for the Examiner by Frank Russell

To-day commences a new month—the tenth month in the Christian year. It may be considered as one of the Autumn or Fall months, and the tenth month in the Christian year. It is usually a fine month, but there is a decided coolness about the air, reminding us that drearer Winter is not by any means far distant.

Descriptive.

October is now yellow Autumn, a month with features of its own, marked by slow decay. Every wind that blows pales the crimson line on the leaves, or scatters their beauteous forms in the air, for all around us leaves are falling, yet there is a rich hue of red around, too beautiful to be of long duration. In the orchards a few hardy apples still hang which only the frosts will ripen. The fields appear to increase in size, for the grain has been mown and the corn reaped. Rushes and water plants rock in the breeze and they, too, show signs of decay.

To an Observant Eye

Many little changes are presented, all of which tend to show how rapidly winter is approaching. Turn wherever we may, we cannot but see that the face of Nature is changing. Nowhere now does it wear its welcome summer look. Even the very sound of falling leaves creates in us a feeling of thoughtfulness. As the fallen leaves are blown by the Autumn winds around us, we cannot but think of those who have passed away, blown forward to the Great Divide by the icy cold blasts of death.

In the spring time no such emotions are awakened, for there is no sign of decay there, since all seems as though it was fresh springing into life after the long sleep of cold ice and snow-bound winter. But now even the sun seems to us to be growing older, for the rises later and sets earlier, as though a reminder to us that as he decreases in warmth so he requires increased rest.

Evening.

As this approaches, and it comes on us all too soon, the landscape seems to assume a sober hue as the colours of the foliage become subdued, and these signs have a tendency to produce a lower feeling of spirits, of which we do not appear to be so susceptible at the change of any other season of the year.

Natural Decay Necessary.

Yet we know, only too well, that this decay is necessary to produce life and beauty in the coming spring, and it may be some measure of relief and consolation to know that for every flower on which the winds and rains of Autumn blow and bury, a hundred will, in due time, rise and occupy its place by the time that the welcome spring reappears for it is that season's work to repair decay.

Lovely Foliage.

The wooded lands never look more beautiful than from the close of the past month to the middle of October, for by that time it seems as if Nature had exhausted all her choicest tints of colour on the foliage. We note the rich burnished bronze, rest of many hues up to the most brilliant crimson. Every shade of yellow, from primrose to deep orange, purple varying from the lightest to the darkest shades all so exquisitely blended as it is seemingly impossible to describe where one begins and the other ends.

And amid this change the crowded forest trees seem now to step boldly out, which have been hidden by the fairer leaves of summer.

Fall is Not Death.

Yet the fall of the leaf is not its death, any more than the fading of the flower on a bunch is the death of the others. It only fails to make room for another. A swelling bud will always, in Autumn, be found above the leaf that is about to fall. This bud, which forces off the old leaf, will, during the ensuing summer, form the future stem or branches which will, in their turn, bear many in the place of the one it has displaced.

Autumn Colours.

As regards the colouring of Autumn leaves there are various theories. It is supposed that during the night oxygen is absorbed by the trees, which, owing to the chilliness of the season, now have not the strength to throw out again during the daylight, and that this gives an acidity to the sap or juices of the tree, which changes the colour of the leaf. Some maintain that this is the case with leaves that are red, but not so with those that are yellow or brown; so the question remains open to some doubts.

Characteristics.

Thus, though a more or less melancholy feeling is associated with October, from the general decay of Nature, which is the characteristic feature, nevertheless, not infrequently we find some of the finest and most exhilarating weather of the whole year. Frosts in the mornings and evenings are by no means uncommon, but rather the reverse, whilst the middle of the day is often brightened and enlivened by all the sunshine of July, without its oppressiveness and has the clearness of the frosty December or January day without its piercing cold.

Historical

This month is so called from the fact of its having been the eighth month of the year, according to the old Latin Calendar. By our Saxon ancestors it was known as the Wyn Month or Wain Monat, which signifies the wine month, while in England, the home of good ale, the October brewings are always reckoned as the primest of the year. It was also known by the ancient Germans as the winter-fyllith, from the approach of winter with the full moon of the month.

October

Was the eighth month of the so-called year of Romulus, but became the tenth when Numa Pompelius changed the commencement of the year to the first of January. It retained its original name, notwithstanding the attempts made by the Roman Senate and the Emperor Commodus and Domitian, who, for a time substituted the names Faustinus, Invictus, and Domitianus. Many Roman and Greek festivals were celebrated in this month, the most remarkable of which was the sacrifice at Rome of the October horse to the God of War Mars.

Its Allegory.

In some of the ancient calendars this month was allegorized by the figure of a husbandman carrying a sack on his shoulders and sowing seed, in allusion to the practice of sowing winter wheat, which takes place in October.

The Sun Enters "Scorpio."

On or about the 23rd of this month the sun enters the sign of Scorpio, one of the signs of the Zodiac, an astronomical emblem said to typify in the form of a destructive insect the increasing power of cold over nature. In like manner as in September, the equal influence of heat and cold are represented by Libra or the balance or scales.

The Phases of the Moon

For this month are as follows:
Last Quarter—October 1st.
New Moon—October 8th.
First Quarter—October 15th.
Full Moon—October 22nd.
Last Quarter—October 30th.

ARMENIAN WOMEN PUT UP AT AUCTION

Refugee Tells of the Fate of These in Turkish Hands

TRAGEDY OF CENTURIES

NEW YORK Sept. 30—Speaking of the reported Turkish atrocities against the Armenians Prof. Samuel T. Dutton, secretary of the Committee on Armenian atrocities, said he did not believe anything had happened in many centuries so "terrible as is this studied and systematized effort on the part of a political coterie in Turkey—the Young Turks, led by Enver Pasha—to exterminate a whole race of people. The whole plan involves the wiping out of the Armenians."

"Only a day or two ago," added Professor Dutton, "a young girl who left Turkey on Aug. 10 called here to see me. She told of the fate of the 100 girls who were attending a mission school in Turkey. These girls, who were of course, Armenians, were divided into groups, and those that were the best looking in the opinion of the Turkish officers were taken over by the Turkish officers. Those considered not quite so good-looking were given over to the soldiers, while those still less attractive were put up for sale to the highest bidders."

Several Americans, who have been in Turkey for many years, have arrived here within the last few days. They all testify to the truthfulness of the reports that have come out of Turkey concerning the treatment of the Armenians, but in every instance they beg that their names be not used for fear that what they have said will find its way back to Turkey and friends or relatives they left behind will be punished by the Turks in retaliation.

Copies of two letters, in which the writers tell of the fate that is being meted out to the Armenians, were given to the press yesterday by a man in close touch with Armenian conditions.

In one of these letters the writer, among other things, says:

"Toward the end of July the military situation on the trans-Caucasian front took an unfortunate turn for the Russo-Armenian forces. Apparently encouraged by the Russian reverses in Poland, the Turks sent large reinforcements, some 40,000 regular troops, to the Armenian front, to commence a strong offensive. Previous to this the outlying district on the western edge of Lake Van was being gradually cleared of Turks and Kurds. In the last week of July Tadvan and the slopes of the Nimrud and Kerjur Mountains had been captured by the Ve[illegible] after severe struggles.

"In Utah Tukuh, and about twenty other Armenian villages on the lake the entire population was found to have been massacred by the Turks—not a single living soul was found in these villages, which were now given up to howling dogs, while large numbers of corpses have been washed ashore from the lake and rivers.

"These corpses, which were ascertained to be all of males, were terribly mutilated but nothing was discovered as to the whereabouts of women and children. By sunset of July 20 the Armenians captured the heights of Kerkur. When they reached the summit the town of Bitlis presented to their disappointed gaze a sheet of flames, and they knew that the worst had happened. Some female refugees, who managed to escape the Turkish cordon, have since related the story of fiendish massacres in the town and the wholesale deportation of women and children.

"To a well-known minister of the Armenian Church there came out of Turkey, by some mysterious underground route, a letter which is described as of 'undoubted trustworthiness.' Excerpts from this letter follow:

"'Armenia without the Armenians'—such is the plan of the Ottoman Government, which has already begun to re-stall Moslem families in the homes and property of the Armenian Needless to say, the deported are not allowed by the Government to take any of their belongings with them, and as there is, moreover, no means of transport owing to the exigencies of the military, they are forced to cover on foot the two or three months' journey to that corner of the desert region which is destined to be their sepulchre."

FOE'S LINE RUMOURED BROKEN AT SOMME-PY. IN CHAMPAGNE

NEW YORK, Oct. 1—The London correspondent of the Herald says: The stirring description of the glorious behavior of Lord Kitchener's new armies in the advance on and the capture of Loos, and all story of the British triumph in Mesopotamia, are completely overshadowed by the news that the Champagne and the Argonne, in addition to capturing 25,000 men, fully three army corps or 120,000 men, made up of the flower of the Kaiser's troops including regiments of the famous Prussian Guard, have been killed or wounded.

But even more inspiring to Londoners than this epic in military prowess is the report that the French, still advancing, have reached Hill No. 140, the topmost crest of Vimy.

It is whispered everywhere that the French victory is much greater than the official communication reports, and that the German lines despite the reported presence of the Kaiser on the western front, have been broken at the Somme-Py, and that the Crown Prince's army is in danger of having its communications cut. That is sent under the greatest reserve but where there is smoke there is fire, and everyone here believes the French have scored the greatest victory of the war in the west as the result of their splendid advance.

"Furthest East" Reached.

One hundred metre hill gives to the French access to the barren Vimy plateau and the first open battlefield they have encountered in all the Artois sector. At the same time it places them further east than they have appeared at any time since early in October, 1914 when the vast flanking operations which ended in a deadlock at the North Sea were in progress.

There was no indication last night of a decrease in the fury of the allied offensive. On the contrary, certain points on the long front seemed intensified in fury to the Souchez neighborhood at Loos and north of Massiges in Champagne. The French here have brought their right up until it has passed north of the front occupied by the Crown Prince in the neighboring Argonne. Unless its line strengthens this regiment materially where it bends it gets into Vienne-le-Chateau, here will be compelled to fall back from the advanced positions at [illegible] La Fille Morte [illegible] Madame and Bolante, or lay himself open to a flank attack that is almost certain to end in utter rout, is the opinion here.

Fight For Hill 70 Raging.

The British yesterday were making their main effort against the third German line south of La Basse Canal and east of Loos. The British line is now to the east of Loos, and is advancing along the line of railway leading to Cite St. August. Between Loos and Cite St. August is Hill No. 70, in which the Germans are strongly entrenched. The fighting for the possession of Hill No. 70 is still raging, and with the Germans putting in heavy reserves to maintain their hold on this most important position. Hill No. 70 is essential in order to maintain Loos, and it may be expected that the British will never stop until they have made their hold on Loos good by full possession of the elevation.

Souchez, which lays in front of the French left wing, and which has been the scene of the most sanguinary fighting throughout the spring is now found in French hands. The next French attack succeeded in carrying the cemetary of that place, and finally the Chateau de Carleul.

Hill 140 Taken Since This.

The French line was carried before Souchez to a distance of three-quarters of a mile, and is now bent up to the east of Hill No. 140 and to the outskirts of Givenchy-en-Gohelle. The village of Angres is still in German hands, and has been the scene of continuance fighting since last Sunday. The Germans put in strong reinforcements at this point, and also at Lewin, which they continue to hold.

The immediate danger to the German position lies in the possibility that the British may be able to push their advance beyond Hulluch and through Bienfontaine and get astride the railway running from La Basse to Pont-a-Bendin. This rail continues on to Lens, and is a feeder to the entire German line between Lens and Arras. The danger is accentuated now by the reported gains by the British along the French railway which passes south of Hill No. 70 and reaches to Cite St. August. If the British reach Cite St. August and Pont-a-Vendin, or either place then Lens becomes untenable, and with it the entire line of German entrenchments between Lens and Arras.

Mr. G. A. Gillespie, Peterborough.

Dear Sir: The patrons of my cheese factory have given me a day's milk to the Red Cross Society. The milk drawers have drawn it from factory and I have made the cheese free. I am writing to see if you will handle it for us. Kindly let us know what you think about buying the cheese at once.

Yours truly,

May Not Construct Boundary Road Line

The west Charlotte street car line was temporarily closed this morning for the completion of the pavement, and the cars were transferred to the Jackson Park line, the rails of which received the last clamp yesterday.

It has been heard from some sources that the Boundary Road section of the Charlotte street line will not be laid until next spring. This is the reported decision of the management.

Heroic Incident of Present War

One of my wounded friends was enthusiastic over one feat which he regarded as the noblest of the war. In the beginning of that terrible retreat from Mons, which the genius of Sir John French alone saved from being an absolute disaster, there came a time when a section of the Irish Guards were told to hold the road at all costs. Most of the officers had been killed, or else were so badly wounded that they could no longer lead, the charge fell on a gray-haired Sergeant-Major, who swiftly seized a corner shop commanding two roads as an ideal place to hold up the Prussians until our rear-guard was in safety.

As he was about to place his two machine guns a woman stopped him and said, "You cannot stay here, Sergeant. There is a woman in labour in a room above." "Good heavens!" he answered. "And at such a time! Now then, ma'am," he continued with ironical good humor, "can't you tell the lady to hurry up, as she's keeping an army waiting? How long will she be?" The reply was, "About half an hour."

The Sergeant told off ten of his men with stretchers and blankets to wait until the child was born, then to convey it and its mother into safety, after that to return to their section. In the meantime he advanced an eighth of a mile and fortified a weaker spot as well as he could, scolding his men the while and telling them not to make too much noise, else they would alarm the "babby." And so, in a place which left them exposed to the full danger of the Prussian attack, these Irishmen fought until every man was either killed, wounded or made prisoner, rather than disturb a woman in the crucial hour of maternity.

Forgery Charge Dropped---Women Held For Theft

were first held, the court got underway to the extent of withdrawing this case. The women left the court room, descended the stairs and had almost reached the street, when they were confronted with the "papers" in the theft charge, were taken into the women's cell while the court was regrooming itself and finally reappeared before Magistrate Dumble. The prosecution was unready to proceed and requested a remand until Wednesday next. After negotiating for "some coin," the wherewithal of their bail, which was fixed at $25 each, Mr. and Mrs. James Davis of the Stuart House supplied the funds and thee women were given their liberty.

The Forgery Charge.

When the Court opened at 2 o'clock it was plainly evident that a withdrawal was desired by Mr Nathan McIlmoyle, the complainant in the $800 forgery charge preferred against the two women. Their counsel, Mr D. O'Connell, informed Mr. Dumble that restitution had been made, Mr. McIlmoyle having ratified the cheque, that there had been some sort of misunderstanding and there was no desire to proceed with the case. Mr. Hatton stated that since the complainant offered no evidence he could not proceed with the prosecution.

Mr Dumble seemed scarcely satisfied, but there apparently remained no alternative but to cancel the charge.

Mr. J. J. Turner, Sr., who was on the bench with the magistrate was introduced to this procedure.

It was indirectly learned that the $800 the women first obtained was given by one of them to her husband in Buffalo. As none of it had been brought back, and there were no signs of it coming back, bail was obtained in the theft case from Mr. and Mrs. Davis of the Stuart House.

Mrs. Wallace gave her age as 33 and Mrs. Nicholls 38. Both women were well dressed.

Among the Police Court audience were a number of relatives, men and women, of Mr. McIlmoyle and the two Buffal women, who are also stated to be related to him.

Marconi Says Huns on Run

New Artillery of Allies Is Very Powerful,—Saw Recent Action From a Tree

LONDON, Sept. 30.—"The armies of French and Joffre are making a veritable hell for the Germans. The onslaught of the Allies' guns has been terrific."

In these words Guglielmo Marconi, wireless inventor, and lieutenant in the Italian Army, returned to London yesterday from a five weeks' trip to the British and French lines, spoke of the awful havoc of the Allies' advance in the western theatre of war.

Mr. Marconi for six days was an eye-witness of the offensive of the Allies, and saw the huge force of British and French soldiers rushing upon the German trenches and observed the slaughter of the Germans that ensued.

Difficult to Dislodge.

He gave his expert opinion that the events of last week on the western front presumed a more insistent advance by the Allies. He is inspired with "unbounded confidence" after what he has seen of the ability of the Allies to push the Germans out of France; but he feels, because of the advantage the Germans gained in their quick entry into France at the start of the war, that it will be some time before they are entirely dislodged. He predicts that eventually the Allies will drive every German out of France and keep going across the German border, if occasion demands it.

Germans Shot Their Bolt.

"I agree with Lord Kitchener," he said, "that the Germans have shot their bolt. The events of last week show beyond doubt that the Allies are now able to take the offensive with every sign pointing to the ultimate victory of their arms. After all these long weeks of living in the trenches, while the Germans have gradually driven their way into Russia, the reverse in the Allies' favour in the west is inspiring to everyone who is hopeful of Germany being crushed. The spirit of the Allies to beat the enemy was brilliantly reflected in the momentous charge that began on the morning of 25th September. The advance is still on; and from the way it was going when I left the lines on Tuesday, it is pretty sure to keep up. One might say the Allies have the Germans on the run."

Shells are Powerful.

Mr. Marconi added that the latest guns of the Allies are more powerful than before and they have shells enough to keep them going night and day without a let-up. "Doom has sounded for the Germans," he added.

Mr. Marconi, with a staff officer of the Italian Army, climbed a tree one day during the fighting and witnessed the efforts of the German aircraft to fight off the British and French aeroplanes, which were dropping bombs upon the German lines.

Supremacy of Air.

"It was a thrilling spectacle to see that air fight while the Germans and Allied guns engaged in their terrific duel below," said Mr. Marconi. "The Allies showed themselves to be superior with aircraft. While the Germans managed to drop some bombs on the British and French fighters, the Allies' aircraft chased them away and kept the supremacy of the air while their men afield drove the Germans to retreat."

Mr. Marconi said that his wireless apparatus was now working perfectly in the field.

Bodies Lie Under Mass of Wreckage

Death List in Explosion at Ardmore, Okla., May Exceed 50

ARDMORE, Okla., Oct. 1.—Additional bodies discovered in the wreckage of the two city blocks, devastated by a gasoline explosion and fire, today brought the total known dead up to 45. A dozen others were missing, and it was estimated the death list will be between 55 and 60.

Estimates of property damage run as high as $1,000,000 to-day.

More negroes than white were killed. A rooming house and a pool hall just east of the depot were demolished, crushing 14 negroes to death.

Five bodies taken from the railroad freight house were burned beyond recognition. Flames which spread over the downtown district were not extinguished until this morning.

Martial law has been declared and scores of additional police and deputies have been sworn in.

M. E. Atkins, a drayman standing three blocks from the depot, was killed by a huge rock torn from the wall of a store building. A. G. Odell, a peddler, driving across the tracks near the depot, was killed, his horse blown to pieces and his wagon demolished. Ira Woods, the repair man whose hammer caused the disaster, was found pinioned under a piece of timber horribly mutilated. He was identified by a finger ring. Other dead who have been identified are:

E. J. Cox, 50, fireman; Charles R. Smith, 45, ex-policeman; Flagman Sims; Sante Fe; "Shorty" Tryford, cook, Milton Taylor, Will Graham, Sam Stallcup, 6 years old, E. D. Cornell.

A spark from a workman's hammer set off the blast that wrecked nearly one block of business buildings and started a fire that destroyed another block before it was checked. The victims were crushed by falling walls or caught in the fallen timbers of the wrecked buildings and burned to death, while hundreds stood by and watched them die, helpless to aid them.

ROLPH ELECTED MAYOR.

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 1.—Apparently for the second time, James Rolph, jr., has been elected Mayor of San Francisco at the municipal primary. Although the official returns will not be known from each of the city's 651 precincts early to-day gave him a majority of all the votes cast for mayor. Eugene Schmitz, deposed as mayor during the graft prosecutions in 1906-07, was second with a total of 12,897.

CHICKEN THIEVES SENT TO JAIL AND FLOGGED

WILMINGTON, Del., Oct. 1.—That chicken thieves convicted in general sessions can look for little leniency on the part of the court was demonstrated in the cases of Charles Boyles, Andrew Hill and Spencer James, negroes, found guilty by a jury without leaving the box on charges of stealing chickens from farmers near Newark. Hill and James were sentenced to serve six years each in the workhouse and to receive 40 lashes each. Boyle was sentenced to serve two years in prison and to 30 lashes.

They cleaned out the chicken houses of Thomas Brown and Thomas O'Connell, muddy footprints in the yard of the O'Connell home gave the officers their first clew.

PASTOR SUED FOR BREACH OF PROMISE

NEW YORK, Oct. 1.—The Rev. Dr. John Wesley Hill, pastor of the Methodist Temple, chaplain of the Republican national convention, and noted public speaker and writer, was named as defendant in a suit for $100,000, alleging breach of promise of marriage, brought against him by Lucille Covington.

The summons only was filed, so no further particulars were obtainable at the county court house.

At Dr. Hill's office it was said that the clergyman had started on a lecture trip which would take him to Michigan. He is expected to return within a week. Nothing was known by his associates about any law suit.

The Rev. Dr. Hill, who is married and the father of John Warren Hill, deputy assistant district attorney employed Miss Covington for about six months in 1910 as manager of his lecture bureau.

Kills Woman Pianist And Himself in Cafe

CHICAGO, Oct. 1.—Washington Irving Morley, said to be a son of a wealthy Kansas City contractor, shot and killed Mrs. Mary Whitney, a piano player in a cafe, then shot himself to death.

In Morley's clothing was found a letter addressed to "Anybody" telling of the mistake he had made in his life, describing the woman whom he killed as being "10,000 times worse than the vampire of fiction," warning young men to beware of evil women and concluding with "I am going to take the creature with me that has caused me all this misfortune. I cannot live with her and I cannot live without her."

Mrs. Whitney came here from Boston.

PATRIOTIC CONCERT— WAS GREAT SUCCESS

Lieut. Chas. Ackerman's Address on "Life in the Trenches" Was Thoroughly Appreciated—Splendid Programme Rendered

GOOD SUM RAISED

A most interesting talk on conditions in the trenches by Lieut. Chas. Ackerman, addresses by Lt.-Col. Johnston and Capt. R. P. Watt of the Overseas forces, an auction sale conducted by Chief Howard and a splendid musical programme in which the Overseas Band took a prominent part were features of the very enjoyable concert under the auspices of the Soldiers' Wives and Mothers' Club in Victoria Hall last night. The affair was a great success from every point of view. The attendance was very large and the result was the raising of a splendid sum which will be devoted to supplying comforts for Peterborough's soldiers at the front, whose numbers have been augmented since the arrival of the second division in France.

Lieut. Ackerman was greeted with prolonged cheering and applause when he was called upon to speak. In an interesting address of forty-five minutes' duration he touched upon incidents of trench life, first dealing with the question of comforts. He did not want to seem to be throwing cold water on the splendid efforts of the women at home, but he warned his hearers against sending things that would be burdensome to the men at the front. He described the long, forced marches which the men sometimes have to carry out, and said that the articles which the soldiers had to carry were heavy enough without any additional burdens. Scarves and Balaclava caps were luxuries with which most of the men were well supplied; as far as cholera belts, he only knew of two men in his platoon who wore them. The best gift that they could send to the men was newsy letters from home, letters of a cheerful nature and not of the kind calculated to make a fellow feel blue. The boys could not get too many letters from home he said.

"It's you people at home that do the worrying," said Lieut. Ackerman, "not the boys at the front." He informed his hearers that all was not gloom with the soldier lads on the firing line and told several incidents of trench life that illustrated this point. The Canadians, he said, had proved their adaptability, especially in the matter of adding to their rations and he told an amusing story of a curious-minded cow that wandered too close to the Canadian lines and wound up by providing a dinner for the lads from the land of the Maple Leaf. A favourite amusement of the Germans was to snipe at the top of the Canadian trenches at dinner time knocking a shower of dirt down into the mess tins, whereupon the Canadians generally tried to retaliate by knocking over some of the stove pipes protruding above the German trenches. When the Canadians were at Salisbury Plains, Lieut. Ackerman said that many of the British regulars were inclined to laugh at what they called the lack of discipline among the boys from Canada, but when the latter marched into the second battle of Ypres every man was in his place and every man did exactly as he was told.

In a short address Capt. R. P. Watt referred to the splendid conduct of the men of the local overseas detachment and said that no mother need worry about her boy coming under bad influences in such a fine body of men. Lt.-Col. Johnston promised that every man would be given the same kind of treatment as he would want his own son to get.

The auction sale of quilts and other articles that had been presented to the Wives' and Mothers' Club for the purpose of raising funds was conducted by Chief Howard and was one of the most amusing features of the evening. Everyone enjoyed the fun and what was more important over $40 was raised for the soldiers' fund.

The musical programme was greatly enjoyed. The Overseas Band played a number of inspiring marches with a snap and swing that showed what rapid progress they have been making under the direction of Bandmaster Hughes.

The programme was as follows:
Chairman's address.
Selection—Overseas Band.
Duet—Miss Eva Booth, Miss Annie Cook.
Recitation—Mrs. Nichols.
Selection—Overseas Band.
Solo—Miss Rowan.
Concertina solo—Bandsman Loader.
Solo—Mrs. French.
Remarks—Capt. Watt.
Address—Lieut. Ackerman.
Recitation—Master Luther.
Address—Lt.-Col. Johnston.
Auction of quilts by Chief Howard.
Selection—Overseas Band.
Solo—Mr. Chas. Coleman.
Violin solo—Bandsman Leader.

Ald. G. W. Green made a most efficient chairman.

The Committee are deeply indebted to Messrs. J. J. Turner and Sons for supplying flags for the decorations; to the men of the Overseas Company who decorated the hall; to Lieut. Ackerman for his address; to Lt.-Col. Johnston and Capt. Watt for their presence; to Chief Howard, for his services as auctioneer; to J. D. Craig, for the loan of chairs; to the Overseas Band and the others who took part; to Miss Glick, Mr. Bevey and the other accompanists of the evening, and to all who assisted in the success of the event.

DEATH OF FORMER PETERBORO' MAN AT LOS ANGELES, CAL.

Mr. Fred. H. Lithgow at One Time Conducted Drug Business in This City—Will Be Remembered By Old Residents

Mr. Pennington Alexander has received a copy of the Daily Times of Laredo, Texas, under date of September 18th, from his sister, Mrs. Jas. Winch of that town, announcing the death of a former Peterborough man, in the person of Mr. Fred H. Lithgow. Mr. Lithgow will be remembered by many of the older citizens. He at one time conducted a drug store in the premises now occupied by Mr. W. J. Kent. He left here about thirty years ago.

The account of his passing, as it appeared in the Times, is as follows:

A telegram received by relatives here last night from James H. Winch in Los Angeles, Cal., announced the death in a hospital there yesterday of Mr. Fred H. Lithgrow, his uncle, and a former well known business man and citizen of Laredo, who passed away yesterday afternoon at 2 o'clock following an operation for cancer of the stomach. The news of his death was not wholly unexpected, as it was known his condition was most precarious. Mr. Lithgrow underwent the operation eight days before and gradually his constitution weakened each day, until death relieved him of his suffering.

Fred. H. Lithgow was a native of Peterborough, Ont., Canada, where he was born in 1849, and at the time of his demise was in his 66th year. In his youth he was educated in the common school of his native city, and later attended the Collegiate Institute of the same place. After his graduation he entered the drug business in Peterborough and remained there for three years engaged in this line. Disposing of his business he became a travelling salesman for a big drug concern, which he later resigned and returned to Peterborough and attended the College of Pharmacy from which he graduated with a diploma as a pharmacist. After receiving his diploma he held positions in San Francisco, New York City, Jacksonville, Fla., and Albuquerque, N.M.

In 1899 Mr. Lithgrow removed from Albuquerque to Laredo to make his home. Soon after his arrival here he established himself in business when he founded the City Drug Co., which is still conducted here. In 1910 the subject of this sketch disposed of part of his interest in the City Drug Co. and engaged in the cotton-growing business on his farm near Ishias. In 1886 he was married in Brooklyn, N. Y., to Miss Magdalena August, daughter of Dr. John August, a prominent physician of that city. His wife preceded him to the grave about a year ago and shortly after his death he disposed of his cotton farm here and went to Canada on a visit to a brother whom he had not seen in thirty years. He was in impaired health when he left Laredo and his condition became worse as time progressed and two months ago he went to Los Angeles and took medical treatment, but all that science could do to relieve him was in vain, for the dreaded malady had a firm hold on him and the only relief provided was that of alleviating his suffering. A week ago last Thursday he was operated on for cancer of the stomach, and a short time after his nephew, J. H. Winch, left for Los Angeles to attend his bedside and was with him when he passed away.

Deceased is survived by one brother, R. H. Lithgow of Maple Creek, Canada, and two half-brothers, Mr. G. H. Winch of this city, and Dr. E. L. Burnham of Millbrook, Ontario, Canada, besides a number of other relatives, all of whom have the sympathy of many friends in their bereavement. The remains of Mr. Lithgrow will be brought to Laredo for interment, reaching here about next Wednesday, and the funeral will take place under the auspices of the Masonic Lodge.

Addresses On Red Cross Work

Given Before the C. L. A. of Charlotte St. Church by Mrs. Allen and Miss Rush

The C. L. A. of Charlotte Street Church spent a most enjoyable and profitable evening on Tuesday last. Addresses on Red Cross work were given by Mrs. Allen and Miss Rush.

Mrs. Allen spoke very ably concerning the great need of each one doing his or her "bit" towards this line of work was the connecting link between the soldiers in the trenches and the civilians at home and therefore it was up to us to back our soldiers and work for them unfailingly, this being our duty and opportunity. Miss Rush, in her address, dealt with the practical side of the Red Cross work and gave the Society an idea of the actual work that has to be done.

The Society is much indebted to these two ladies for the addresses so kindly given by them.

It was then decided by an unanimous vote of the members to devote their next meeting to this work, and the C. L. A. extends an invitation to any person interested in Red Cross work to attend and make the evening a huge success.

A piano solo by Miss S. Elliott and a vocal solo by Mr. S. Staples were much appreciated.

Presentation To Miss Shearer

Peterborough Girl is Leaving To Do Missionary Work in South China

A very delightful evening was spent recently at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Morgan, East City, when the members of the Young Women's Mission Band of St. Andrew's Church met to do honour to one of their members, Miss Lena Shearer, on the eve of her departure to South China.

The host and hostess spared no effort to ensure the pleasure of their guests; and musical numbers contributed by Misses Mae Laing, Bella King, and Jean Girvin, were greatly appreciated by all.

The President, Mrs. Morgan, referrd regretfully to the additional losses sustained by the Mission Band in the departure of Miss Laing to enter the Toronto General Hospital nursing staff, and of Miss Margaret Girvin, to resume here studies at Queen's University, Kingston.

At the close of the evening the Mission Band presented a diamond ring and handsome silk unbrella to Miss Shearer, with the following address:

Dear Miss Shearer,—On the eve of your departure to assume the superintendency of a Presbyterian Hospital in South China, we, the Young Women's Mission Circle, of St. Andrew's Church, Peterborough, are met together to express our affectionatee admiration for you. You have, during some years now, quietly and patiently, with splendid tenacity of purpose, striven to realize a high and noble ideal—that of carrying to the far ends of the earth the sweet assurance of God's love for all mankind. Notwithstanding the deep regret we naturally feel at your departure, we know it is an honour that one who has chosen this high calling should fare forth from our midst; and trust that your choice and example may not fail to enrich and inspire the lives of all who have been thus intimately associated with you in the Master's work here.

That you may remember us amid the exactions and loneliness of your new labours in a distant field, we ask you to accept this ring and parasol as a token of our loving interest and prayers for your success. Many novel experiences there will be, but we are glad to believe that "looking unto Jesus the Author and Finisher of your faith," you will be led into an increasingly closer relationship with Him, which will result in the leading of many darkened lives out into a radiant knowledge of His power to give eternal life to such as believe on Him.

Signed on behalf of the Mission Band.

MRS. H. W. MORGAN,
President.

Most Expert Rifle Shots

Recent Class at School of Musketry the Most Efficient

OTTAWA, Oct. 1.—The Minister of Militia this week inspected the school of Musketry at Rockcliffe ranges. He was accompanied by Lieut.-Col. Winter. Sir Sam met each of the officials attending the school and made a short adress on the importance of efficient musketry work.

This is the most efficient class that has ever been at the school of Musketry in this country. That is, they are, as a whole, the most expert rifle shots. Their records on an average, made recently at the ranges, exceed any records made at schools of musketry even at Hythe, Eng., after which the school at Rockcliffe is modeled. Lieut.-Col. R. A. Helmer is in command of the school.

A Peterborough boy who attended this school is Lieut. Wilfred Huyrke, eldest son of Judge Huycke, who will shortly go overseas with the draft from the 59th Battalion.

DR. JAS. L. HUGHES ADDRESSES TEACHERS

In Regard to Physical Drill in the Schools and Also the Penny Bank System

At a recent gathering of the Public school teachers and some members of the Board of Education, Dr. Jas. L. Hughes of Toronto was present and addressed the assembly in regard to the Strathcona Fund for encouraging physical drill and instruction in Canadian schools. The Strathcona Fund supplies grants to places where the schools measure up to the requirements. While Peterborough has never received the grant, quite a number of the teachers have taken the Strathcona course and the pupils are receiving physical instruction. Dr. Hughes was surprised at the advantages Peterborough schools possessed in these lines, and stated that this city compared favourably with any place outside of Toronto. Peterborough would hereafter be eligible for the grant.

Dr. Hughes also spoke on the penny bank system, explaining the whole scheme in an interesting manner.

THE GREAT WORK OF KITCHENER'S NEW ARMY

British Headquarters, Sept. 30.—Now, after the first rush is over, there is time to tell the story of one of the greatest achievements gained by British troops in this war. There were many battalions of new army men among those who led the attack, including some Scottish regiments, who had a full share in the horrors of the first assault. Many were recruits in Kitchener's army, who had hardly arrived in Flanders, but they were not the less keen because of that.

These splendid boys listened through the night on Friday to the intense bombardment which preceded the assault and which in itself was a tremendous test on the nerves. But at 6.30 a.m. Saturday when the company officer gave the word the battalions leaped out of their trenches and ran toward the enemy's lines with a wild hurrah.

Loos the Objective.

Their point of attack was the village of Loos, three and a half miles away. They reached the enemy's lines of trenches without sustaining many casualties, and found the first two lines of barbed wire effectively broken down by the bombardment, but the third line was uncut. It was of very strong wire, with great barbs, and had to be cut by the men themselves.

The first two trenches were carried with a rush at the point of the bayonet, a large number of Germans being killed, but the uncut wires which caused the first check proved a formidable obstacle.

Fierce Street Fighting.

At 8 o'clock those who had not fallen reached the outskirts of Loos. For nearly two hours there was street fighting of a terrible character, in which many battalions were mixed up and many officers were killed or wounded.

The battle was made up of the individual combats of small groups fighting from house to house and of seperate encounters in rooms and cellars. Although the town had been severely damaged by shell fire and the church was in ruins, no fire had broken out. The shells of houses still stood. They were crammed with German troops, who used the cellars as trenches from which to fire upon our men through apertures in the street, and also fired through windows and doorways and from behind the shelter of walls. Some had machine guns in the garrets.

Resisted to the Death.

Here and there small parties of Germans defended themselves with the courage of desperation and would last man.

Others used cunning rather than courageous methods of fighting. The great mass of them were undoubtedly surprised and demoralized by the rapidity and sweeping strength of our attack, and by their wholesale surrenders we took large numbers of prisoners. Men of this class after the first resistance at rifle range or with first resistance at rifle fire or with machine guns seemed to have no fight.

One Kiltie to Thirty German.

In one house entered by a kiltie signaller, a tiny fellow with a stout heart, thirty Germans, including one officer, surrendered after he had shot down three who tried to kill him.

Yet resistance was prolonged in some parts of the village. There were many cellars from which the rapid fire caused heavy losses to the besiegers. They were silenced by bombing parties, who flung hand-grenades into the subterranean forts from the heads of stairways. Loos cellars are still full of dead.

German Officer Caught.

In one of the cellars an amazing incident happened which revealed the highest form of courage and self-sacrifice in our enemy. The Colonel of a British Battalion, which will be given a high place in history for this day's work, came into Loos after his men had already gone forward to Hill 70. With signallers and other men he established quarters in a house practically untouched by shell fire.

At this time there was very little shelling, the artillery officers on either side being afraid of killing their own men. The house seemed fairly safe for the purpose of a temporary signal station. But shortly after the Colonel's arrival heavy shells began to fall very close by. The German guns were obviously aiming directly at this building. The Colonel searched the cellar. Three Germans were found, but it was only after he had been in the house thirty minutes that in a deeper cellar, which had not been seen before, a German officer was discovered actually telephoning to his own batteries and directing their fire.

Suspecting that the British Colonel and his companions were important officers, directing general operations, the German had caused shells to fall upon the house, knowing that a lucky shot would mean his own death as well as theirs. In any case he was certain to die, and he died bravely, having made the supreme sacrifice of courage.

100 Guns in Cemetery.

Meanwhile some battalions who had fought their way through Loos were now struggling ahead to gain Hill 70, nearly a mile further on. The road was swept with shrapnel and machine gun fire. On the farther ridge is the village of Cite St. Auguste, which was held by the enemy, and overlooked our advancing troops.

But our men attacked it desperately, forcing their way against the deadly fire and through the entanglements bit by bit.

Spectre Bars Way.

One of the extraordinary incidents which took place in the smoke-laden mist occurred when a company of "kitties," advancing at the charge, came face to face with a very tall German who, although stone dead with a bullet through his brain, stood erect in the path. His face was blackened with the grime of battle. The body was wedged in the low trench. With one accord the charging soldiers parted and swept to each side as though a spectre barr of the way.

They ran, shouting hoarsely, faced by the fire of an enormous number of machine guns. From every part of the village there came the deadly rattle of these weapons, pouring out their stream of lead. There were machine guns in the windows of many houses, on the tops of mine cranes as high as thirty feet and in trenches dug across the streets. In one cemetery southwest of the town, which machine guns. So it was a formidable strength."

British Men are Superior.

But once more it was proved that in personal combat, when explosive and heavy artillery are no longer the chief agents of battle and when human quality alone counts, our men are the masters of the enemy. These battalions could hardly be checked after their first dash through the barbed-wire. Over the dead and wounded bodies of their comrades the men went on, bayoneting and shooting the enemy with fierce elan.

From the windows and cottages and higher ground and from entrenchments in the vicinity there was an incessant storm of fire which raked their approach. Nevertheless, the British held on, and, finding a kind of ridge, dug deeper in so that they had useful protection.

The first men to reach Hill 70 arrived about 10 o'clock and clung to the position at all costs and with heroic endurance until 11 at night, when they were relieved by other troops who carried on the struggle next day.

At dawn on Saturday another attack was in progress farther to the north towards Hulluch. It was another triumph for our new army men, who formed a good proportion of the troops. The struggle here was fierce and formidable. The men had to advance under a terrible fire.

Heavy German Losses.

After the first assault on the enemy's trenches, which were carried swiftly, British machine guns in considerable number were brought forward rapidly. The Germans lost very heavily, the bayonet finishing the work of the bullet.

Then the men stormed on three miles or more until they reached the outskirts of Hulluch, which bristled with enemy's machine guns at all points. Hand-to-hand fighting took place. The Germans yielded ground whenever the British Tommies could come within reach, but the latter were swept back again and again by a tempest of bullets.

Two Days' Struggle.

The struggle continued in this direction for two whole days. Some of the men engaged in the first part of the operations are enjoying a rest to-day. The village behind the fighting lines through which I passed were thronged by tall, mud-caked lads, who had fought one of the hardest encounters which has ever given a victory to British arms. They had seen so many of their comrades fall and had trampled through the shambles of the battlefields, but they look proud and exultant because they have led the great assault and broken the German lines.

During part of the day Sir John French rode about the villages, and whenever he met a group of these men he gave them his personal thanks for the gallant work they had done.

His exhibit was Barry Bros' varnish, and as there were from five to six thousand contestants from all over the world, he is to be congratulated on being one of the very few Canadian window dressers to get a prize.

THE WORLD OF SPORT

McGRAW'S SPIRIT IS BROKEN BY DEFEAT

John McGraw looms up just now as a pathetic figure in baseball; not a figure that really demands sympathy or wants it, but a figure that inspires it just the same.

The wonderful baseball machine that McGraw used up the best years of his life developing is broken; some of the old cogs are gone and others must go. To figure again as a pennant contender McGraw must build up a new machine—a task of years, and one into which he cannot enter with the enthusiasm and energy that characterized his more youthful years.

The old fighting spirit of the Giant leader is gone. Rarely is he seen on the coaching lines these days. Rarely does he rush on to a ball field and verbally battle the umpires over decisions as he did in the bygone days. The old fire has died out; McGraw seems engrossed in his reveries of other days—of glorious days when he and his team ruled supreme in the old league.

Never Popular Leader.

McGraw never was popular with the fans outside of New York and never was extremely popular with those in his home town. But just the same, McGraw, because of what he accomplished year after year with a mediocre looking baseball outfit, was admired and lauded throughout the length and breadth of the land. He was a real baseball leader, and one of the most spectacular figures that ever loomed along the baseball horizon.

No man ever has been more genuinely hated than John McGraw—and no one ever has been more genuinely loved.

On the ball field McGraw always has appealed to fandom as the superlative of rowdy; off the ball field he is a person entirely different. And to John McGraw's credit it shall be said that those who hate him are those who know him only as a baseball manager; that those who love him are those who know him intimately.

Failure in 1914 Hurts.

The failure of the Giants to win the 1914 pennant hit McGraw a harder wallop than he had ever before received in his long diamond career. He had won three pennants in a row. His ambition was to achieve what no other manager ever had achieved—the winning of four straight. Right up to the last six weeks of the 1914 campaign it seemed a certainty for him. True, the Braves were shooting upward with amazing speed, but it seemed they couldn't hold the pace—that they must drop back.

But the Braves didn't. They caught the Giants, went beyond, and held the lead until the finish line was crossed—and McGraw was a broken-hearted man.

Recovering from his disappointment in 1914, the Giant leader led his team into the 1915 fight, hopeful, confident. But then—and only then—did he discover that disintegration had set in. The machine no longer moved forward with merciless precision against the opposition. It moved haltingly, hesitatingly—and often it backed up.

Defeats Crush Spirit.

During the first two months of the campaign McGraw threw his whole soul and body into an effort to steady his wabbly outfit. He drove them, cajoled them. He made a dozen shifts in the arrangement of the cogs in the machine—but to no avail. The machine's rhythm and power were gone.

And then McGraw, tired and worn and embittered, with the old fire burned out, with the old spirit deadened, assigned himself to bench duty. For him it was useless to battle longer. He still could maintain, still direct, still enthuse his men—but he couldn't do the fielding for his fielders nor the batting for his club.

McGraw is nearing his forty-second birthday. That's not old as managers go, but it's rather old for a man who must start anew in his baseball life—the tearing to pieces of an old machine and the long, tedious task of building a new one.

Chances Against Mac in 1916.

McGraw may issue forth with a smashing good team in 1916—but the chances are against it. The old standbys of other years are about through. He will have but few good veterans in 1916 to form the nucleus of a great team.

The Giants—the peerless Giants—of other days are through, and no one knows it better or experiences a more stabbing pain over it than John McGraw—the scrappiest, most maligned, yet withal the greatest baseball manager of this or any other decade.

JOHNNY EVERS PICKS PHILLIES TO DOWN RED SOX FOR TITLE

BOSTON, Sept. 30.—Johnny Evers, who has quite a reputation for picking winners in baseball, gives it as his opinion that the Phillies will beat the Red Sox.

Evers, like most others who share this opinion, believes that Alexander alone can win the title of world champion for his team. This is what Evers says:

"The greatest pitcher in baseball today will carry the burden for the National League. And he'll hold up his end. Player against player, the Phillies may not compare with the Red Sox. But in a world series it isn't the player against player. It is a team against a team, biggest advantage between pitcher and pitcher.

"American Leaguers are overlooking the most important angle in this coming world series. It is the home of the Phillies—the short right and left-field fences. That will give the Phillies a big advantage when playing on their grounds, for the Boston pitchers will try to keep them from hitting over the fence, and the result will be that they will be wild."

Centrefielder Tris Speaker — Of the Boston Red Sox, contenders for the Worlds' Championship in the series soon to be played with Philadelphia.

TONEY AT LAST LIVES UP TO EARLY PROMISE.

Fred Toney, for six years the greatest "going to be a wonder" pitcher in baseball, has finally arrived. After being battered from pillar to post because he never filled that "going to be" dope, he is not only winning for the Cincinnati Reds, but getting to be a shut-out specialist.

Toney began to be a wonder in 1909 when, with Winchester, Ky., he struck out nineteen of twenty-one batters who faced him in a seven inning no-hit game. He was secured by the Cubs, and in the next four years was sent to Louisville and recalled by Chicago so often he became a close friend of all the conductors operating between the two cities.

In 1914 Charley Murphy gave Roger Bresnahan $10,000 to sign a contract and said Roger would earn the bonus if he didn't do anything except make a pitcher out of Toney. Roger worked hard and finally when he became Cub manager this year he gave up all hope and sold the pitcher to the Reds.

Toney entered the majors without the sign of a curved ball and without any idea of how to pitch overhand. Pitchers who have been able to get by pitching underhand all the time have been mighty scarce.

"Did you see the pleased expression on Mrs. Blank's face when I told her she looked no older than her daughter?" asked Mrs. Brown after the reception. "No," said Mrs. Jones, "I was looking at the expression on her daughter's face."—Exchange.

Better Pay For The Canadians in England

LONDON, Oct. 1.—The British Minister of Munitions is endeavoring to remove the undoubted hardship of some munition workers brought from Canada. It is recognized that $2.00 daily seems a very mean wage to skilled Canadian workers, especially when no overtime work is obtained with its higher scale of payment. The Munition Department policy is to avoid overtime unless it is pressingly needed on the ground of its comparative wastefulness, but Canadian workers allege the prospect of overtime was part of the inducement by which Mr. Barnes, M. P., prevailed on 1,710 Canadian workers to come to England. The authorities are endeavoring to meet the case by arrangements for allowance for married men who now get the wage of only $2.00 daily.

Agent-General Pelletier, on behalf of the Quebec Government, has secured passports for French-Canadians workers among the unemployed, enabling them to proceed to France to secure munition work there.

Sir Alfred Mond, Free Trader in the Commons, will raise the question of preference for Canadian and other Dominion motor cars and musical instruments under the new British import tariff. He asks the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether the Government has decided to establish a preferential tariff for these goods. The Government is not expected to make any commitment one way or the other at the present stage.

long way toward procuring the results desired. With Lieut. Perks was a competent staff of recruiting sergeants and men of other ranks: Sergeants Conway, Wilson, Corporal Isnor, Privates Hill-on and Street, all of whom are Halifax men. They all leave this morning for Sussex to rejoin the 64th Battalion. Lieut. Perks was formerly senior accountant at the Bank of Montreal, Halifax.

Must Recruit Troops.

Ottawa, Ont., Sept. 30.—Countless telegrams have been received by the Militia Department during the last few days from towns, villages, and even rural centres, asking that troops be billeted during the winter in their midst. General Hughes states that the allocation of all troops at present recruited and mobilized throughout the Dominion has already been arranged for as announced some days ago. Battalions in some cases have been divided up in order that all localities in which recruiting has been considerable will have an opportunity to billet a certain number.

So far as other centres are concerned it is anticipated that recruiting will be encouraged in the throughout the winter. Billeting will be permitted in the case of towns and villages under a thousand population who raise a minimum of 20 men; in the case of villages over 1,000, a minimum of 50; towns of 4,000 a minimum of 100, and towns of over 4,000 a minimum of 250, of a half company.

In other words, those centres who desire men must undertake to raise men. "The Lord helps those who help themselves," remarked General Hughes in explanation this morning.

Pte. Church of the local over-seas detachment, has four brothers in the ranks of the British army.

Yesterday was a red letter day with the Peterborough soldiers—the day on which no soldier would dream of missing parade—pay day.

A letter received by Mrs. Leal, Aylmer street, from her son, Pte. Harold Leal, now in France with the 21st Battalion, says that just before they left England he won the first prize ten shillings, in a rifle loading competition, for loading and unloading the most in a minute. Pte. Leal's record was 30 cartridges. Pte Leal's brother, Pte. Frank Leal, has been taking a course in bomb throwing.

As an indication of the fact that the Canadian born young men are beginning to realize their responsibilities in connection with the war, it may be mentioned that of the last nineteen recruits passed by the doctors here, fifteen were born in Canada, while out of the last 40 accepted, 28 were native born.

Capt R. P. Watt, Capt. J. R. Munro, and Sergt. Major T. Miller of the local detachment are on recruiting duty at the Millbrook Fair this afternoon. Major R. T. Hounsell and Lieut. Stewart are on duty at the Armouries this afternoon.

Stock Markets

MARKET OPINIONS OF NEW YORK HOUSES

Post and Flagg: The trading element generally argues that with the successful flotation of the Anglo-French loan and the more favourable war developments, all the good news that can reasonably be expected for the time being is known and are consequently selling stocks. So far these offerings have been more than offset by new outside buying. Just how long this process can continue is anybody's guess, but it has certainly reached a point where caution should be observed.

Jenks, Gwynne & Co.—Further profit-taking, which has been considerable the past few days, may continue to exert a nervous effect on prices today. While we think values will work higher, we believe the purchasing of stocks on the setbacks and taking of profits on the strong spots seems advisable for the present.

Laidlaw & Co. It was but natural that a large speculative element should feel inclined to realize profits on the favourable news which has developed recently and in anticipation of which prices had so violently advanced. It is indeed surprising that this selling movement has not reached larger proportions in view of the extreme movements in certain quarters. It appears, however, that the unprecedently favourable underlying conditions which exist have already begun to appeal to a widening circle of people, many of whom have never speculated or invested before.

J. S. Bache & Co.: Some further advances in steel prices reported this morning. These stocks should improve, especially Eries, B. & O., C. & O., N.Y.C. and Penna. Copper stocks are a purchase.

Shearson, Hammill & Co.: Do not think the rise is over, but before we are entitled to somewhat further reaction.

E. & C. Randolph.—Specialties will probably continue to advance, accompanied by heavy realizing elsewhere. While the sentimental effect of the "putting through" of the allied loan may have been discounted, the practical effect of its success has not been discounted, and any setback in prices is likely to be followed by advance later in recognition of that fact. We would get in a state of preparedness to sustain a setback. Think G. N. O. is not rated at its real value.

NEW YORK, Oct. 1.—Even money bets, it is said, have been made in Wall Street that the directors of the Canadian Car and Foundry Co., which has received enormous war orders from the allies, will declare the back dividend on the preferred stock at the forthcoming meeting.

It is also assumed in various quarters that the company will declare a dividend on the common stock. The shares were in better demand yesterday than for some time, common advancing 4 and preferred 2.

New York, Oct. 1. —Algoma Steel Company has once more invaded the American rail market and carried away an order for 17,000 tons of rails for the Pere Marquette Railroad. This road had only been in the market for about a week.

What the New York Papers Are Saying.

Sun.—There can be no doubt that the successful foreign loan negotiations is a sustaining factor in the stock market.

Wall Street Journal.—A decline in stocks which would strengthen the technical position would be good from every point of view.

Financial American.— The speculative element on the floor of the Stock Exchange is inclined to take the bear side on reports as to opening of the Dardanelles.

TWO TRADERS IN BALDWIN

The craze for war stocks and the nervousness which usually attacks the buyer after he buys into Bethlehem Steel, Baldwin or Westinghouse, brings some unusual developments to light in the course of the day's business. There is a trader who bought Baldwin some weeks ago at 61 and sold out at 65½ a few days later, convinced that the tip was not going to make good. Tuesday in the excitement of a boiling market he got in again with 100 shares at 125, which goes to show once more that a stock can look cheaper for above par than far below it, conditions not being the same in both cases. The story was also told in the interest of a trader who when [illegible] Baldwin was dear at 85, sold short of 100 shares. A stop-loss order at 95 for the stock was caught on Monday, and immediately afterward the trader said things about his luck when the quotation dropped back to 92½. He changed his opinion shortly afterwards when the upward trend was resumed and Baldwin passed beyond 110. This short sales congratulated himself on his small loss yesterday with Baldwin leaping about between 125 and 150.

CENTRAL BUYING RAILS

The New York Central has placed orders for 120,000 tons of steel rails for 1916 delivery. The normal supply used on the Central lines annually is 150,000 tons, and officials referred yesterday to the big order as only a "preliminary" one. This is the biggest order placed by any railroad so far for next year's use. It indicates anxiety on the part of a big railroad over the steel situation. "We want to give the manufacturers a chance, and therefore ordered much earlier than usual," said an official of the Central. Last year, he pointed out, the Central has ordered rails in small lots, but the greater confidence in the future warranted a wholesale order now. Business is good on the Central lines, and the Operating Department is getting a good share of the attention of the Directors. The Central, it appears does not want to be caught late in the year in a competitive scramble for steel with munition manufacturers.

Tricks of Number Nine

There are some curious facts and fancies connected with numbers. The number 9 is, perhaps, the first as regards such experiments, although number 7 is more prominent in literature and history. When you once use it you can't get rid of it. It will turn up again, no matter what you do to put it "down and out."

All through the multiplication table the product of 9 come to 9. No matter what you multiply with or how many times you repeat or change the figures the result is always the same.

For instance, twice 9 equals 18; add 8 and 1, and you have nine. Three times 9 equals 27, 2 and 7 make 9 again. Go on until you try eleven times 9 equal 99. This seems to be an exception. But add the digits—9 and 9 make 18; and again, 1 and 8 make 9. Go on an indeterminable extent and the thing continues. Take any number at random. For example, 450 times 9 equals 4,050, and the digits, added, make 9 once more. Take 6,450 times 9, equals 58,050, and again you have 5 and 4.

Take any row of figures, reverse the order, and subtract the less from the greater the difference will certainly be always 9 or a multiple of 9. For example, 5,071 minus 1,705, equals 3,366. Add these digits and you have 18, and 1 and 8 make the familiar 9.

You have the same result, no matter how you raise the numbers by squares and cubes.

One more way is given by which number 9 shows its strange powers. Write down any number you please, add its digits, and then subtract the sum of said digits from the original number. No matter what numbers you start with, the sum of the digits in the answer will be 9.

Try these experiments, and you will be delighted with the exact manner in which they prove the statement. Some quaint puzzles have been made based on these fixed principles.

WHOLE ASPECT OF THE WAR CHANGED IN LAST FIVE DAYS

LONDON, Friday, Oct. 1. The Chronicle's military correspondent writes: "These last five days have changed the whole aspect of absolute and calculable certainty. They have shown that mastery in the west now a degree that whenever and whatever belongs definitely to the allies in such point the hammer stroke is now delivered it will go crashing through the serried lines of fortifications upon which the enemy has spent twelve months of anxious attention and scientific ingenuity and upon the security of which all his hopes, not of victory but of an honourable peace, as he calls it, are entirely based. Each new stroke will bring the inevitable end nearer. After a time it will cease to be a matter of chipping deeply at the surface. Suddenly a vital spot will be touched. This may happen any day, and then will come a sudden shrinking of the German line and the abandonment of a large part, perhaps all, of the occupied territory. Such a point, for example, is the railway junction near Grand Pre, north of the Argonne, upon which the French are directing their efforts from Massiges. The moment that railway is reached the position of the Crown Prince in the Argonne woods will become threatened and the long and costly German effort to turn the Meuse heights from the rear will have been brought to nothing. The abandonment of the Argonne will mean in the long run a general German retirement along the whole line, probably to the line of the Sambre and the Meuse. Similarly, the British capture of La Bassee and Lens would be followed by a shrinkage of the whole German line before Lille. The tale of the booty, gratifying as it is, is nothing like so enheartening as the clear proof that not merely the clearing of France and Belgium, but the definite defeat of the enemy, is within our power. That is the lesson of the last five days' offensive."

OUR LOSSES LIGHT IN THE WEST

ALLIES CASUALTIES IN WEST AVERAGED ONLY ELEVEN PER CENT.

Officers Expected Losses Would Be Three Times as Great But the Magnificent Preparation Made by the Allied Artillery Kept the Loss Close---Another Heavy Smash is Expected.

PARIS, Oct. 2.—Sharp sudden strokes, by which the Allies are steadily improving their positions both in the Artois and Champagne regions, have temporarily replaced the battering ram tactics of the first two days marking the beginning of the great offensive movement.

But despatches received here to-day indicates that another heavy smash against the German lines will not be long postponed. All along the Anglo-French front the artillery is becoming increasingly active.

From all sides come stories showing that the Allies' losses have been expected to lose about thirty-three per cent. of their men in killed and expected to lose about thirty-three per cen of their men in killed and wounded and missing. As a matter of fact the casualties averaged only about eleven per cent. This was due largely to the magnificent artillery preparation, though countless ordinary slight wounds in the head were prevented by the new steel helmets worn by the French soldiers.

A corporal, who was wounded in the heel, told me that in many places the German trenches were literally levelled by the pounding of the French guns, and the German occupants were automatically buried.

"We charged across a field that was a chaos of loose mud, kinks of shattered barbed wire, shreds of German uniforms, battered headgear, knapsacks, shoes, tin cups and mutilated dead," he said.

A wounded machine gun operator said he and his gun-mates carried their guns on their backs two and a half miles, stopping occasionally to "take off a round for the Boches."

"The new guns are beauts," he said. "They fire twice as rapidly as the old, and give you no trouble. The Germans melt away before them."

BULGARIA SAID TO HAVE LINED UP WITH THE ENEMY

This is the Belief in London To-day---Bulgarian Colony in Paris Sends a Protest to the Czar of Bulgaria---"Russia is Our Liberator, Britain Our Protector and France Our Very Good Friend" They State in Message.

PARIS, Oct. 2.—War experts say the present big battle on the Western front will last two weeks.

NEW YORK, Oct. 2.—Cabled from Europe intimate that the Allies have landed a huge army in Greece to direct Bulgaria's move.

ATHENS, Oct. 2.—Turkish forts were heavily bombarded by warships to-day. A magazine was blown up at Acha Baba.

PARIS, Oct. 2.—Reports here state that three German generals instead of two have been dismissed because of the defeats on the Western front.

AMSTERDAM, Oct. 2.—Thirty-eight train loads of German troops, and heavy guns passed through Belgium as reinforcements on the Western front. The Germans are strengthening the fortifications at Namur and Liege.

LONDON, Oct. 2.—It is fully expected now that Bulgaria has joined the Germanic Allies.

PARIS, Oct. 2.—German counter-attacks on the British and French positions are weakening. All ground is firmly held by the Allies. The French have taken more territory and prisoners at Givenchy wood.

PETROGRAD, Oct. 2.—The Russians are forcing the Germans back on the Dvinsk-Vilna line.

PARIS, Oct. 2.—The Prince of Wales' automobile and chauffeur were destroyed during the battle of Loos, but the Prince escaped.

AMSTERDAM, Oct. 2.—Travellers report that the Allies' successes have alarmed Berlin immensely.

PARIS, Oct. 2.—The Bulgarian colony in Paris and the vicinity to-day sent ttelegram to the Czar declaring themselves ready to die for Bulgaria, but espressing the hope that the Czar would take no aggressive action toward the Allies. "Russia is our liberator, Britain our protector, and France our good friend," read the telegram. "Let us not engage in a fratricidal war."

Neighbours of General Joffre Are Grieved At Their Hero

RIVESALTES, Sept. 15.—This town, that gave birth to the Commander in Chief of the French armies, is pouting. The blinds of Joffre's house have been closed more than a year, and the patient woodpecker has had time to pierce them in so many places they look as if a machine gun had been operating there. The villagers no longer point out the place to strangers. All because Joffre has not taken the time to go home to receive the address of felicitation of his neighbors and the present bought for him by popular subscription. The General in Chief is for the moment black listed and will have to exercise some of his finest strategy after the war to lift the penalty of his neglect.

The Far-Flung Battle Line.

The character of the offensive which Great Britain and her allies are disclosing against Germany, Austria-Hungary and Turkey is slowly becoming of a character to almost stagger the imagination. This all-devouring, all-encompassing war surpasses anything ever known while the battle line on the western front was five hundred miles long and that on the eastern front a thousand, but it now appears operations are in progress on a far larger scale. Thus in Mesopotamia, it is understood a very considerable British expedition has defeated the Turk and is rapidly marching through Asia Minor and Bagdad, the purpose being to sweep northwestward toward Constantinople. Another movement attacking Constantinople, in addition to that in progress in the Gallipoli Peninsula, is also reported to be under way. There is also confirmation of the forwarding of considerable reinforcements from France and England to Serbia landing near Salonica, which will enable it to see speedy service, if the reported purpose of Bulgaria to attack Serbia within fifteen days is carried out. Thus it will be seen that the Allies are more and more taking the offensive and that a ring of armies is gradually in progress of formation around the entire territory of the Teutonic allies.

It's a God-send To Humanity is what a leading physician says of Dr Jackson's Roman Meal. Properly cooked into porridge according to directions on package without stirring after first making it is a delight to humanity. Use a double boiler or set boiler in basin of boiling water and use one cup meal to two cups water. Cook for half an hour. It is very nutritious, prevents indigestion and relieves constipation or "money back." Ask your doctor. At grocers. 10 and 25 cents.

For Prisoners of War in Germany.

1. Letters (letters should be left open), postcards and postal parcels should be addressed as follows.
(1) Rank, initials, name.
(2) Regiment, or other unit.
(3) British (or Canadian, French, Belgian, or Russian) prisoner of war.
(4) Place of interment.
(5) Germany.

Place of interment should be stated always if possible, and parcels cannot be accepted unless place of interment is stated. All addresses must be in ink.

2. Communications should be limited to private and family news and to necessary business communications, and should not be sent too frequently.

No references to the naval, military or political situation or to naval or military movements and organizations are allowed. Letters or postcards containing such references will not be delivered.

Friends of prisoners of war are advised to send postcards in preference to letters, as postcards are less likely to be delayed. If letters are sent, they should not exceed in length two sides of a sheet of notepaper, and should contain nothing but the sheet of notepaper. On no account should the writing be crossed.

4. Letters cannot for the present be accepted for registration.

5. Postage need not be paid either on letters or parcels addressed to prisoners of war.

6. No letters should be enclosed in parcels, and newspapers must not on any account, be sent. So far as is known there is no restriction on the contents of parcels. Tobacco may be sent and will be admitted duty free, but foodstuffs of a perishable character should not be sent. Parcels should not exceed 11 lbs. in weight.

7. Remittances can be made by money order to prisoners of war. Instructions as to how to proceed can be obtained from Postmasters or Accounting Post Offices. The transmission of coin, either in letters or parcels, is expressly prohibited. Postal notes and bank notes should not be sent.

It must be understood that no guarantee of the delivery of either parcels or letters can be given and that the Post Office accepts no responsibility. In any case, considerable delay may take place and failure to receive acknowledgment should not necessarily be taken as an indication that letters and parcels sent have not been delivered.

8. So far as is known, prisoners of war in Germany are allowed to write letters or postcards from time to time, but they may not always have facilities for doing so, and the fact that no communication is received from them need not give rise to anxiety.

$250,000 CATTLE LOSS.

Bruised and Torn Carcasses Due to Carelessness in Handling.

That shippers to the Toronto stock yards last year suffered a loss of $250,000 due to the careless handling of cattle is shown in the current issue of the Humane Pleader, a quarterly magazine published by the Toronto Humane Society. During 1914 there were shipped to the Union Stockyards alone 289,125 cattle, 416,586 hogs, and 44,928 calves. It is shown that the cattle were bruised to the extent of from 3 to 40 pounds per head, the average being about 10 pounds. The number of cattle killed for food was approximately 175,000. The wastage on these because of the bruising amounts to $175,000.

TO CHECK A COLD.

It is easy to check a cold if you begin in time. Frequent doses of Dr Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine keep the cough loose, allay the inflammation and so prevent it proceeding to the bronchial tubes and lungs. Mrs. A. M. Moore, Shortreed P. The Original Encyclopedia.

The first real encyclopedia was Pliny's "Natural History." This work was an extensive one, numbering some thirty-seven volumes and dealing with all the then known facts of the world. Pliny, who died A. D. 79, collected the data for his work in his leisure intervals while engaged in public affairs. The "Natural History" was for its time an amazing production, treated of some 20,000 facts and was of very high authority throughout the entire middle ages. Forty-three editions of the work were printed before the year 1530, and no scholar's library was considered complete without it.—New York American.

A Purist.

Most persons believe Stevenson's verses for children may, without correction or amendment, safely be placed in the hands of the impressionable youngster without corrupting either his morals or his English. But there are some who think otherwise, says an exchange.

Little Alice's mother, having taught the child to say, "Time to rise," in which "the birdie with a yellow bill" figures, the child announced that she meant to recite it to her teacher.

"Well, and what did Miss Prim say to 'the birdie with a yellow bill?'" asked Alice's mother when the little girl returned from school.

"She says it is quite a pretty thought. But this is the way she makes me say it now, mamma:

"A birdie with a yellow bill
Hopped upon the window sill,
Cocked his shining eyes and said,
'Are you not ashamed, you sleepy-head?'"

"But that was not the way the birdie said it, Alice," the mother remonstrated.

"No, mamma; I know. But teacher says it isn't good English to say, 'Ain't you 'shamed, you sleepy-head?'

Too Serious.

"Aren't you going to include Mr. Peddent in your traveling party?"

"No," answered the indolent person. "He is one of those people whose idea of a good time is to try to learn the guide book by heart."—Washington Star.

An Unappreciative Ear.

"What did you think of the grand opera?"

"Well," answered Mr. Cumrox, "some of the incidents of the plot were extremely harrowing, and I must say the leading lady's shrieks were most natural."—Washington Star.

An Incontestable Fact.

"Do you see that man yonder? I know for a fact he is leading a double life."

"How do you know?"

"Because I saw him doing it. He is a professional contortionist."—Baltimore American.

Our Serial Story Page

We made a careful and extensive search of the station, the platform and even the surrounding neighborhood, but it was quite evident that they had not left the train. Here was a pretty pass! Britton, however, had the rather preposterous idea that there might be another train a little later on. It did not seem at all likely, but we made inquiries of the station agent. To my surprise—and to Britton's infernal British delight—there was a fast train, with connections from the north, arriving in half an hour. It was, however, late, owing to the storm.

Just ten minutes before 8 the obliging guard came in and roused us from a mild sleep.

"The train is coming, mein herr."

"Thank goodness!"

"But I neglected to mention that it is an express and never stops here."

My right hand was still in a bandage, but it was so nearly healed that I could have used it without discomfort—note my ability to drive a motorcar—and it was with the greatest difficulty that I restrained a mad impulse to strike that guard full upon the nose, from which the raindrops coursed in an interrupted descent from the visor of his cap.

The shrill, childish whistle of the locomotive reached us at that instant. A look of wonder sprang into the eyes of the guard.

"It—it is going to stop, mein herr!" he cried. "It has never stopped before!" He rushed out upon the platform in a great state of agitation, and we trailed along behind him, even more excited than he.

A conductor stepped down from the last coach but one and prepared to assist a passenger to alight. I hastened up to him.

"Permit me," I said, elbowing him aside.

A portly lady squeezed through the vestibule and felt her way carefully down the steps. Behind her was a smallish, bewhiskered man, trying to raise an umbrella inside the narrow corridor, a perfectly impossible feat.

She came down into my arms with the limpness of one who is accustomed to such attentions, and then wheedled instantly upon the futile individual on the steps above.

"Quick! My hat! Heaven preserve us, how it rains!" she cried in a deep, wheezy voice and—in German.

"Moth"— I began insinuatingly, but the sacred word died unfinished on my lips. The next instant I was scurrying down the platform to where I saw Britton standing.

"Have you seen them?" I shouted wildly.

"No, sir. Not a sign, sir. Ah, see!" He pointed excitedly down the platform.

"No!" I rasped out. "By no possible stretch of the imagination can that be Mrs. Titus. Come, we must ask the conductor. That woman? Good Lord, Britton, she waddles!"

The large lady and the smallish man passed us on the way to shelter, the latter holding an umbrella over her hat with one hand and lugging a heavy hamper in the other. They were both exclaiming in German. The station guard and the conductor were bowing and scraping in their wake, both carrying boxes and bundles.

No one else had descended from the train. I grabbed the conductor by the arm.

"Any one else getting off here?" I demanded in English and at once repeated it in German.

He shook himself loose, dropped the bags in the shelter of the station house, doffed his cap to the imperious barks of his late passengers, and scuttled back to the car. A moment later the train was under way.

"Can you not see for yourself?" he shouted from the steps as he passed me by.

Once more I swooped down upon the guard. He was stuffing the large German lady into a small, lopsided carriage, the driver of which was taking off his cap and putting it on again after the manner of a mechanical toy.

"Go away," hissed the guard angrily. "This is the mayor and the mayoress. Stand aside! Can't you see?"

"When does the next train get in?" I asked for the third time. He was still bowing after the departing hack.

"Ach, Gott!" he gasped. Collecting his thoughts, he said: "There is no train until 9 o'clock in the morning. Nine, mein herr."

"Ach, Gott!" groaned I. "Are you sure?"

"Jah! You can go home now and go to bed, sir. There will be no train until 9, and I will not be on duty then. Good night."

"I dare say we'd better be starting home, sir," said Britton timidly. "Something 'as gone wrong with the plans, I fear. They did not come, sir."

"Do you think I am blind?" I roared.

"Not at all, sir," he said in haste, taking a step or two backward.

By the time we succeeded in starting the engine after cranking for nearly half an hour I was so consumed by wrath over the scurvy trick Mrs. Titus had played upon us that I swore she should not enter my castle if I could prevent it. Moreover, I would take fiendish delight in dumping her confounded luggage into the Danube. We then had trouble with the lamps. At last we were off, Britton at the wheel. I shall not describe that diabolical trip home. It is only necessary to say that we first lost our way and went ten or twelve kilometers in the wrong direction; then we had a blowout and no quick detachable rim. Subsequently something went wrong with the mud caked machinery, and my unfortunate valet had to lie on his back in a puddle for half an hour. Eventually we pushed into the garage with our trembling car and quarreled manfully with the men who had to wash her.

"Good heavens, Britton!" I exclaimed suddenly.

He looked at me in astonishment. I admit that the ejaculation must have sounded weak and effeminate to him after what had gone before.

"What is it, sir?" he asked, at once resuming his status as a servant after a splendid hiatus of five hours or more in which he had enjoyed all of the by-products of equality.

"Poopendyke!" I exclaimed, aghast. "I have just thought of him. The poor devil has been waiting for us three miles up the river since midnight! What do you think of that!"

"No such luck, sir," said he grumpily.

"Luck! You heartless rascal! What do you mean by that?"

"I beg pardon, sir. I mean to say he could sit in the boat'ouse and twiddle 'is thumbs at the elements, sir. Trust Mr. Poopendyke to keep out of the rain."

"In any event he is still waiting there for us, wet or dry, he and the two big Schmicks." I took a moment for thought. "We must telephone to the castle and have Hawkes send Conrad out with word to them." I looked at my watch. It was twenty minutes past 7. "I suppose no one in the castle went to bed last night. Good Lord! What a scene for a farce!"

We retraced our steps to the garage, where Britton went to the telephone. I stood in the doorway of the building staring gloomily, hollow eyed at the—well, at nothing, now that I stop to think of it. The manager of the place, an amiable, jocund descendant of Lazarus, approached me.

"Quite a storm last night, Mr. Schmarck," he said, rubbing his hands on an oil rag. I gruffly agreed with him in a monosyllable. "But it is lovely today, sir. Heavenly, sir."

"Heavenly?" I gasped.

"Ah, but look at the glorious sun!" he cried, waving the oil rag in all directions at once.

The sun! Upon my word, the sun was shining fiercely. I hadn't noticed it before.

"Well, I'm—dashed!" I said, with a silly grin.

"The moon will shine tonight, Mr. Schmarck"— he began insinuatingly.

"Smart, if you please!" I snapped.

"Ah," he sighed, rolling his eyes, "it is fine to be in love."

A full minute passed before a grasp of the meaning of that quiet answer, and then I was too late. Britton had gone about his business without waiting to see whether my wrath had been turned away. I had been joy riding!

The excitement in Britton's usually imperturbable countenance as he came running up to me from the telephone closet prepared me in a way for the startling news that was to come.

"Has anything serious happened?" I cried, my heart sinking a little lower.

"I had Mr. Poopendyke himself on the wire, sir. What do you think, sir?"

A premonition! "She—she has arrived?" I demanded dully.

He nodded. "She 'as, sir. Mrs.—your mother-in-law is in your midst." The proximity of the inquisitive manager explains this extraordinary remark on the part of my valet. We both glared at the manager, and he had the delicacy to move away. "She arrived by a special train at 12 last night, sir."

I was speechless. The brilliant sunshine seemed to be turning into somber night before my eyes. Everything was going black.

"She's asleep, he says, and doesn't want to be disturbed till noon, so he says he can't say anything more just now over the telephone because he's afraid of waking 'er." (Britton drops them when excited.)

"He doesn't have to shout so loud that he can be heard on the top floor," said I, still a trifle dazed.

"She 'appens to be sleeping in your bed, sir, he says."

"In my bed? Good heavens, Britton, what's to become of me?"

"Don't take it so 'ard, sir," he made haste to say. "Blatchford 'as fixed a place for you on the couch in your study, sir. It's all very snug, sir."

"But, Britton," I said in horror, "suppose that I should have come home last night. Don't you see?"

"I daresay she 'ad the door locked, sir," he said.

"By special train," I mumbled. A light broke in upon my reviving intellect. "Why, it was the train that went through at a mile a minute while we were in the coffee house. No wonder he didn't meet her!"

"I shudder to think of wot would 'ave 'appened if we had, sir," said he, meaning no doubt to placate me. "Mr. Poopendyke says the countess 'as been up all night worrying about you, sir. She has been distracted. She wanted 'im to go out and search for you at 4 o'clock this morning, but he says he assured 'er you'd turn up all right. He says Mrs.—the elderly lady, begging your pardon, sir—thought she was doing for the best when she took a special. She wanted to save us all the trouble she could. He says she was very much distressed by our failure to 'ave some one meet her with a launch when she got here last night, sir. As it was, she didn't reach the castle until nearly 1, and she looked like a drowned rat when she got there, being her—exposed to a beastly rain storm. See wot I mean? She went to bed in a dreadful state, he says, but he thinks she'll be more pleasant before the day is over."

I burst into a fit of laughter. "Hurray!" I shouted eventually. "Well, by Jove, I don't feel half as bad as I did five minutes ago. Come, let us be off."

We started briskly down the street. My spirits were beginning to rebound. Poopendyke had said that she worried all night about me. She had been distracted! Poor little woman! Still I was glad to know that she had the grace to sit up and worry instead of going to sleep as she might have done. I was just mean enough to be happy over it.

Poopendyke met us on the town side of the river. He seemed a trifle haggard, I thought. He was not slow, on the other hand, to announce in horror struck tones that I looked like a ghost.

Appeals to Everybody.

Many people overlook the advantage of newspaper advertising. If the farmer has stock to sell, he can find buyers, if he wants to buy, he can have the sellers come to him. When anything is lost or found, when help is wanted, or a position is sought; when any article from a baby carriage to a pet fox could be exchanged to advantage, a small advertisement in the newspaper will accomplish the desired result.

Nearly everybody can use the advertising columns to advantage at some time, and every person will profit by reading the advertisements regularly.

Strong on Length.

Richard Carle engaged as cook a Swedish giantess who proved unsatisfactory. On departure she asked for a written testimonial, and Dr. Carle presented her with the following:

"To whom it may concern: I have lately had in my employ Hulda Swanson, who was engaged to cook for a family of three and do such other things as would be possible when not cooking. Under this head might come a little dusting and dishwashing and answering the doorbell. Taking all these things into account, I wish to say that Hulda is absolutely the tallest cook I ever saw."—Success Magazine.

The Poet Again.

He had long hair and a pensive look. He wrote a poem entitled "Why Do I Live?" He signed it Augustus and sent it to a magazine.

The editor wrote him as follows: "My dear Augustus, the reason why you live is because you sent the poem by mail instead of bringing it personally."—Paris Modes.

splendid little boost along the Home Health Club s by Dr. Paul Burmaster in the little magazine, "Our Tuber- cular Children," of which he is editor.

"The time and the manner in which different drugs came to be used for certain ills is to a large extent a mys- tery. No doubt man in his more primitive stage chewed everything within reach—just as a child does to- day — and observed certain results. While these results would at the pre- sent time be considered standing on very weak foundation yet most so called standard remedies were estab- lished in this manner. It must be re- membered that in the days of the medicine man which all nations had at one time or another scientific in- vestigation was extremely primitive.

There is to-day an ever-increasing number of physicians who believe that the main benefit of many drugs is purely suggestive. Dr. Woods Hutchinson, the noted writer on medical subjects, says that no drug save three will cure a disease: only rest, food, sunshine and fresh air can work that miracle. All that medicine can do, he says, is to call a halt and give nature a chance to rally her forces.

While many excellent physicians do not subscribe to so broad a statement, the fact nevertheless remains, that nowadays hygienic measures are more depended upon in the cure of disease than drugs.

A knowledge of hygiene is not the private property of the medical pro- fession and is not claimed as such. The real physician of to-day does his best work in spreading this know- ledge, and by doing so not only cures disease but prevents it.

Health education is the greatest boon given to the present generation by the medical profession, and its ef- fect upon the nation can only be fairly appreciated when its ramifica- tions upon national life are closely studied."

Hot Drinks: There is no question regarding the gustatory enjoyment of hot drinks with meals. Anyone that has ever become accustomed to it finds it hard indeed to break off the habit. The hot chocolate or cocoa habit is the hardest to overcome, but hot coffee can be used as a substitute for a time by those who have weak- ened their will power or whose ner- ves rebel so strongly as to almost drive the victim mad. The trouble is repeated, however, but perhaps in to break off the coffee habit. Again a lesser degree when the patient tries a substitute in the form of a hot, weak tea may be used and from this to hot milk the step is easy and the benefits tremendous. The many and ingen- ious excuses offered by the users of tea, coffee and chocolate or cocoa are sometimes quite laughable, but to the victim it is a serious matter.

There are, it is true, many people that use tea and coffee for many years, practically all their lives and live to extreme old age in health and comfort, but in most such cases the foundation of good health, strong nerves and long life was laid by rugged, temperate, hard working ancestors who labored in the open and if they had any drinks besides milk or water, made it themselves form the grapes they grew or from other home grown products they made a fairly whole- some brew which they drank cold.

Tea, coffee and cocoa are drugs. The two last named, inhibit in some way the process of digestion and pro- duce other marked effects upon vari- ous people. There are some that can drink two or three cups of coffee, chocolate or cocoa three times per day and still have a regular appetite and sleep like a healthy baby, but such people are the exception.

I once had a trying experience with a patient that suffered with Insomnia until she feared she would go insane. She stopped the use of tea and coffee as I requested, but without my know- ledge used coffee. When I finally learned of that and stopped it, I thought that I had removed the cause and that she would sleep, but I was sadly mistaken. I was about to admit defeat and advise a change of climate, but I happened to drop in when it was handy. I was invited to "have some" and in order to secure the truth I took and ate. I am fond of it very, but must not indulge if I want sleep. Afterwatching my patient eat sev- eral pieces while I ate two I asked her how often she made such delicious candy and she promptly replied, with a great deal of pride that she made it daily as she always wanted it fresh. The problem was solved, but I had a wilful human being and not an ani- mal to deal with and the cure was a long and hard task. It took three months in the country and a strict fast, followed by a milk diet and that by a fruit and vegetable diet before I could get the nerves back into a nor- mal condition.

I would advise anyone to undertake such a course of treatment, however, without thoroughly competent advice in regard to all of the details of the proceedure.

CRUDE THOUGHTS FROM THE EDITORIAL PEN

Go to Church.

Go to church.

It will make your wife feel so happy, goes to church. It makes him feel good to see his wife go to church it surely will make his wife feel better still to see him go to church. Next to your old mother, who perhaps is dead and gone, the best friend you have ever had is that brave little wife of yours. Remember the time you went wrong. If you ever needed a friend it was then. How quick she was to forgive. When through your blunder your money took wings she fixed up her old hat and trimmed her dress once more. Tears started to her eyes when neighbors glanced signifi- cantly.

When you were sick she cooked lit- tle dainties, sat and read to you, quot- ted bits of scripture and stroked your hot temples. Tonight, while you are asleep, she will be up with the chil- dren. Get out those old love letters and read the spirit of them. Fra- grant as lavender. To-morrow morn- ing, when the stove goes wrong and a harrassed face glances across the table be a lover once more. Praise the breakfast. Kiss her goodbye at the door. See her smile through the tears. She'll sing all day long. Per- haps a year from now you would give all you have in the world to take hold of her hand, tell her you love her and call her your old sweetheart. But, too late! She's gone forever.

Make your wife happy by going to church next Sunday. Go to church with her if possible, but go to church if you have to go to church alone. It is in the house of God that you'll find consolation. It is there that you'll be instilled with courage to fight the battle of life.

Make your wife happy.
Be happy yourself.
Go to church.

It is a great pity that a girl should ever think of marriage as a refuge, a means of support or as the main ob- ject to life. Such an attitude is bound to weaken character. A girl's ideal should not be marriage, but wo- manhood, as a man's ideals should not be marriage, but manhood. We do not talk of educating our boys to be husbands and fathers; we train them to be brave, true, pure and gentlemen, honest and active and industrious, knowing that such a man cannot fail to make a good husband and father. So it is with the girls. Train them to be earnest and independent, teach them to be self-supporting, make them accurate and responsible in money matters, as delicate and re- fined in their financial sense as they are in their modesty; in other words, train them to be womanly women, and they will make the best wives and mothers the world has ever known.

Give the young and struggling a word of encouragement now and then. You would not leave those plants in your window boxes with- out water nor refuse to open the shutters that the sunlight may fall upon them, but you would leave some human flower to suffer from want of appreciation or the sunlight of encouragement.

While human nature remains what it is, a word of appreciation will nev- er be lost on old or young and is one of the best paying investments which can be made. Some say, "I don't care whether they like it or not," but that is all nonsense for man, woman or child; we every one of us feel our heart grow warm under merited praise, and if we get a little more of it than we deserve, which rarely hap- pens in this world we try to deserve more next time.

How many buttons are missing to- day?
How many playthings are strewn in her way?
Nobody knows but mother.
How many thimbles and spools has she missed?
How many burns on each little fist?
How many bumps to be cuddled and kissed?
Nobody knows but mother.

How many stockings to darn, do you know?
How many muddy shoes all in a row?
Nobody knows but mother.
How many little torn aprons to mend?
How many hours of toil must she spend?
What is the time when her day's work shall end?
Nobody knows but mother.

How many cares does a mother's heart know?
How many joys from her mother- love flow?
Nobody knows but mother.
How many prayers by each little white bed?
How many tears for her babe has she shed?
How many kisses for each curly head?
Nobody knows but mother.

Oh, make your home bright! Bring in the violin or the picture. It does not require a great salary or a big house, or chased silver or gorgeous upholstery to make a happy home. All that is wanted is a father's heart, a mother's heart, in sympathy with young folks.

SALTS FINE FOR ACHING KIDNEYS

We eat too much meat which clogs Kidneys, then the Back hurts

Most folks forget that the kidneys like the bowels, get sluggish and clog- ged, and need a flushing occasionally, else we have backache and dull misery in the kidney region, severe head- aches, rheumatic twinges, torpid liver, acid stomach, sleeplessness and all sorts of bladder disorders.

You simply must keep your kidneys active and clean, and the moment you feel an ache or pain in the kidney region, get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any good drug store here, take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, com- bined with lithia, and is harmless to flush clogged kidneys and stimulate them to normal activity. It also neu- tralizes the acids in the urine so it no longer irritates, thus ending bladder disorders.

Jad Salts is harmless, inexpensive, makes a delightful effervescent lithia- water drink, which everybody should take now and then to keep the kid- neys clean, thus avoiding serious com- plications.

A well known druggist says he sells lots of Jad Salts to folks who believe in overcoming kidney trouble while it is only trouble.

TRANSFUSION FAILS

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., Sept. 20. Twenty four hours after every effort had failed and while his mother was racing across the continent in a vain attempt to reach his bedside, C. Stan- ley Mackey, leader of the municipal band and a member of the Philadel- phia orchestra, died after suffering for two weeks from blood poisoning.

The most desperate efforts were re- sorted to in the fight to save his life. Dr. R. Franklin Hill, on the staff of the Hahnemann Hospital, a perfect stranger to Mr. Mackey, cheerfully submitted to an operation by which nearly two pints of his blood were in- jected into the veins of the dying man in a vain attempt to save his life.

MADE IN CANADA

Full of "pep" and "snap!" The man who cuts out meat and other heavy foods and starts the day with will be surprised at the mental "pep" and "snap" he is able to put into his work. He will feel a mental buoyancy and light- ness that can never come from high-proteid foods. Shredded Wheat builds strong, brainy men who are fit to fight the battles of the Empire.

Shredded Wheat is made in two forms, BISCUIT and TRISCUIT —the Biscuit for breakfast with milk or cream, or with fruits; Triscuit, the wafer-toast, delicious for luncheon with butter or soft cheese, or for any meal as a substitute for white flour bread.

Choice Recipes

Feather Cake.

One-quarter cup of butter, one cup of sugar, then add beaten yolks of two eggs, three fourths cup of milk, one teaspoon of vanilla, one and one- half cups of flour, sifted, one-half teaspoon of soda, one teaspoon of cream of tartar and last of all add the beaten whites of the eggs, which makes it as light as a feather.

Stuffed Tomatoes Baked.

Do not peel, but cut a small slice from the stem end, leaving the stem on the piece for a handle. Scoop out the middle and mix with an equal bulk of raw rice. Season well with butter, salt, cayenne and a speck of sugar. Fill each tomato moderately full, replace the stem and bake in a quick oven half an hour or until soft.

Popovers.

Two cups of flour, one teaspoon of salt, one-half teaspoon of soda, one teaspoon of cream of tartar, sifted to- gether. Beat separately the whites and yolks of two eggs. To two cups of sweet milk add the yolks, then slowly sift in the flour so as to make a smooth batter. Just before putting into the pans fold in lightly the beat- en whites. Bake in hot oven 30 min- utes. Serve immediately.

Endive and Grape Fruit Salad.

Several crisp endive heads, one ripe grapefruit, French dressing with paprika instead of the usual pepper. Wash and dry the endive, breaking the leaves apart first, then cut them down in thin strips. Peel the grape fruit and take out the meat in plugs, denuding it of pith and the skin about the carpels. Put the fruit and endive together, tossing the salad in the dressing and putting on as much paprika as is agreeable to taste. After it is well mixed, pile it on a mound of romaine or plain lettuce leaves, also tossed in a French dressing.

Japanese Floor Polish.

To one pint of linseed oil add one pint of cold tea, two ounces of spirits of salts and the whites of two eggs. Mix thoroughly and bottle. Shake well before using. Rub the floor with old silk dipped in the polish and with an- other piece of silk polish the floor.

Javelle Water.

One pound of washing soda, one quart boiling water, one-half pound chloride of lime, two quarts cold wa- ter. Put soda into an agate pan and add boiling water. Dissolve the lime in cold water. Let the mixture set- tle and pour off the clear liquid into the dissolved soda. Bottle and keep in a dark place. Javelle removes all stains and all colors and should not be used on colored material. After using rinse garments in weak am- monia.

COOKING TIME OF YEAR IS NOW

Now is the time of the year when the odor of spicy cooking is abroad in the land.

Mother spends her spare moments anxiously awaiting the crucial mo- ment when the preserves are to be taken from the fire, while the chil- dren linger around in the hope of get- ting "just a taste" of the delectable stuff.

Perhaps mother's list of recipes has given out, or maybe she might like to try some new ones to send to Tom in the trenches. If so, some of the following might appeal to her.

First, there's "Spiced Grapes," which are delicious with cold meat.

1 teaspoon of ground cinnamon.
1 teaspoon of ground allspice.
½ teaspoon ground mace.
1 teaspoon of salt.
1 cup good cider vinegar.

Boil slowly one hour, put in glasses or jars same as jelly.

Then, there's Pickled Pears, and wouldn't they taste good some chilly day in December.

Pare fruit and if small leave whole- if large, halve. Weigh and for every four pounds of fruit allow two pounds of sugar, one cup of good vin- egar, and one-half cupful of water. Make a syrup of the sugar, water and vinegar, and when boiling add the spices in little bags, using to every pint of the syrup two or three sticks of cinnamon, and teaspoonful each of cloves and mace or allspice, and a half ounce of ginger root. If preferred, nothing but the vinegar root and cinnamon need be used. Simmer for ten minutes, then put in the fruit, and simmer until tender enough to pierce with a straw. Lift fruit out carefully and place in jars. Boil the syrup a few minutes longer and pour over the fruit.

And Peaches! We mustn't forget them. They are so plentiful this year every housekeeper should make it a point to fill all her empty jars with peaches in some form. Here's "Peach Butter."

Pare ripe peaches and put into preserving kettle, with sufficient wa- ter to boil them soft; then put through a colander, removing the stones. To each quart of peaches put 1½ pounds sugar and boil very slowly one hour. Stir often, and do not let them burn. Put in stone or glass jars and keep in a cool place.

Do you like Baked Onions? Very few do not. Well, here is an old Vir- ginia recipe for them, which is de- licious. It is more than 90 years old and has been handed down through three generations:

Boil in salted water until tender six medium-sized Bermuda onions and place in baking dish. Beat until light 2 eggs, add 2 cups of milk and pour over the onions, put a small lump of butter on each onion, season with pepper and salt and bake until light brown.

Evenly Matched.

"You haven't any serious or organic trouble," said the young physician, cheerfully.

"You are a little nervous and run down, that's all. Take more exercise, eat less and forget your troubles."

The hypochondriac snorted.

"Young man," he demanded, his voice shaking, "how long have you been a doctor?"

"I took my degree three years ago," answered the medico.

"And I am an invalid of 25 years' experience. Who are you to disagree with me?"—Brooklyn Eagle.

COMBINED KNIFE AND FORK.

A novelty which will appeal to those who have suffered the depriva- tion of one arm is a combined knife and fork which has been placed upon the market recently. The knife blade instead of being straight as in the or- dinary utensil, is curved at its lower end to terminate in four prongs sim- ilar to the conventional fork. The outer curve of the bend is given a sharp edge to serve as the knife, and the curve is designed to facilitate cut- ting. The utensil requires only a par- tial turn of the hand to convert it into a fork.

How Fat Folks May Become Slim

BE MODERATE IN YOUR DIET, BREATHE DEEPLY, AND TAKE A LITTLE OIL OF ORILENE

Fat persons, particularly those from 10 to 30 pounds above normal weight, will be interested to learn that they may easily reduce their weight without starva- tion diet or tiresome exercise.

This can best be done by being moderate in your diet, so that you will not over- tax your assimilative organs, by getting plenty of fresh air, by breathing deeply, and by taking a few drops of oil of ori- lene four times a day.

Oil of orilene may be obtained from any good druggist in capsule form (five drops to the capsule). Take one capsule after each meal and one before retiring at night. They cost little, are absolutely harmless, are pleasant to take and are designed to reduce fatty accumulations in the system wherever located.

Even a few days' treatment should show a noticeable reduction in weight, the flesh should become firm, the skin smooth and the general health much improved, your footsteps should become lighter, your work seems easier, and a lighter and more buoyant feeling takes possession of your whole being.

Every person who is ten or fifteen pounds over normal weight should surely give this treatment a trial. You will pro- bably find that it is just what you need.

Any druggist can supply you or a large box will be sent on receipt of $1.00. Ad- dress D. J. Little Drug Co., Box 1240, Mon- treal, Can.

"Why did you accept George?" "He was so much more original than the other fellows." "In what way?" "He was the only one that asked me to be his wife."

Hospital Train Is Well Equipped

MUNICH, Oct. 1.—The contribution of the German Museum of Munich, one of Germany's most prominent scientific institutions, to the cause of the Fatherland is a hospital train which is declared to surpass in efficiency, excellence, and luxury any other train now in use.

The outbreak of the war all but put a stop to the activities of the museum; it checked the construction of its new building; it cut off the intercourse with foreign countries that had long been a feature of the institution, and gradually it has taken away a large part of its personnel. The more reason, its leaders decided, why it should perform some concrete sacrifice.

The equipment of a train, it was decided, would afford the museum the best chance to apply the scientific attainments of the institution in a practical way. The result is a train of twenty-nine cars, with a capacity of 200 wounded men and about fifty physicians, clergymen, nurses, and attendants.

The cars are enameled, floor to roof; each bed has its individual electric light; the eating utensils are of nickel or aluminum; each car possesses its telephone; there are ice chests and electric fans, hot water heaters, and drinking water coolers. Each car has its separate heating establishment and ventilation system. The train possesses a library and all its cars are made more attractive with pictures and photographs. A small organ is part of its equipment, and last, but not least, the train has an operation car that is the last word in surgical equipment.

The operation car consists of five divisions, in the middle and largest of which the operating table stands. Every known facility of the operating room has been included. There is a Roentgen ray room, a plethora of the latest instruments, anaesthetics, materials of all kinds, and powerful electric lights, with reflectors. The car also contains a disinfection room, sterilization quarters, and an apothecary department.

FINAL WORD SPOKEN.

Gen. Sir Sam Hughes Won't Change Plans for Wintering Troops.

OTTAWA, Sept. 30.—Though the Militia Council has definitely allocated the winter quarters of overseas battalions remaining in Canada, requests to have soldiers placed in billets in their midst come from all parts of the country.

"The regiments already organized," said General Hughes to-day, "are not to be broken up for the purpose of sending a few men around the country, but, as previously stated, every village or municipality in Canada enrolling within its borders 20 or more properly qualified men, according to the size of the place, will be privileged to have them billeted in such villages.

"Therefore, it is up to such places as want soldiers quartered with them to assist in raising the units. The Lord helps those who help themselves."

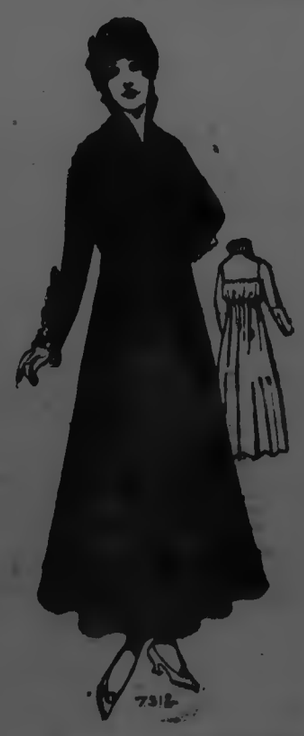
A Smart Answer.

Larry O'Sheil, in many respects a good soldier, had a very limited idea of the virtue of tidiness. Appearing one morning on parade with his boots in a fearful state, the sergeant's eagle eye soon spotted him. "Private O'Sheil, fall out!" he roared. "Phwat d'ye mane by comin' here wid yur boots in a mess loike thot?" "Arrah, now, sarjint, be aisy!" retorted the imperturbable Larry. "Shure ye niver saw a good soldier showin' a clane pair o' heels!"

EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

LADY'S DRESS.

By Anabel Worthington.



7312

Among the more dressy frocks we must class the example shown in the accompanying illustration. Yet the making is simple and it requires only a little thought to evolve either a simple street costume or a reception dress from the one pattern.

The bodice has the upper part of the front and the central panel in one piece, but there is a seam across the side front which produces a yoke at the shoulders and leaves the lower material full. In the back this same division is used, but it extends straight across, leaving the upper half of the body plain and flat, while the lower half is gathered and attached to it. This mode of cutting resembles a deep yoke in the back and a yoke and front panel in front.

The neck is open just a trifle and is finished with a lace frill of graduated width. The plain sleeves are full length, opening at the back of the arm, and they may be shortened as much as desired.

The skirt is almost straight at the edges, but not quite so. It is in one piece and is gathered at the top and finished with a small frill above the belt. The lower portion is corded or left plain as desired.

As combinations of material are much in vogue, the material can easily be pieced at the uppermost cord and a stripe used for the full portion above, while a plain color serves for the corded portion.

The dress pattern, No. 7,312, is cut in sizes 34 to 44 inches bust measure. Medium size requires 4⅝ yards of 45 inch material, with 1 yard of 4 inch edging for collar and 1⅝ yards of narrow edging.

This pattern can be obtained by sending 10 cents to the office of this paper.

When ordering remember to give your name and address as well as the number and size of pattern required, and age of a child.

Price 15 cents, or 2 for 25c.

Public Charges Are Not Beneficiaries of Life Assurance

A census was taken about a year ago of the inmates of alms houses, of prisons, of asylums for the care of the helpless, in an eastern state. It was found but three of the occupants of these institutions, who numbered altogether over fifteen hundred, had been beneficiaries of life insurance.

It was somebody's neglect that forced the public to pay higher taxes in order to take care of nearly all these people.

Life insurance limits the needs of poorhouses, prisons, old folks' homes. Life insurance, therefore, reduces the needs of the State in maintaining institutions for the care of the needy.

The man who has sufficient insurance to take care of his own future if he reaches old age, and of his dependents, should anything happen to him, is doing his duty, not only to his family, but to his State.

WOULD YOU CONSIDER

ADVERTISE IN THE EXAMINER

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

When Like Cures Like.

By TROY ALLISON.

Copyright, 1915, by P. C. Eastment.

Minna Reed almost ran down the steps from the house bearing the sign "Mme. Voirel, Clairvoyant." The lady's communications had upset all her preconceived plans and ideas. Her mother had always opposed her trying anything of the kind, but when she saw the sign an overwhelming desire to inquire into things unknown had beset her. The rest of the party had gone down to the beach, and after staying in her room at the summer hotel for an hour with a headache she had slipped out to buy a fascinating kimono she had seen in a Japanese store the day before. The clairvoyant's sign had caught her eye, and for a whole hour she had sat in the darkened, stuffy little room with her nerves all at strained attention.

"I never would have thought it," she whispered. "I thought you were the truest, noblest thing on earth. And she said the man with black eyes, now one of my circle of acquaintances, was deceitful to the core and that if I did not separate his path from mine he would prove the blighting sorrow of my life. Jimmy, dear, it seems impossible to believe you could bring sorrow into any one's life, but it must have been you she meant, for you are the only man of my acquaintance who has b-black eyes." And, being only nineteen and believing she had come face to face with the big sorrow of her life, she threw herself across the bed and sobbed because she felt that she must immediately take steps to separate Jimmy Kent's path from hers—Jimmy, who had lent her his red ball to play with the very first day she went to kindergarten.

James Kent, unconscious of the heavy cloud of suspicion hovering over him, came from his ocean swim and lay idly on the sand, hoping Minna would get over her headache and walk down to the beach. Finally, sunburned and glowing, he went back to the hotel and found her on the veranda, gazing listlessly at the sea.

"Is it as bad as all that, little girl? You are the most forlorn looking specimen I ever saw," he said as he sat on the porch rail and eyed her commiseratingly.

Minna, seeing the sympathy in his eyes, wished fervently that they were any other color than black.

"What on earth made you have black eyes, Jimmy? I dislike them so!" she said petulantly.

Jimmy opened the offending orbs very wide in his surprise.

"By Jove, you are a queer one, Minna! You told me yesterday down on the beach that I had the most beautiful eyes you ever saw. Positively made me blush to know I was so beautiful. 'Fraid to sleep in them last night lest I should spoil 'em. And now—Minna, you haven't met any fellow with gray eyes, have you?" he asked suspiciously.

"No, I haven't," indignantly, "but black eyes are treacherous—and—I never could trust them."

Whether they were treacherous or not was left an open question, but they certainly proved persuasive, and finally Jimmy was in possession of the whole story.

"Minna Reed, you ought to be ashamed of yourself! Do I look like a blighting sorrow?" mimicking her forlorn tone. "I might be mistaken for a prize fighter," exhibiting his muscular arm with pride, "but I'm blamed if I'd know how to start out in the blighting sorrow business."

Minna, anxious to believe, still looked dubious.

"If your eyes only weren't black!" she sighed.

"Now, look here, my child. I'd get a special act of congress to change them to suit you if I could. You know I've done everything to please you all my life. Why will you believe that utter rot? Did she tell you anything tangible that you absolutely know was true?" Jimmy was in training for a lawyer and wanted to contest all evidence in the case.

"She told me my name and age," triumphantly.

"Didn't you have to write it on a piece of paper first?" suspiciously.

"Y-yes, but she didn't see it—honestly she didn't. I folded it tightly and put it on the table, and she sat and toyed with it while she talked."

"The mischief she didn't see it!" growled Jimmy. "Anything else?"

"She said I had an Aunt Mary in the spirit land that was trying to guide me," hesitatingly.

"See there! You never had an Aunt Mary in your life! It's all plain humbug." Jimmy spoke with the satisfaction of one willing to leave his case in the hands of an intelligent jury.

"No, I never had, but mamma had, and the clairvoyant said aunts and great-aunts were all the same in the spirit world."

Jimmy positively groaned with disgust.

"She might safely hit on an Aunt Mary. Nearly everybody living has an aunt or great-aunt or great-great-great-aunt Mary. But she had no business fooling with my eyes."

He sat sulkily silent, then grinned with a thought that made him wonder if he would not some day bear to the realms of the metaphysical the same relation that Edison bears to things physical.

"Young woman, I would not take a hopeless verdict upon my eyes from any one oculist. Neither will I have them condemned by any one clairvoyant. I demand a consultation. If I get the party together, will you go to another clairvoyant this evening?" he demanded.

"I would be so glad to find that the first one was mistaken," she said fervently.

It was a very busy evening for Mr. Kent. Finally he found a coterie sufficiently good natured and pliable to fill his requirements.

"Remember, you are to entirely free her mind from the idea. I'll send her in third. You couldn't fail to know her anyway. She's the prettiest one in the bunch. It's cheap at $10, and if she gets over her fear of black eyes, by Jove, I'll send you another tenner tomorrow." And Mme. Arletta, enthusiastic under the powerful stimulus, promised to do her best.

That night when the moon cast a long path of light over the waves a couple sat far down the beach in a spot removed from the crowd.

"She told me my name without my writing it!" Minna said in awed tones. "She is simply wonderful! Said for me never to have any confidence in fakes that made me write questions and fold them on a table; that they had blank papers folded just like them, and when they were toying with the ones I wrote that they would substitute the blank one and leave it on the table and take mine in their hand under the edge of the table and read it. That's exactly what that first woman must have done. I've lost faith in her entirely, and, Jimmy, boy, she said that the only person I need avoid and be suspicious of was a blond man with a Vandyke beard."

Young Mr. Kent stroked his beardless chin. "Thank heaven I haven't a blond Vandyke," he said piously. "Did she tell you anything about—er—me?" he asked cautiously.

"Not exactly, but she said that my real affinity was—was a man I had known since childhood."

"Now, that," said Mr. Kent, with great gratification, "suits me exactly. I'd rather be called an affinity any day than a blighting sorrow." He joyfully possessed himself of the girl's hands, and she had evidently lost all fear of treachery.

Afterward, with her head resting comfortably against his tweed shoulder, she spoke musingly, "She said that the greatest trial of her life was that there were so many fakes that brought discredit upon her glorious profession."

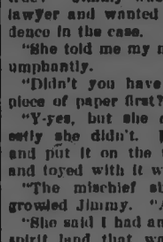
"Never you mind, little girl; I'm not so easily imposed upon, and you'll have me with you all through life to help pick out the real article," and the treacherous Mr. Kent lifted her face until he could look adoringly into it.

The moon, as if by special contract, came from under a cloud at just the right moment, and she saw his expression.

"Jimmy, I don't believe any one else ever had such wonderfully honest eyes," she said happily.

LOSING HOPE WOMAN VERY ILL

Finally Restored To Health By Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.



Bellevue, Ohio.—"I was in a terrible state before I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. My back ached until I thought it would break, I had pains all over me, nervous feelings and periodic troubles. I was very weak and run down and was losing hope of ever being well and strong. After taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound I improved rapidly and today am a well woman. I cannot tell you how happy I feel and I cannot say too much for your Compound. Would not be without it in the house if it cost three times the amount."—Mrs. CHAS. CHAPMAN, R. F. D. No. 9, Bellevue, Ohio.

Woman's Precious Gift.

The one which she should most zealously guard, is her health, but it is the one most often neglected, until some ailment peculiar to her sex has fastened itself upon her. When so affected such women may rely upon Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, a remedy that has been wonderfully successful in restoring health to suffering women.

If you have the slightest doubt that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will help you, write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential) Lynn, Mass., for advice. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman, and held in strict confidence.

THE NIGHTINGALE.

The traditional view of the nightingale's song is supremely given in the familiar lyric by Richard Barnefield. Here the poet finds the forlorn bird, with "her breast up-till a thorn," earnestly pouring forth her melodious sorrow. Milton in his juvenile sonnet apostrophizes the ineffable singer as giving forth notes that portend success in love, and when he comes to describe sober pleasures in "Il Penseroso" he appropriately finds the same strains "most musical, most melancholy." Against this Coleridge enters a vigorous protest in "The Nightingale: a Conversation Poem," characteristically advancing in the following passage a general truth and a specific criticism:

A melancholy bird? Oh, idle thought!
In nature there is nothing melancholy.
But some night wandering man whose heart was pierced
With the remembrance of a grievous wrong
Or slow distemper or neglected love
And so, poor wretch, filled all things with himself
And made all gentle sounds tell back the tale
Of his own sorrow!, he, and such as he,
First named these notes a melancholy strain.

Annotating this, the poet further illustrates his philosophic acuteness and takes the opportunity of expressing his loyalty to his great poetical predecessor. "This passage in Milton," the note runs, "possesses an excellence far superior to that of mere description. It is spoken in the character of the melancholy man and has therefore a dramatic propriety. The author makes this remark to rescue himself from the charge of having alluded with levity to a line in Milton, a charge than which none could be more painful to him except perhaps that of having ridiculed his Bible."

In a letter to Christopher North Wordsworth refers to the "false notions" regarding the nightingale's song and expresses his belief that Coleridge's poem, with its theory that "in nature there is nothing melancholy," will in all likelihood "contribute greatly to rectify these." In his own poem "Enterprise" he touches on the same point and alludes to the nightingale as "the sweet bird, misnamed the melancholy." It is hardly necessary to add that Keats in his great ode "To a Nightingale" rises to exquisite rapture over the happiness manifested in the singing of the "light winged dryad of the trees."—London Notes and Queries.

CARRY GRAIN OVER OCEAN.

Five Great Lakes Steamers Being Reconstructed.

MONTREAL, Sept. 30.—Five vessels of the Canada Steamships Line's fleet, now engaged in lake trade, are being reconstructed and will be placed at the disposal of the Canadian grain exporters for ocean service around the first of October.

This is the result of the first step taken by the Government commission to relieve the scarcity of tonnage, which is hampering the Canadian export trade.

Each of the five vessels will be able to carry over 100,000 bushels of grain, and it is thought that two round trips can be made to this port before the close of navigation.

Valuable Discovery in Complexion Beautifier

Because of its peculiar power of absorption, also because it serves every emollient purpose, ordinary mercolized wax is perhaps the most valuable complexion beautifier discovered within recent years. If one uses this she needs no toilet cream. Some use powder afterwards but this is not necessary. This rule for applying mercolized wax has been found very satisfactory: Wash the face with warm water, drying lightly. Before thoroughly dry annoint the face with the wax but don't rub it in. The favorite way is to use before retiring, allowing it to remain on all night, and washing it off in the morning with warm water. All druggists have this wax in original one-ounce packages.

For the removal of a wrinkled or flabby condition, there is nothing better than to bathe the face in a solution made by dissolving 1 ounce powdered saxolite in ½ pint witch hazel. Beneficial results are quickly noticeable.

SIR SAM CONDUCTED BAND.

Minister of Militia in New Role at Montreal Arena.

MONTREAL, Sept. 30.—General Sir Sam Hughes, Minister of Militia, appeared in a new role at the Montreal Arena last night, when he personally conducted a brass band of 175 musicians.

Sir Sam had told the audience at a patriotic concert of the soldier who was killed at the battle of Balaclava while singing Annie Laurie. He then turned to the band and asked it to play this old Scottish song while the audience joined in. The Minister then started the singing and conducted the band.

BUY FLOUR FOR ARMY.

Department of Agriculture Asked to Undertake Purchase.

OTTAWA, Sept. 30.—The War Office has asked the Canadian Department of Agriculture to undertake the purchase of limited quantities of flour in Canada for the use of the army. A purchasing agent for the War Office has arrived in Canada to co-operate with the Minister of Agriculture. The purchases will be extended over the next few months as conditions require. The department is also still acting for the War Office in regard to purchases of hay and oats in Canada.

A TESTIMONIAL FROM AFRICA.

The British Colonial Secretary has received the following communication from Dagadu, a Togoland chief, recently rescued by British forces from German domination:

"I, the Head Chief Dagadu of Kpandu, have given here £50, fifty pounds, and villagemen have also assisted me with cash £51 10s, fifty one pounds and ten shillings (to total £101 10s). One hundred and one pounds and ten shillings, being a fund given to help the British Government towards the imperial war between Britain, France, Russia and Germany, Austria-Hungary and Turkey. It was my willing to give more than what I have done above, but on account of the Germans, and owing to their bad treatment giving, most of my village youngmen have removed from this land and entered into another colony for their daily bread; and also my land is very poor to say. May God the Almighty bless the great Britain to master the victory. I congratulate the local and Imperial Government, and the district political officer, Mr. R. S. Rattray, who is treating us here very well and gentle; may he live long. And Mr. J. T. Furby (the senior political officer of Lome) who is a best and good gentleman, carrying his duty very pleasant in order, by my eye witness, may he live long. May God bless the British Government and prolong their power to be second to none.

"God Save the King!

"Yours obediently,

"Head Chief Dagadu of Kpandu."

Increase In The Revenue

Special to The Examiner.

OTTAWA, Oct. 1.—An increase of over three million dollars in the Dominion revenue figures for September as compared with September last year. Of the increase two millions is due to customs, $176,100 to excise, and $200,000 to post office receipts.

THEY RUN! THEY RUN!

By Henry Dalby

He who fights and runs away may live to fight another day—but not if he is a German. When the bold Teuton—and I do not deny him bravery—recognizes that now is the time for disappearing he wisely runs; but his fighting days are over. If he runs rearward he is murdered by his own officers; if he runs forward he first throws his arms down and then throws his hands up, and becomes a prisoner of war. The twenty thousand Germans who surrendered the other day without so much as a scratch on them were very sensible Teutons. They have fallen into the hands of hospitable hosts who will treat them with more kindness than they have been accustomed to since they joined the German army. They will get three square meals a day and won't have to do much to earn them. They will not even have to practice that ridiculous goose step. They will have nothing to do but to eat, drink and smoke, and to sing about the Fatherland and Gretchen, and "Gott straffe England," and to swap lies, until they become expert enough as liars to qualify for the German diplomatic service. After a week or two they will never look a potato in the eye, remembering the days when they had to live on potato bread. If they ever shed a tear it will be for the poor sons of Boches, still left out in the cold and wet of the trenches and suffering from rheumatism, sobriety and starvation. The prisoners will have much more liberty than the poor beggers who are still "enjoying" their freedom (qualified somewhat by the lash of the Prussian taskmaters) half of whom will be living skeletons and the other half dead skeletons, within a few weeks. Then they may begin to learn something about civilization. If they like to take the trouble they may acquire a language which does not look like a picket fence and sounds like a buzz saw with bronchial trouble. After a few month, with lots to eat and drink and nothing to do but amuse themselves, they will go home to Germany, too fat for military service; and if there is any Kaiser left shout Hoch der Kaiser until they are hoarse; or they can join the glee clubs and practise the new Hymn of the German Republic. They won't be able to sing "Die Wacht am Rhein" until it has been translated into French.

In all seriousness the surrender of so many Germans, unhurt, points to a great demoralization in the ranks of our enemies. There is a natural tendency for us to magnify both the significance and the importance of this remarkable willingness to throw up the sponge; but it certainly points to something, and that something looks like demoralization. I do not know whether there is anything in the London Telegraph's broad hints that the surrender was what is vulgarly called "a put up job." By whom put up and for what purpose? But the Telegraph is certainly right in saying that it was an astounding fact and without precedent in the war. According to one correspondent they seemed to welcome the chance to surrender. It may well be, that many others would welcome a similar opportunity. The hopelessness of the war must be apparent to the Germans at the front even if it is not appreciated or cannot be expressed by those at home.

It is the same with the submarine crews. According to the Province Journal, their morale has been destroyed by the failure of so many of the U-boats to return home. Sixty-seven of them are, it says, known to have been destroyed and the sailors are beginning to feel that submarine warfare offers nothing but death. There is neither honor nor glory in the murderous business and the men are asking themselves why should they throw away their lives in such a savage and hopeless warfare.

Pretty, Wavy, Curling Hair Without Hot Iron

Let me tell you of a simple method which is a favorite of the belles of a certain exclusive social set. I am sure you would like to know of it because it will give your hair such a pretty curliness and lustre and permit you to do away with the ruinous iron forever. Just get from any druggist a few ounces of ordinary liquid silmerine, and at night apply a little with a clean tooth brush, drawing this down the full length of the hair. In the morning you will have a real surprise, the fascinating, fluffy, wavy effect will appear so natural, and there will be no greasy, gummy, streaky or other unpleasant trace of this harmless liquid.

You can exercise for hours in the gymnasium, dance all evening in a heated ball room or take a long motor trip, without fear of your hair losing its curl—indeed, you won't need to use the silmerine again for a considerable time.—Mona Morrow in The Clubwoman

MOTHER! YOUR CHILD IS CROSS, FEVERISH FROM CONSTIPATION

Give "California Syrup of Figs" at once—a teaspoonful to-day often saves a sick child to-morrow.

If your little one is out-of-sorts, half-sick, isn't resting, eating and acting naturally—look, Mother! see if tongue is coated. This is a sure sign that its little stomach, liver and bowels are clogged with waste. When cross, irritable, feverish, stomach sour, breath bad or has stomach-ache, diarrhoea, sore throat, full of cold, give a teaspoonful of "California Syrup of Figs," and in a few hours all the constipated poison, undigested food and sour bile gently moves out of its little bowels without griping, and you have a well, playful child again.

Mothers can rest easy after giving this harmless "fruit laxative," because it never fails to cleanse the little one's liver and bowels, and sweeten the stomach and they love its pleasant taste. Full directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups printed on each bottle.

Beware of counterfeit fig syrups. Ask your druggist for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs"; then see that it is made by the "California Fig Syrup Company."

JOCKEY CLUB STAKES RUN

Only 50,600 Race of English Turf Captured by Lanius.

NEWMARKET, Eng., Oct. 1.—The Jockey Club Stakes, the only £10,000 ($50,000) race of the present English Turf season, was run here yesterday and won by Lanius. Dame Prudent finished second, and Sir Ernest Cassel's Gadabout was third.

The race was for three-year-olds and up, and the distance run by the three-quarters of the Cesarewitch course.

"The Girl That Smiles."

One of life's little marvels is the wonderful effect that a smile of the right sort can have upon those whom we meet, think Hortense. Some of the best work in the world is done by people who would be amazed to know that they were doing anything out of their ordinary routine, and this invigorating and gladdening office of smiling kindly is an example.

The girl who goes through the day with a kind word and a cheery smile for all whom she knows, has much the same good effect on others as has sunshine. A warm, real smile, a friendly glance of sympathy, are the things that cost no money, yet how powerful they are in bringing trust and courage into life.

YOU'RE BILIOUS! LET "CASCARETS" LIVEN LIVER AND BOWELS

Get a 10-cent box now.

You men and women who can't get feeling right—who have headache, coated tongue, bad taste and foul breath, dizziness, can't sleep, are bilious, nervous and upset, bothered with a sick, gassy, disordered stomach, or have a bad cold.

Are you keeping your bowels clean with Cascarets, or merely forcing a passageway every few days with salts, cathartic pills or castor oil?

Cascarets work while you sleep; cleanse the stomach, remove the sour, undigested fermenting food and foul gasses; take the excess bile from the liver and carry out of the system all the constipated waste matter and poison in the bowels.

A Cascaret to-night will straighten you out by morning—a 10-cent box from any drug store will keep your stomach sweet, liver and bowels regular, and head clear for months. Don't forget the children. They love Cascarets because they taste good—never gripe or sicken.

CUT DOWN THAT TREE

ONCE upon a Time a Certain Man had a Garden. In the centre of the Garden he planted a Tree. The Tree grew Year by Year until its roots spread to each Corner of the Garden. The Roots of the Tree Sapped all life out of the Soil. Then the man woke up to the Fact that he Must Cut Down the Tree. The mail Order habit like a Deadly tree, has fastened its Roots on our Community Life and is robbing Us of Thousands of Dollars each Year. Year by Year we have cultivated this Habit until we are now Face to Face with the growth that is holding back Our community. We must STOP the Growth of this Habit by Cutting it Out.

Limited Supplies of Dried Fruit Expected

The situation in Mediterranean dried fruits become more uncertain. Dispatches during the week told of the Greek Government requisitioning a number of vessels for army purposes, some of which formerly no doubt were used in shipping currants. During the past week or so, currants have advanced some 12 cents a hundred pounds and are to-day 17s 6d above the low price. We shall, too, receive only a few hundred boxes of Valencia raisins from Spain and it would be no surprise—in fact it is almost a certainty—that these will be retailed to the consumer this year a around 30 cents a pound. On account of Turkey being our enemy we shall get no Smyrna figs or Sultana raisins, unless Turkey should collapse suddenly, which is an uncertainty. We shall get some natural figs from Portugal and Spain which will be much higher than former years and we shall have some layer figs from California at high prices, as the California reports indicate that the crop is already sold. California dried fruits will therefore be a big factor in the market this Christmas.

NEIGHBOURLINESS.

Be interested in your neighbour, but not curious.

"Good morning" or "Good evening" is easily said, and does not take much of your time.

Borrow not and then you may not be asked to lend.

Respect your neighbour's line full of clean clothes, and do not select her washday for the beating of your rugs.

It is said that walls have ears, therefore speak low if you would keep your affairs private.

Don't consider your neighbour's house a stepping-in place, to enter without knocking.

Always be ready to help your neighbour in time of need, but don't intrude.

Make your little girl use the soft pedal when practicing, if there be sickness in your neighbour's house.

150,000 Enemy Casualties In One Week

THE ALLIES CONTINUE TO PUSH FOWARD

GERMAN LOSSES IN WEST HAVE BEEN 150,000 IN WEEK

30,000 Prisoners and 200 German Guns Are in the Hands of the Allies as a Result of the Week's Offensive Operations----French Practically Command the Railway Which Serves the Crown Prince's Army

MAY BE WORLD'S GREATEST BATTLE

LONDON, Oct. 2.—(Special Cable)—Although there are some misgivings regarding Bulgaria's attitude there is general optimism throughout Britain and France as the result of the first of the Allies' offensive which when summed up in net results from the reports of the British, French and German statements, indicates that the British and French have made a permanent and substantial advance in the first stage of what may be the world's greatest battle.

In Flanders the British hold all the ground gained in last Saturday's smash including the town of Loos and the Heights of Lens, with the exception of a few trenches regained by the Germans in counter-attacks. The French have made continued progress in the Vimy and Souchez districts, and practically command the railway which supplies the Crown Prince's army in the Argonne. The Crown Prince's army was definitely defeated in counter-attacks on the French positions.

In actual losses it is estimated the Germans have last 150,000 men. Thirty thousand prisoners and two hundred German guns are in the hands of the French and British. Berlin claims to have taken twelve thousand Allies' prisoners, but makes no estimate of the other casualties. At least a million men are engaged in this terrible conflict, and before another week they will likely be reinforced by another million. Military experts here express high confidence in the Allies' prospects.

GENEVA, Oct. 2.—Italy is preparing to send 200,000 troops to the Balkans to the aid of Serbia when the expected Austro-German-Bulgar offensive begins, according to Rome advices to-day. French and British artillerymen are arriving at Belgrade also daily. A detachment of Russian gunners, it is reported, was sent to the Serbian front more than a month ago.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 2.—Official reports from United States Naval Attaches in Great Britain, have convinced the United States Naval Department that Britain has successfully overcome the German submarine menace and that from sixty to eighty German submarines have been destroyed. This is regarded as important information to the United States as indicating that Dreadnoughts and not submarines should form the feature of the new naval programme.

ATHENS, Oct. 2.—Travellers to-day report that large portions of the German-Austrian troops who were massed on the Serbian and Grecian frontiers have been withdrawn with scores of guns and entrained through Austria on fast trains presumably for the Western front to try to stop the advance of the British and French.

CANADIAN SHELLS ARE PROVING VERY EFFECTIVE

(Special Cable by W. A. Willison. Copyrighted.)

LONDON, Oct. 2.—Canadian-made shells are a great success. The artillerymen of the First Division speak in the highest terms of the effective qualities of the Dominion's high explosive.

"They are quite satisfactory in every way," an officer told me. Thousands of these shells have been used during the past ten days, which have been marked by a vigorous bombardment along the whole Canadian front. The Germans have been replying shot for shot, but our artillery fire has been more effective. There have been numerous casualties in the Canadian battalions, but only very slight losses, considering the nature of the artillery duel. The German parapets have been destroyed in many places by the constant Canadian bombardment. Canada, by the excellence and quantity of her shell production, is doing the Allied arms a service surpassed only by that of the Dominion's battalions in the field—indeed the value of the ammunition output can hardly be over-estimated. Every effort should be made to expedite the increase in output.

ALLIES AGAIN PUSH THEIR LINES FORWARD ON WESTERN FRONT

Fresh Gains Recorded in Both the Artois and Champagne Districts and German Counter Attacks Are All Beaten Off

DESPERATE RESISTANCE

PARIS, Oct. 2.—(French official.)—The Allies pushed their lines forward both in the Artois and Champagne regions in renewed assaults throughout last night and early to-day, the War Office announced in this afternoon's communique.

Southeast of Souchez heavy French attacks have carried the French closer to the heights of Vimy, the immediate objective in the Artois battle.

On both the left and centre the French have made progress in the Champagne region, overcoming desperate enemy resistance.

In the Artois region the enemy's artillery violently bombarded our positions east of Souchez, said the communique, but the French progressed in trench to trench fighting towards the heights of La Folie. The Germans rise commenaded new positions taken by the French in Champagne.

Two German reconnaissances in Lorraine and attacks on French posts near Moncel and Semeville were repulsed, the War Office stated, and the German troops were chased back to their lines.

Elsewhere there was calm on the entire front.

INSTRUMENTS FOR THE BAND ARE BEING ORDERED

Speakers' Patriotic League Have Every Confidence in the Generosity of the People of Peterborough—Money Needed At Once

THE MEN SUBSCRIBE

The Speakers' Patriotic League Committee, which has the matter of the Overseas Band in hand, has every confidence that the people of Peterborough will generously subscribe to the band fund. In fact so confident are they that the instruments are being ordered at once. In addition to what has already been subscribed, about $1,500 will be needed to equip the band in a proper manner, and the public is urged to subscribe at once either through the Examiner or through the members of the committee. The main point is that the money is required at once. To those who have already contributed, the sincere thanks of the band is extended.

The members of the Overseas Company are raising enough funds by voluntary subscriptions among themselves to present the band with a set of drums and symbols.

NEW SPIRIT IN ENGLAND

Recruiting Has Bounded Upwards and the Conscription Cry Has Received a Big Blow, Says T. P. O'Connor

CANNOT BE CARRIED

LONDON, Oct. 2.—It is very difficult to describe quite accurately the very mixed feelings that the recent victories have created in the British mind, triumph and expectations that the tide has definitely turned of course are uppermost. Parallel with these is the determination not to crow too loudly, lest there follow on the joy of to-day, as often before the disappointment of to-morrow.

Nevertheless the conviction everywhere prevails that that adequate supply of shells and men at last has made it possible for the British and French to break down the hitherto impregnable lines.

A New Spirit.

A new spirit in all her attitude, home and international, exhibits itself in England in the recruiting, which has bounded upwards. The conscription cry has received a big blow. The new spirit abroad has shown itself in the stern message which Sir Edward Grey gave to Bulgaria which really meant that if Bulgaria declared in favor of Germany, the Allies would send troops by the hundred thousand and dreadnaughts to enable Greece and Serbia to crush Bulgaria finally, and to end all her hopes of recovering her lost territory.

This threat with the prompt mobilization of the Greek army and the growing hopes of the final victory for the Allies transformed the Balkan situation. It disposes for the moment of the smallest chance of Bulgaria joining Germany or of Germany coming to the aid of Turkey.

Thus, despite warnings from past disappointments and admonitions from the military critics to be cautious, we end the week bubbling with suppressed excitement.

Are Satisfied.

The Irish members have returned to Ireland satisfied with their success in having effectually staved off conscription and saving Ireland from financial injustice in the budget. The anniversary this week of the Ulster Convention Day has revealed an enormous change in the whole Irish situation. The Orange leaders have counselled a modest private celebration of this historic defiance of the will of Parliament.

Some of the Orange papers have made an attempt to revive the old bitterness. The futility of this effort was demonstrated by the remarkable address of the Protestant Bishop Ossory, who called on all Irishmen to bury controversies in the graves of Irish heroes of all creeds in Flanders and Gallipoli. The Irish Times, chief organ of Unionism in the south of Ireland, expresses entire agreement with this proposal. Thus, the future of Home Rule after the war is very clearly defined in that it is very unlikely that there will be any inauguration. The entire Unionist party in the south of Ireland and three-fourths of the British Tory party would join in resisting any attempt which while cheating Ireland would also foreswear the fight for small nations principle of nationality which is the inspiration and justification of the Allies.

There is an interesting—a tragically interesting controveray at this moment, which like every

MANY HOME FROM CAMP

Peterborough Men of 33rd Battery Selected in the Overseas Draft Are Paying Final Visit Home Before Leaving For Overseas

TO-DAY'S MILITARY NEWS

Peterborough's garrison was augmented last night by the arrival of a big detachment of the Peterborough boys in the 33rd Battery at Barriefield, and other soldiers from the same unit arrived to-day. These are members of the draft selected to go overseas at once, and they are paying their final visit home before sailing, leaving for Barriefield on Wednesday morning. Altogether some seventy-five of Peterborough's soldiers from the Kingston camp will be home for Sunday, and Lt.-Col. Johnston extends a cordial invitation to all of them to attend church service with the local overseas company, parading at the Armouries at 10:30 o'clock. It is hoped that all will take advantage of the invitation.

A few of the 59th Battalion and 8th C.M.R. are also home on leave.

Sergt-Major Harry Wilford, of the 59th Battalion, C. E. F., Niagara Camp, and formerly of the 57th Regiment, is home on a few days' leave.

Peterborough is doing its share in providing men for every branch of the Empire's fighting forces. Not content with being well represented in every branch of the army, the city is now contributing to the air forces. Word has been received that Harold Meldrum, son of Mr. W. H. Meldrum, McDonnel street, who left Canada with the Borden Armoured Battery, has transferred to the Flying Corps and is now in training in England. Sub-Lieut. L. E. Stevens is on his way to the Old Country, and Sub-Lieut. Geale is already at work, whether patrolling the North Sea for submarines, or the coasts of England as a protection against Zeppelins, the censor does not permit him to state.

Another big squad of the local over-seas company were innoculated this morning, the "victims" including some of the officers and most of the band. The doctors ran out of "ammunition" as one bandsman expressed it before the band members were all innoculated.

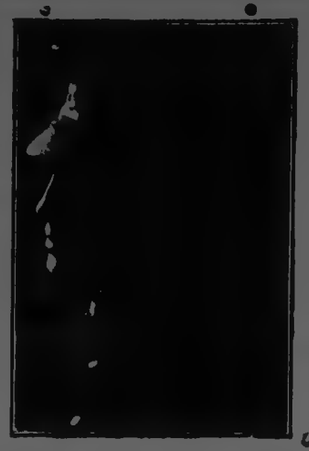
The squad who went to Millbrook yesterday had a very enjoyable outing. An impromptu concert put on last evening was a feature. Master Percy Luther, the little lad whose ability as an elocutionist has earned him the title of the "Little Recruiting Sergeant," accompanied the boys.

Major S. T. Medd and Lieut. H. G. Rogers, of the 9th C.M.R., are home from Barriefield Camp for the week end.

The many friends of signaller Ernie Watson of the 59th Battalion, son of Pte J. H. Watson, the genial recruiting sergeant in charge of the local recruiting depot, will regret to learn that he is in hospital at Kingston, suffering from an attack of pleurisy with danger of pneumonia.

The Overseas Band and infantry detachment will attend divine service at St. Andrew's Church to-morrow morning, parading at the Armouries at 10:30 o'clock. There will be khaki in the pulpit as well as in the congregation, as the pastor, Lieut. (Rev.) Rollins, who is training for overseas service at Barriefield will preach.

Sub-Lieutenant Leslie Stevens, the second Peterborough boy to quality for the Royal Naval Air Service, left yesterday for the East to sail for England. His parents accompanied him as far as Montreal. The other Peterborough "birdman," Sub-Lieutenant Geale, has been in England for some time and has been assigned to duty.



FLIGHT SUB.-LIEUT. HAROLD MELDRUM, Peterborough's third aviator. He left Canada with the Borden Armoured Battery, but has transferred to the flying service and is in training in England.

A BEQUEST MADE FOR DEPENDENTS OF 57TH MEMBERS

Major Geo. W. Bennett Killed at St. Julien Left $500 For That Purpose—Grant of $1000 Made to St. John's Church

WILL IS PROBATED

TORONTO, Oct. 1.—The will of Major George W. Bennett, of Peterborough superintendent of colonization roads, who died April 27 while on active service in Belgium, reads: "I direct my executors to apply the sum of $1,000 to and for the benefit of St. John's Episcopal church, Peterborough, and the sum of $500 for the benefit of widows and orphans of members of the 57th Regiment who take part in the war in which Great Britain is at present engaged, to be applied by my executors as they deem best."

The late officer made his will Aug. 17, 1914, and provides the following bequests: Lela P. Butson, niece, Bowmanville, $500; John J. Bennett, brother, Peterborough, $1,000; Mary Jane Pope, Montreal, sister, $1,000; Harry Pope, Montreal, nephew, $500; Henrietta Melville, Renfrew, no relation, $1,000; Mary A. McGregor, no relation, Winnipeg, $500; Michael P. Doherty, no relation, Toronto, $100.

The deceased's clothing is to be divided between his brother John J. and a nephew, Wilber Bennett, both of Peterborough. The residue passes to two nieces, Lela Butson and Susie Clark, and a nephew, Wilber Bennett.

The total amount of the estate is $10,250, of which real estate in the Township of Monaghan is valued at $7,000, life insurance, $1,000, cash, $1,070, promissory note, $10, household effects, $51, and the balance in farm stock and implements.

IMPORTANT MEETING

All members of the Speakers' Patriotic League are reminded that there will be an important meeting of the League at the headquarters, George street, to-night. Important business in connection with the band is to be discussed. Every member is asked to be on hand.

190 Pounds of Gum and Chocolate

School Children of Peterborough Make Valuable Contribution for Boys at Front

One of the most interesting donations made to the boys at the front was that given by the children in our six Public schools on Monday and Tuesday of this week.

During the previous week the teachers of the various schools announced that on the above days those children who wished might bring offerings of chocolate and gum which would be sent to the Peterborough soldiers overseas. The response was both hearty and generous all the way from the tiny kindergarteners to those in the Entrance forms.

When everything was packed ready for the mails there were 19 boxes averaging ten pounds each, and valued in the neighbourhood of $175.

The children of our city have reason to be proud of their contribution towards the comfort of the Peterborough boys, especially as there was enough money besides to pay the parcel postage.

The Public school teachers who, with the consent of the Board of Education were responsible for the undertaking feel very much gratified at the result of their effort.

The thanks of the teachers are due Mrs. Peter Campbell, whose kindly and efficient help lightened very materially the labour of packing and mailing the boxes.

BALKAN WAR IS CALL TO GREEKS NOW IN CANADA

Reservists and Others Obliged to Report to Montreal and Await Further Instructions as to Departure—Between 10,000 and 15,000 in Canada

With the imminent relighting of the war torch in the Balkans all Greek reservists of the classes from 1892 to 1914, now resident in America, have been called to the colors by a royal order published on September 23. The news to-day practically closed all hope to the maintenance of peace, Bulgaria apparently being resolved to align herself with the Austro-Germans. The Greek summons has naturally aroused deep interest among the Peterborough colony, a mere handful of the estimated 10,000 or 15,000 Greeks in Canada. One of prominent members of the local colony stated to-day that while reservists have been called, it practically means that every native of Greece now in Canada, capable of bearing arms, is included in the recent decree.

Mr. A. Vouros, the Greek charge d'affaires at Washington, D.C., received the cabled call to arms and forwarded the following telegram to the Montreal consul-general.

"Please bring to knowledge to whom it may concern that by royal decree of September 23, mobilization has been decreed for the classes of 1892 to 1914, inclusive.

"Those who are called are all reservists who have accomplished three months' service; all reservists belonging to the classes of 1912, 1913, 1914, who, although not actually under colours, have served three months. Thirdly, all auxiliaries belonging to the classes of 1892 to 1914, whether they have served or not.

"All officers, without distinction of classes.

"Whoever has served as a volunteer before actually called to the colours will be exempt from this order."

Unlike the mobilization orders which came gradually for the various army classes at the time of the first and second Balkan wars, this order is given en masse.

It was explained to the reporter that everyone to whom the announcement applied was obliged to communicate with Montreal at once and await instructions. These reservists owning businesses, it was stated, may apply for extra time during which they may arrange for the management of their affairs while they are away on service.

This is the second time during the past five years that Greek reservists have been called home. One can appreciate the difficulties which hampers the going of many of them in this country.

New Ladies' Apparel For Thanksgiving

Mrs. Jean Hardes, late of The J. L. Hudson Company, Detroit, has assumed charge of the Cloak and Suit Department at The Reid Co., 393 George Street. Mrs. Hardes has had excellent experience in these lines, and is thoroughly versed in what is new and correct. Her experience and the Reid Co.'s splendid assortment of fall and winter wearing apparel will make this an ideal mecca for the ladies of Peterborough and district who desire to be correctly attired.

The Reid Co. extend to the ladies of this city a cordial invitation to visit their store and see for themselves all that is new in suits, coats and dresses. The stock is most complete, special purchases having been made in anticipation for the coming holiday.

Our windows can only give you a small idea of the exclusiveness and variety of the goods we handle, and you will be amply repaid by dropping in to the store even if only to inspect the goods. You will be courteously waited on whether you purchase or not.

School Fair At Zion

A Large Attendance of Children—Exhibits Were Good

The last of a series of school fairs was held at Zion yesterday. There was a large attendance of children and also a fair representation of adults. The exhibits were particularly good and consisted of garden products, poultry, baking and fancy work.

The district representative of the Department of Agriculture was present.

CHANGES IN FOREMEN OF G. T. R. SECTIONS

G. T. R. Roadmaster Garrow has made the following changes in the foremanships of a number of the sections in the vicinity of Peterborough: Mr. Thomas Jackson, who has been the local yard foreman, has been moved to the section between Peterborough and Nassau, on the Peterborough-Lakefield division; Mr. Fred. Delahaye, who has been on the Nassau section, is moved to Omemee; and Mr. Chambers, who has been foreman on one of the Omemee sections, takes charge of the Peterborough yard work. Other changes have been made along the various G.T.R. lines, but these in particular apply to Peterborough. They took effect yesterday.

INDIA AND THE WAR

The above will be the subject of the address by Rev. J. G. Brown, D.D., of Toronto, at Murray Street Baptist Church to-morrow morning.

This address, which was delivered in Walmar Road Church, Toronto, caused much comment and revealed certain things in connection with the war which have not appeared in our newspapers.

Dr. Brown has himself been in India, and he has mastered the war situation as it relates to India and other foreign lands.

Doubtless many will welcome this opportunity of hearing the address.

Will Preach In Charlotte St. Church

Rev. Samuel Sillery, M.A., chairman of Napanee District, will preach (D.V.) at both services in Charlotte St. Church on Sunday. Mr. Sillery is a distinguished methodist preacher and has occupied some of the most important pulpits in Canadian Methodism.

This is Mr. Sillery's first visit to Peterborough.

Rev. Mr. Wilson goes to Napanee for Sunday in the interest of the educational work of the church.

DISABLED SOLDIERS.

The Dominion Hospitals' Commission includes among its duties the devising of means of employment for soldiers who return to Canada so disabled as to be incapable of resuming their previous occupations.

Men disabled in the war are now returning. A number of them are here. What about them?

The Government has, we believe, authorized the Hospitals' Commission to deal with this heavy problem, and no doubt stands ready to finance the work. If this is the state of the case, the plans of the Commission ought to be put into immediate effect. Any period of delay that may be permitted to occur will cause discontent, not only among these soldiers, but on all sides, and more particularly among those who have enlisted or are about to do so. The plans to be adopted ought not only to be efficient. They ought to be prompt, so that no doubt will arise as to the determination of the country to give its soldiers a square deal.—Toronto Star.

GERMANY'S "YELLOW" ALLY.

One of the most bitter opponents of the Anglo-French loan, now so successfully arranged, has been William Randolph Hearst, says the Montreal Herald. A long time ago the Germans announced that this yellow journalist had been captured by them, and that his influence would be exerted on their behalf upon the Americans. He has certainly tried to live up to the expectations of his German friends. Among other things, he essayed to get the idle shipping of the Germans put to sea again under the Stars and Stripes. Then he endeavoured to force the United States Government to put an embargo on munitions of war that the Huns were unable to get. The virulence of his latest pro-German campaign (against the loan), may be judged from the following sobbing extract from a screaming editorial in the New York American:

> Countrymen, to provide the means of prolonging this war is no fit part for a brave and generous civilized people to play.
> We presume from this that he means that if America did not sell munitions the war would be brought to a rapid close by the defeat of the Allies. He proceeds:
> It is no fit part of ours to furnish the weapons of murder, or the money with which to buy the weapons of murder, to these homicidal maniacs. Our prosperity and the prosperity of the world are inseparable. If we assist in the ruin and destruction of Europe's prosperity and civilization, we are assuredly assisting in the ruin and destruction of our prosperity and civilization. Our profit lies in Europe's peace. Our safety is bound up in Europe's safety. Our high and solemn duty, before God and man, is to do nothing to prolong this war, to do everything we can do to shorten this war. If we must make weapons of war, let us make them for our own future defence. If we have millions of money to loan, let us lend these millions to the encouragement and the upbuilding of peaceful industries at home.

> In the face of this warning shall this nation rest inert and stupid as did England in the presence of Germany's constant and remorseless preparations for war? England had its warning. Every one remembers the startling play, "An Englishman's Home," and how soon the sensation which it created died down. The author fell in the trenches of Flanders, fighting for the nation that jeered at his warnings, and if the Englishman's home has not yet seen the invaders he pictured it has at least heard the crash of bombs from the sea and from the air. England at least had a fleet. We have not an adequate one. England was able to keep the war from her shores save for an occasional raid. We would have armies on our territory in forty days after a declaration of war. Are we, like England, going to neglect the warnings as they come?

Here he plainly holds Germany up as the "remorseless" culprit who has plunged Europe into war, and chides England, not for fighting, but for not being prepared to crush Germany at the outset. Germany is pictured as the evil ogre that she is, treacherously and remorselessly planning a murder and plunder campaign through Europe. Yet, in the other editorial, Mr. Hearst finds it a crime against God and man for the United States not to ally herself tactily on the side of Germany!

CHASTE AND HUMANE.

The Germans still believe in German Kultur, says the Toronto News. In a recent article The Kolnische Zeitung explains exactly what this German Kultur is. "It is the perfecting of human existence, both in the man himself and in his externals. Kultur works both in the soul and in the body. Its aim is to elevate the spirit and make more beautiful the human body. The more Kultur a people possess the purer are its feelings the more humane its disposition, the more chaste all its expressions of life. Kultur does not seek the formation of an elite, rather the drawing together of the entire nation for the prosecution of better objects and conditions of life. In all its work Kultur sets an ideal before itself, and in the case of Germany, especially, this ideal is one of goodness and supreme virtue. Kultur is as a refreshing, purifying, invigorating breeze over a miasma-laden atmosphere. It clears away the vapours engendered in the swamps of so-called civilization. The Kultur of Germany is calculated to refresh, purify and invigorate the world."

The proof of German humaneness is found in the rape of Belgium, in the wholesale murder of old men, women and children, in the drowning of hundreds of helpless travellers at sea, in the "gassing" of the Allies' trenches and in the bombing of English villages and seaside resorts. The pure chastity and supreme virtue of the Huns is discovered in their brutal outrages on Belgium women, of which the Bryce and Belgium Commissions leave no room for doubt. That German Kultur does not foster an elite or privileged class is amply demonstrated by the fact that the German people are completely under the heel of the most arrogant military aristocracy the world has ever seen. It is this insolent and ruthless Kultur which proposes to refresh, purify and invigorate a decadent world, and which in the process has plunged one-half of mankind into an abyss of unexampled misery and suffering.

Stock Markets

With trading in stocks around the 1,500,000 shares mark for the last few days, the price of memberships in the New York Stock Exchange Wednesday advanced to $63,000. The last preceding sale was made last week at $61,000. According to talk on the floor of the Exchange, the increase in business has caused many inquiries for seats, and the price is expected to go higher.

Conditions in the brokerage houses throughout Wall Street are in strange contrast to those of a year ago, when the institution was closed on account of the outbreak of the war. At that time, many houses had to dismiss their employes, or reduce salaries.

H. Wilbur, board member for a well known Pittsburg wire house, was again a heavy buyer of United States Steel. P. K. Hudson bought Westinghouse, while Griesel and Rogers sold. The heaviest buying of Baldwin Locomotive was done by Josephthal, Louchheim & Co.

In connection with the advance in Continental Can. stock, it was reported the company was negotiating a $20,000,000 war order.

Total exchange of the New York Clearing House for September amounted to $9,284,363,278 and balances for the month were $518,490,334.

According to a despath from Buffalo, the Lackawanna Steel Company has granted an increase of 8 to 10 per cent in wages to its 6,000 employes.

Net income of the Pittsburg Steel Company in the year ended June 30 amounted to $2,231,800, an increase of $1,633,529, as compared with the preceding twelve months.

Notice has been given by the Tennessee Copper Company to holders of its first mortgage 6 per cent. bonds that it will redeem all of these bonds outstanding on December 1 next at 103. Interest on the bonds will cease on December 1 next.

It was reported in the financial district that several prominent financiers are to be added to the Board of Directors of the Midvale Steel Company, but no further details of any expansion of the company were available.

Soon after the new stock of the Chevrolet Motor Company was offered for private subscription by the syndicate headed by Hornblower & Weeks it was announced that there was an oversubscription. Trading in the shares began immediately on the curb and they sold as high as 99, as compared with 85, the subscription price.

What the New York Papers Are Saying.

Wall Street Journal.—The declines in the stock market have put in a stronger technical position and induced purchases by speculative interests waiting for recessions.

Financial America.—There seems to be a feeling that reactionary tendencies are natural now. Good buying appears on declines.

Commercial.—With the steel mills at capacity and prices profitable the advance in U. S. Steel seems to be warranted even without payment of dividends on the common stock.

Times.—Public interest is so great that it needs only a moderate resumption to bring in a veritable flood of buying orders.

SEVEN REASONS WHY CANADIANS SHOULD ENLIST

(By Mr. Oliver Hezzlewood.)

All young Canadians who are fit should enlist because:

First—The fate of the British Empire is at stake and Canada is a part of, and owes her life and existence to that Empire. How will non-enlisters feel if Germans become their overlords?

Second—Anything less than a most decisive victory over the Teutons and Turks will mean a weakening of the British Empire. Unless the Turks are badly beaten the Mohammedan subjects of King George will lose their respect for the British. Conspiring enemies will seek to destroy their allegiance in India and Egypt which will lead to further war and trouble. A unit of energy exerted now will save many units later.

Third — Questions transcending even Imperial ones are involved in this war. Germanic and Turkish triumph would mean, to a large extent, the destruction of the civilization that has grown out of "The Sermon on the Mount" and the "Life and Teachings of Christ." Triumphant Germany would exploit "The Will to Power" instead of "The Will to Serve"; "The Right of Might" instead of "The Right of Justice"; and "The Doctrine of Frightfulness" instead of "The Doctrine of Love." In a word, the world would have to submit to the most heartless materialism that the "Demons of the Pit" have yet devised or that human hatred has yet operated.

Forfeit Self-Respect.

Fourth—Young men who do not enlist will forfeit their self-respect. Present specious arguments will, as the years go by, be recognized as cowardly excuses, and death is preferable to loss of one's self-respect. All young men should read Begbie's verses "Fall In."

Fifth—Shirkers also lose the respect of their friends and companions. Already an interrogation point is placed after their names. Their position in the post-bellum days will be most unenviable. Humanity may sometimes forget its benefactors but it never forgets or forgives its cowards. A bright young Toronto lady was recently heard to say "All the young men with whom I am acquainted are too big cowards to enlist," and a mother who was recently asked to join a society working for the soldiers said: "I cannot, for I understand that many of the ladies who work have sons at the front. Mine have not enlisted and I cannot meet those mothers, but send me work and I will do it at home."

Democracy At Stake.

Sixth—Democracy's success depends upon its ability to rally its citizens to its defence. If voluntary enlistment fails, forced enlistment (which is undemocratic) will have to be adopted—and that will, in a measure, prove a failure of Democracy. Voluntary shirkers are enemies to the state.

Seventh—Humanity's faith in the pledges of humanity, in the triumph of right principles, in eternal justice, demands that men should place themselves at the disposal of the powers that be for the redress of humanity's wrong. Belgium, Serbia, Poland, France, Gallipoli, Scarborough, the Good Hope, the Lusitania, Prisoners in Germany and above all, the graves of the British and colonial heroes along the St. Julien, Ypres and Neuve Chapelle lines, cry aloud for your enlistment.

Market Opinions of New York Houses.

Edmund and Charles Randolph: The stock market as a whole promises to reflect more characteristics of the trading aspect of two sidedness. The advanced level must be digested. We think the technique stronger than generally supposed because of many signs of caution and large margins and reduced supply of stock for speculative purposes. The buying of the coppers and rails is of high class on the recessions and the former group may continue to display with specialties, conspicuous individual strength.

Jenks, Gwynne & Co.: We look for a two-sided stock market to continue for the present, with the tendency toward higher levels. Would buy stock on the sharp breaks, but think the strong spots should not be overlooked on which to take profits.

Post & Flagg: Popular interest is beginning to centre in the Copper group where the recent steady improvement in trade conditions to which we have repeatedly called attention, is at least making itself felt. Great strength and activity has been shown in U. S. Steel, which, with constantly improving trade, seems to warrant a higher price for the stock.

J. S. Bach & Co.: Under the influence of favourable war news the feeling in the city was confident. Copper and Steel expected to be leaders. Leather stocks expected work higher. N.Y.C., Erie, Penna., C. & O. and Norfolk & W. should do much better in near future.

Laidlaw & Co.: At this level the market is, of course, more susceptible to reaction, but judging by the demand which was disclosed on yesterday's break, the general buying power has increased rather than diminished, and there is no reason to believe that the upward movement has run its course.

Why the Boers Are Helping England

In his article, "Germany's Exit from Africa," in the "World's Work" for October, Lewis R. Freeman tells of an interview with a successful Boer banker, who, speaking of their last work with England and its results, says: "There is still an ache in some of our hearts for the things the war cost us. But the sense of justice is highly developed in the Boer, and we cannot deny that under the fair, square, helpful regime of the British, we have become better off in ten years than we would have been in fifty under Paul Kruger. They have left us our language, self-government—everything, in fact, we had before — and have brought us progressiveness and prosperity. A new national feeling—an imperial one, I mean — is developing among the Boers, and in time it will be as strong as the old one for which we poured out so much blood."

APPROVED AT OTTAWA.

Britain's New Import Duties Are Only of Temporary Nature.

OTTAWA Oct. 1.—The announcement of the British Chancellor that in the new import duties imposed by Great Britain preferential treatment will not be extended to the overseas dominions, is not regarded with disfavour at Ottawa.

It is recognized that two considerations very largely influence the situation. One is that the extraordinary obligations necessitated by the war are of a temporary character, while it is also conceded that in domestic fiscal matters the mother country is as free to take whatever action it pleases as is Canada when dealing with like problems. In any final solution as affecting the dominions the latter would likely be consulted at the imperial conference subsequent to the war.

THE WORLD OF SPORT

WORLD'S SERIES TO OPEN IN PHILADELPHIA ON FRIDAY NEXT

Special to The Examiner.

NEW YORK, Oct. 2.—The first game of the World's Series between the Phillies and Red Soxs will be played at Philadelphia on Oct 8th. This was decided to-day.

The first two games of the World's Series will be played in Philadelphia with the first clash between Philadelphia and Red Sox coming next Friday. When President Lannin of the Bostons, called tails on the toss of the coin before the National Commission, and the head on the half-dollar came up, he lost the opening of the series for his town. Previously the Commission had decided on the date of the annual baseball classic. All that is now needed to send the two teams away is good weather, and the call of an umpire. Under the schedule adopted by the Commission the Phillies and Red Sox will journey to Boston after the first two battles in Philadelphia. This will put the third and fourth games in Boston on October 11 and 12. If the fifth game is necessary it will be played in Philadelphia October 13. Boston will draw the sixth if such a game is played on the 14th. Should a seventh game be necessary to decide the championship the toss of coin will decide where it is to be played. In the event of the game being postponed the two teams will remain in the city in which the game is scheduled until it is played. There will be no dodging from one town to another to escape bad weather, should rain overtake the warring clubs in either Boston or Philadelphia. The umpires who will officiate during the series were announced as follows: National League—Chas. Rigler, Bill Klem. American League—Evans and Silk O'Laughlin. Taylor Spink, of St. Louis, was named as official scorer. Two other official scorers will be selected by the Baseball Writers' Association of the two cities. The official list of prices for seats in Boston and Philadelphia will be from $1.00 to $5.00.

Lance-Corporal McNabb Writes From Box Car

Mr J. A. McNabb, the local G.T.R. station agent, has received the following card from his son Allan with the Second Canadian Contingent:

Somewhere in France, Sept 16.

"Have been travelling through France the last 24 hours in a box car, twenty men to a car; living on hard tack and bully beef, having a regular picnic. Letter as soon as possible."

This seems to indicate the movement of Canadian troops toward the battle line in anticipation of the engagements which commenced on Sunday last.

Auto Bumped Buggy On Wrong Side of Road

Mr Teddy Firth smashed the windshield, lamp and the hood of one side of his automobile last night, when he collided with a buggy of Mr. John Crowe, R. R. No. 6, Peterborough, at the corner of Hunter and Stewart Streets. It was stated that Mr. Crowe was making a short turn of the corner and was on the wrong side of the street Mr Firth, coming up behind, was at a disadvantage as a result of the situation of the buggy and a rear-end collision was the consequence. The buggy suffered a broken back wheel. The accident happened shortly after 8 o'clock.

GRAPHIC ACCOUNT OF SUCCESS WITNESSED AT GALLIPOLI

MONTREAL, Oct. 2.—A graphic account of the scene witnessed at Gallipoli by a Dundee soldier is contained in the following letter, which has just been received in the city:

"Our presen position is a very high one overlooking miles of trenches on our right flank—both Turkish and British. At present you would not know there was a war on. The sun is shining. Everything is very calm and peaceful. In such moments I often creep along the trenches with a telescope and survey the opposing lines. I can see righ over to the sea dneaca ird hrdl hrdl rdl sea and coast of Asia. The sea is not very wide the hills have a peculiarly greenish, purple appearance, broken here and there by spreadangled pinnacles of light. As for the trenches. It is possible for you to see items of extraordinary interest. I watched through the telescope as though it had been close at hand a Turkish bomb party at work. I could see then creep down there communication trench, and then hurl the bombs. I must have been more than a mile away, yet I stood and drew in my breath, and felt a peculiar helplessness in being unable to warn our men. It was needless, however, as the bombs were chucked back with interest, the Turks taking refuge pretty far back. Then I have seen Turkish reinforcements pouring across an open to get into the trenches further up, and the French guns playing havoc with them. There is one Turkish trench the parapet of which is simply covered with a row of our own fellows, some lying just as if they were asleep. The Turks must have suffered appallingly, but it is the only consolation for the heavy price we have had to pay. The more I see of the Turks, the more I marvel at the progress we hav made. He is a desperate and fierce defensive fighter. I believe things are going very favourably for us out here, and the downfall of the Turk is absolutely inevitable. 'When?' is the question which concerns us most. I hope it will be soon.

A Maze of Trenches.

In another epistle the same writer, who has just recovered from wounds sends us another from an equally interesting narrative of his experience on his return to the firing line. He writes:

"It was rather a doleful party that disembarked from a destroyer and wound its weary way up here. I can assure you. Never did it appear more irritating to have to duck ones head an awkward corners an I grove, along below the level of the earth to the old familar places. The flies seemed worse than ever. However, here we are. We expected to be shelled to bits. The grund rocked, but, would you believe it? Not a high explosive, not one little shrapnel pellet, not even a rifle bullet, came anywhere near us. It was a discourteous act on the part of the Turks! Then word came we had to move forward to take up a nearer position. Of course, we got in then. We had to carry our guns down a precipice, and advance along a deep ravine. Our howitzers were taking away in a hoarse baritone, and shells were descending all along the ravine. However, we had our proverbial luck. None of us caught it. A hugh patch of jungle and scrub was ablaze and Batteries were belching away unconcernedly just behind. We wandered through trench after trench, but could not get near our place for some reason or another. Darkness settled down, and we slipped into a side tunnel. There we dropped down dead tired, and slept through a horrible hell of rifle and machine gun fire. We did not know where we were, how our boys had gone on, or anything. Wounded spoke of trenches captured, but knew nothing more. All we knew was that Turk and Briton had been having a pretty fierce time. With the glasses now in broad daylight a day or two later, we can see the ground seared and marred by shell holes, earth lying loose all around, and long tires of higgledy-piggledy trenches so complicated that it is impossible to tell which is British and which Turkish."

BRITISH INTENTION IS BEATING THE SUBMARINE

From the moment Great Britain entered the war on the side of justice and humanity, there were great claims made for the destruction to be wrought by the German submarine. When the German fleet was herded into seclusion behind the fortresses of Helgoland rumour was busy with the terrible submarines of the German navy, and it was spread abroad that soon the German U boats would sink so many of the British fighting ships that the German high seas fleet could quickly destroy the remainder without serious effort, and then quickly conquer England. When this did not materialize, a new programme was started by Germany's declaration of the war zone about England and attempting to destroy British commerce by torpedoing of merchantmen.

Admittedly, Germany has developed her submarines enormously. Their speed, range of travel, carrying capacity, and armament have increased by enormous strides. She has done all in her power to make them the most effective engines of destruction of their class.

What has been the result of all this? Practically nothing. In the early stages of the war England did loose several fighting ships and more recently, a transport. In addition a few merchantmen, and fishing boats have been destroyed. The merchant boats destroyed amount to but a fraction of one per cent of those engaged in the trade. On the other hand it has been reliably stated that Germany has lost practically 80 per cent. of her entire submarine fleet. The comparison could not be much gloomier for Germany.

And what is the good cause of this failure? Simply the inventive ability of the English people. From the outset, the war has developed the greatest possible competition in inventions. Germany, for years, has been developing and putting to effect every branch of applied science in the production of destructive war machines. So, she was well supplied with every powerful weapons of offence. To counteract these England has racked her brains to develop even more effective means of defence. That England has succeeded is amply demonstrated by the total failure of the German submarine programme, which, in turn, may mean the total failure of the entire German naval programme. Of course, no one knows the details of the wonderful inventions which have enabled the Allies to so completely and quickly eliminate the German submarine menace. But, several of them have been mentioned in general terms. About the time that the first British battleship was torpedoed, it was stated that an English scientist had invented a way of detecting the presence of a submarine at any point within a radius of 20 miles. A little later it was stated, and has been repeated many times since, that enormous iron nets had been placed in spots frequented by submarines, and that they were arranged as trap nets with floats. It seems fairly certain that a great many of Germany's best U boats have been caught in this way, just picked up out of the sea. Later it has been stated that England's recently organized Board of Inventions, headed by Lord Fisher, has developed an invention which, it is believed, will make a battleship entirely immune to attacks by torpedo.

The latest important development is announced from Sir Hiram Maxim. It is said that Sir Hiram has invented means for a submarine to find its exact location at any time and under any circumstances. This avoids the necessity of coming to the surface to get bearings. Thus, British invention has triumphed over German invention, and has enabled England to completely destroy the greatest menace of the German navy with comparative little effort. What we hear now of British invention to offset the German science, is but a fraction of what will be disclosed after completion of the war.

SHIP FULL OF "DEVILS" IN THE NORTH SEA

Norse Steamer Brings Ten Demented Survivors of Vessel Into Grimsby

GRIMSBY, ENG., Oct. 2—The Norwegian steamer Jonas Rein has just brought into this port ten demented survivors of the crew of thirteen belonging to the Dutch lugger Nordzee. As far as can be learned from their disjointed statements they had a remarkable experience in the North Sea, killing three of their mates, throwing them overboard, and spending some time "devil hunting."

The Nordzee was picked up derelict with the ten men all insane, presumably through over indulgence in raw liquor, which gave them an attack of religeomania or delirium. The men say that the ship was full of devils," and apparently they started on a devil hunt, throwing overboard everything movable which in their opinion would be likely to harbor devils the capstan, bunnacle, hatches, ropes, spars, sails all going into the sea. They then turned on the three unfortunate men, who, judging from the appearance of the cabin put up a desperate fight before being killed.

With no one to navigate her the Nordzee drifted helplessly till taken in tow by the Jonas Rein, the devil hunters having been transferred to that vessel after a struggle.

The authorities are undecided whether to send the sailors to Holland or to order their removal to Bow Street for extradition proceedings.

Will Make A General Appeal

Mayor Buller Receives an Important Assignment from Lieut.-Governor Hendrie

His Worship Mayor Buller has received a telegram from Lieutenant-Governor Hendrie, transmitting a copy of a cablegram that has been received from Lord Lansdowne, and which urges, on behalf of the British Red Cross Society and the French Order of St. John, an appeal for funds. Mayor Buller has been asked to organize an appeal to be made in Peterborough on Thursday, October 21st. A similar appeal will be made throughout the length and breadth of the British Empire. The money received will be devoted entirely to relieving the suffering of wounded soldiers and sailors in all parts of the kingdom.

This morning Mayor Buller expressed his sympathy with the Red Cross movement. He will submit the matter to the City Council.

LIEUT. DICK JONES IN THE CITY TO-DAY

Lieut. R. W. E. (Dick) Jones, of Bowmanville, transport officer with the 2nd Battalion, 1st Canadian Contingent, is the guest of Mr. Paul Trebilcock over the week-end. Lieut. Jones has been invalided home with typhoid, and is due to report in London on October 20th if he has recovered by that time. He returned to America on the Hesperian, the sinking of which was another chapter in the extensive experiences he has passed through, in peace times as well as at war. Lieut Jones went to Valcartier with the local quota of Royal Canadian Dragoons, and transferred to the transport.

Know Nothing Of The Petition

In connection with a statement in regard to the circulation of a petition in Peterborough asking that the present license hours be not shortened, local hotel keepers asked the Examiner to state that they know nothing of the petition and have had nothing to do with its circulation.

There are some very fine crops of roots in this section this year and the best is a field of Giant Feeding Sugar Mangels owned by Reid Hambridge of Otonabee. A specimen taken from his best will show any scratch weighed 14 pounds. His best is very even of uniform size and his entire acreage will average 700 bushels each. Mr. Hambridge prepared his ground well, buys the best seed, and gets results. The farmer that concentrates his energies and farms as the one that succeeds.

A Danish Studstrup taken from Bert Allen's field of mangels, in Smith, also weighed 14 pounds. Mr. Allen also has a field of large uniform mangels, which will make a high average.

FORD HAS NOT SEEN MESSAGE FROM HUGHES

Motor King Thinks Canadian Minister Has Shown Him Discourtesy

DETROIT, October 2. It is reported that when shown a despatch from Ottawa in which Sir Sam Hughes said he had wired Mr. Ford for a statement as to whether he was correctly reported regarding his attitude to the Allies war loan Mr. Ford said:

"I have never received any message, wired or otherwise, from Sir Sam Hughes. Furthermore, I regard it as an act of discourtesy on his part to give out the text of any message he has sent or intends to send me, without allowing me time to make an answer to it."

Ottawa despatches were that Sir Sam had telegraphed Mr. Ford on the latter's alleged statement that he would "tie a can" to the Anglo-French Financial Commission and send it out of the country.

Authorizes Loan Of $30,000,000 To Cover Cost Of Mobilization

Greek Premier Hopes an Understanding May be Reached By Drawing Serbian Troops From Austrian Border

ATHENS, Oct. 1. — The Greek Parliament on Wednesday, after ratifying the General mobilization, authorized a loan of $30,000,000 to cover expenses of the mobilization. A bill also was passed providing relief for families of soldiers in case of war.

Another bill declared martial law in the districts of Salonika, Florina, Seres and Kavia (Macedonia) and the cities of Athens and Piraeus (Greece).

Premier Warns Bulgaria.

Premier Venizelos, who was enthusiastically received, began his declaration to the Chamber amid intense silence. As he proceeded, however, he was frequently interrupted by the applause from all quarters, the Opposition joining heartily. He declared that Greece's mobilization was the inevitable answer to the move made by Bulgaria.

"The Greek people are prepared to defend the integrity of Greece territory and to withstand the efforts of any other nation to make itself predominant in the Balkans."

Concluding the Premier expressed the hope that an understanding might be reached promptly which would permit the simultaneous demobilization of Greece and Bulgaria. He declared that renewed assurance had been given Serbia within the present month that Greece was ready to support her should necessity arise, but he sincerely hoped that such a condition would not present itself.

The massing of Teutonic troops on the Serbian frontier near Orsova continues. It is estimated there are 500,000 Austro-German troops already concentrated, of whom 350,000 are Germans.

The Bulgarians also are moving troops toward Serbia. One hundred thousand men already are on the frontier, while a dozen military trains, loaded with troops and material, pass through Philippopolis daily. Bulgarian agents in Greece and Turkey recently have been purchasing all the horses available.

Four German submarines are said to have arrived at Varna, a Bulgarian port on the Black Sea.

Serbia, in order to protect herself against any possible move by Bulgaria, has been obliged to weaken her Austrian frontier by transferring 120,000 troops to the Serbo-Bulgarian front.

To this extent, at least, Bulgaria has already lent assistance to the central powers.

Opinion of London.

LONDON, Sept. 30—In London it is felt that Bulgaria has now abandoned any aggressive action she might have intended against Serbia, but an Athens despatch says the situation is still considered serious, and that Greece is going on with her preparations. The crisis at Sofia, which might have resulted in the formation of a Russophile Cabinet, is said to have been averted, the King having refused to accept the resignation of M. Toncheff, the Minister of Finance, who has pro-German tendencies.

Serbia Want War.

ROME, Sept. 30—Serbia has offered Greece the districts of Gumgeli and Doiran, in Macedonia, in exchange for participation in an expedition of the allies against Bulgaria, according to The Giornale D'Italia

CAMBRIDGE DOING ITS BIT.

Famous University Sent Many Men to Front—Training More.

LONDON, Oct. 1—Ten thousand Cambridge men are fighting or in training to fight. Already 470 have been killed, 700 have been wounded and more than 300 have won distinction on the field. These figures were given yesterday by Vice Chancellor James in his address at the beginning of the academical year.

The university's enrollment, he said, had shrank to less than one-third its normal amount. This decrease had affected the finances of the university so gravely that it would begin the year's work with a deficit of $10,000.

GOOD SHOWING OF HORSES AT THE MILLBROOK FAIR

Unfavourable Weather Resulted in a Falling Off in the Attendance—Physical Drill Squad of the 80th Battalion Was Present, Together With the Band—Accident to a Concessionnaire.

MILLBROOK, Oct. 2—Millbrook Central Exhibition was accounted for yesterday. Unfavourable weather conditions was directly responsible for a depreciation in the attendance. The number of entrants was almost as large as other years, despite the unseasonable weather that has characterized the past two or three months, and which undoubtedly minimized the time required by a large number of prospective exhibitors to prepare their exhibits for the big show some weeks ago. The directors experienced a handicap due to the loss of the main buildings which were destroyed by fire. A couple of large tents were used for the flower, fruit and vegetables, while a smaller tent did service as a secretary's office.

In years gone past Millbrook Fair has been an annual stamping ground for a lot of good horseflesh. This year was no exception to the rule. The cattle classes were well filled, and the competition for the red, blue and white ribbons particularly keen. In the main tents was found an unusually good exhibit of small fruits, grains, flowers and such things as are generally found at a country fair.

On the Midway.

As usual, the midway attracted a large following. The concessionnaires were more numerous than is the case at most fairs of a similar size. The only accident that occurred throughout the whole afternoon was inflicted on the midway, when the dark skinned gentlemen who stuck his head through a hole in the canvas and defied anyone to hit him, was struck with a fast ball. He went down in a heap, having sustained a nasty wound over the eye. Medical aid was summoned in the form of a veterinary surgeon who happened to be nearby. This particular concessionnaire went into liquidation about the time the big black recovered.

A feature of the fair was the physical drill exercise put on by members of the Peterborough detachment of the 80th Battalion. Two performances were given during the afternoon: the band of the 80th Battalion assisting. An entertaining programme of popular airs was supplied by the 57th Regimental Band, which occupied a position in the grandstand.

OUTSIDE EXHIBITS

The Millbrook Fair field contained a number of interesting and attractive exhibits, which drew large crowds of visitors, some of which are deserving of special notice:

HIGH-GRADE CLOTHING FROM GRAFTON & CO., PETERBORO.

It was generally admitted that the most attractive outside exhibit on the grounds was that erected by representatives of Messrs. Grafton & Co's. from their Peterborough branch store, 391 George Street. Had there been a special prize offered for the tastiest displayed exhibit, the red first prize ticket would certainly have gone to Grafton & Co. Its position was conspicuous and the first thing that caught attention of visitors as they entered the grounds, was Grafton's large marquee, surmounted with scores of flags, fluttering in the breeze and numerous brightly painted bulletin boards heralding the claims of their "high-grade" clothing and fur mishings. It represented an amalgamated midway of its own.

The interior of Grafton's exhibit was a reflex of the predominating styles of the season for men, young men and boys. It displayed samples of their own manufacture of high-grade Suits and Overcoats for men, as well as for youths and boys. All Union-made at their factory in Dundas. And as carried by their six branch stores in Hamilton, London, Dundas, Brantford, Owen Sound and Peterborough.

Just as the choicest produce from farm and garden was gathered together at the Millbrook Fair for all to see and to admire, so the popular Clothing House of Grafton & Co., Peterborough, gathered together their choicest samples of men's and boys' wearing apparel for Fall, not only for all to see and admire, but to possess. The suit models are smart and new, the fabrics pleasing, and the prices typifys value. In the matter of young men's overcoats, Grafton & Co. appear to have struck it right in the featuring of styles and prices for this season. There is a wide range of patterns and styles are distinctive from all other garments.

THE FORD CAR FOR FARM USE.

Perhaps no better evidence could be adduced that the farmer has recognized the Ford motor car as a practical farm necessity than was shown at the Millbrook Fair. Car after car, filled with farmers and their families drove into the Exhibition grounds, and it was worthy of notice that nine out of every ten of the cars were of the same make—they were Fords.

It was a pleasure, therefore, to Ford owners, themselves, to see such good company, and to see a well-arranged and practical exhibit of the Ford car occupying a prominent position near the main entrance. This exhibit was made by the enterprising Peterborough salesman, Mr. Jos. J. Duffus, of the Duffus Garage, 195 Simcoe Street. It is one of Mr. Duffus' pleasant pastimes to show the Ford, in all its bearings, to the farmers at their annual Fall Fairs throughout the different sections of the Counties of Durham, Northumberland and Peterborough.

The way the Ford car is blazing its way into the homes of prosperous farmers may be inferred from the following conversation:

"How long does it take you from your place to the village?" said Armstrong.

"'Bout fifteen minutes ordinarily, but I can do it in ten all right if I'm in a hurry."

"It must cost like blazes to run though," surmised the thrifty Walsh.

"No, sir. You'd be surprised how little that machine costs me. And Martha can drive it now as well as I can. She sets a store by that Ford.

"Well, it's a rare occasion that I run in here to town daytimes. Takes too much time off the farm. And you know how things go when you're not right on the job?"

"I certainly do," said Armstrong.

"Well, Martha, or sometimes my daughter, Irene, runs all the errands. It gives them a change from the housework, and when they haven't time to do the baking they can get bread from Frank here. Keeps all the horses at work all the time, too.

"The boys use the car Sundays so much that I am going to get another for Martha and me and Irene just as soon as my crops are in."

Recently a well-known Canadian farm journal, which has been featuring illustrations of the buildings of well-kept Canadian farms, made the statement that they simply could not keep Ford cars out of these illustrations, as wherever they found a well-to-do farmer, there they would find a Ford car in a conspicuous place. Another recent incident which proves that the farmer recognizes the Ford as a practical farm necessity, is the following:

"A week ago Monday the Bloomington (Wis.) creamery received 9,000 pounds of cream and out of 163 patrons making delivery, ninety-seven brought in the product in Ford cars.

These Ford demonstrations emphasize very effectively the social nature of the motor car and illustrate the very vital part the automobile is playing in the social development and advancement of the people. Along with the telephone it has done a vast amount of good in making life more interesting in the farming and rural communities as well as the large towns.

It will be quite appropriate in this connection to mention that the Ford Motor Company of Canada chose an admirable method of inspiring patriotism and stimulating recruiting, as well as of increasing the already general interest taken in their product, by the issuing of a recent number of 'The Ford Times.' It is a patriotic number from cover to cover, the material is of a patriotic nature, and serves to show that the Ford Motor Car deserves a high place among the Allies who are fighting for the peace and well being of the world.

THE SMUT KILLER.

Mr. E. Richardson of 268 Thomas Street, Peterborough, gave an interesting exhibition of the automatic seed grain pickler, known as "The Smut Killer." It is estimated that the yearly loss to farmers in Canada due to smut is over fifteen million dollars! It is claimed that every dollar of this loss might be saved if farmers had properly treated their seed grain.

The "Smut Killer" treats wheat, oats, corn, barley, rye, flax, millet, timothy, clover, alfalfa, onion, beet, and rice seeds. The capacity of this machine is 125 bushels an hour—and any child can operate it, because there are no cranks, cogs, pulleys, chains, belts, or oil required. It furnishes its own power by the law of gravitation.

This is the only machine in existence that does not soak the grain and swell them. Each kernel of grain is treated separately. Mr. Richardson had many callers watching his machine at work, and he claims that the machine will pay for itself in the increased yield on ten acres of grain over untreated seed. Farmers who have not seen "The Smut Killer" at work should communicate with Mr. Richardson, at 268 Thomas Street, Peterborough.

SPLENDID DISPLAY OF BUGGIES, CUTTERS, ETC.

As usual, the Tinney Bros., Carriage Makers, etc., of Cavanville, made a splendid showing of buggies and cutters of their own home manufacture. Every vehicle shown possessed the merit of durability and solidity, being well and strongly built, of good gearings and body. At the same time the substantial workmanship, upholstering and finish put them in a class ahead of the factory-made article for farm use.

The reputation of this firm's cutters every winter has induced them to build a stock in advance, to be ready for this season's demand.

HARNESSING THE AUTOMOBILE

Crowds of farmers constantly surrounded a novel exhibit of a new invention which combined a motor car with a power attachment for driving machinery.

It is claimed that horse-power per horse-power, the automobile engine develops power more economically than any other power plant of whatever design. In addition to this the power plan in a motor car has the tremendous advantage of maximum mobility.

This exhibit showed a Ford car with the attachment, demonstrating how the power is taken direct from the engine crank and not through the gears and transmission; it fastens to the front of the car with bolts already there. It requires no alterations, and does not disfigure the car to which it is attached in any way. It can be attached in much less time than it takes to harness a horse. The car can be driven with the attachment in place. And it would appear that the day is not far distant when practically every farmer will have a car of some description equipped with the Autopower attachment.

A fan mounted in front of the radiator, and driven by the attachment, throws enough air against the radiator of the car to keep the engine cool under all conditions. This additional air is required to take the place of the breeze the car creates in running along the road. The pulley wheel is a slip pulley, and is controlled with a perfect working clutch. The clutch permits of the engine being started independently of the pulley wheel, and when the clutch is engaged, the pulley wheel revolves, picking up the load, gradually, and without strain or jar. The clutch control lever is used also for cranking the engine. The bracket may be left on the car, if desired—improves the looks of the car—acts as a bumper, and makes the engine easier to crank. A long cranking handle, for use with the bracket, is supplied with every machine.

Autopower attachment attached to a Ford car, has been used for every kind of belt work, and actual tests on such machines as grain grinders, wood saws, water pumps, straw cutters, fanning mills, hay presses, root pulpers, ensilage cutters, (small sizes) grain separators, grindstones, churns, emery stands, machine shops, and numerous other machines, have proved that the Ford car has power enough and more than enough power, to operate all these machines, and to operate them cheaper and better than they were ever operated before, by wind, steam or gas engines.

The day before the Milbrook Fair, it was stated that 80 bushels of grain were threshed from a Massey machine by the Autopower attachment on a Ford car, in one and a half hours, on the farm of Mr. Fred D. McIntyre, near Mathers' Corners, Otonabee.

It would seem that of all the array of motor car accessories none is so practical as the Canadian Autopower attachment. As the name implies, it is a Canadian invention, and the patent rights for the world are held by the Canadian Autopower, the head offices of which are located at 110 Richmond Street, West, Toronto. The price of the attachment is only $40.

The exhibit was in charge of Mr. Charles R. Banks of the Banks' Garage, Charlotte Street, Peterborough, and Mr. M. Howland of Toronto, and both gentlemen were kept busy explaining the modus operandi to the interested crowds.

A WONDER WORKER.

"It heals like magic" is a favorite expression where Dr. Chase's Ointment is used. It works quickly, stops all itching at once, often heals in a single night. For eczema, salt rheum, barbers' itch, skin irritations or eruptions, it is a most satisfactory treatment. Being antiseptic, it prevents blood poisoning.

An Appeal From The British Red Cross Canadians to Help

Canadians will have an opportunity on October 21 of replenishing the exchequer of the Imperial Red Cross. The demands upon the resources of the British Red Cross Society and the Order of St. John make it necessary to appeal to the generosity of those who have the cause of the allies at heart and are mindful of Britain's suffering soldiers and sailors. It is understood that, following a message received from Lord Lansdowne by Sir John Hendrie, Lieutenant-Governor of Ontario, and a meeting which was held at the Parliament Buildings yesterday, an appeal will be sent to Mayors of cities and towns and Reeves of municipalities in the Province to further the taking of a collection on the date mentioned.

Cabinet Considers Question.

The meeting yesterday afternoon was attended by Cabinet Ministers and prominent citizens, including Surgeon-General G. Sterling Ryerson, Dr. R. A. Falconer, K. F. Davidson, K.C., Mrs. Plumptre, Col. Noel Marshall, Col. Sweeny, Mr. N. W. Rowell, K.C., M.P.P., Hon. Thomas Crawford, Mr. W. H. Price, M.P.P., Mr. G. H. Gooderham, M.P.P., Sir John Willison, Mr. J. E. Atkinson, Mr. W. S. Dinnick, A. C. C. Jennings, and Dr. A. H. Abbott. The idea was to organize a central committee which would take charge of the work throughout the Province. It was decided to appoint Sir John Hendrie, Lieutenant-Governor, as honorary president; Hon. T. W. McGarry, treasurer, and Dr. Abbott, secretary, and to choose the committee at a meeting to-day. The Lieutenant-Governor, Premier Hearst, Mr. N. W. Rowell, and Dr. A. H. Abbott were appointed as a sub-committee.

The money collected will go to the Imperial organization. The movement set on foot has nothing to do with local organizations, such as the Red Cross or the Patriotic Fund.

The message from Lord Lansdowne addressed to Sir John Hendrie, Lieutenant-Governor of the Province of Ontario, Government House, Toronto, was in the following terms:

Lord Lansdowne's Appeal.

I beg to inform you that the British Red Cross Society and the Order of St. John, in view of the great demands upon their resources, both in France and in the near east, have decided to make an appeal throughout the Empire, by street and other collections, upon the 21st day of October next. The money received from this appeal will be devoted entirely to relieving the suffering of our wounded soldiers and sailors from home and overseas, at the various seats of war, from all parts of the King's Dominions. We have already received generous assistance in our work, but with the increase of British and overseas forces at the front, there is a corresponding increase in our expenditure, and we shall be truly grateful to you if you will help us by organizing an appeal and sending the proceeds to us, for the objects which I have named. I shall be greatly obliged if you will kindly communicate the foregoing to your Government. Their Majesties the King and Queen and her Majesty Queen Alexandra are giving us their gracious patronage, and I trust that you will also be able to see your way to help.

A Plea For Indicated Quality in The Articles Sold By Truck Gardeners

It has frequently been remarked of the gardeners who truck their produce to the market or about town that they should specialize in some of the fruits and vegetables which they grow and offer for sale. There are many citizens who are willing to pay a special price for extra quality articles. This applies not only to the widely advertised products of the manufacturers, but also to products of the fields. There are special brands of oranges, dates, raisins, canteloupes, and the success of giving them a certain proprietary flavour and distinction almost guarantees that a slightly modified plan could be carried out by the average gardener.

Look around the market any Saturday and you will find in the potato display no attempt to set the quality of the various specimens. Some of them when cooked may have all the qualities of putty, others are flaky, dry and mealy. But they both sell at whatever price is prevailing. And the man who has the light ground suitable for potatoes receives no more than those who offer the pasty. All of which leads to the assertion that there is a difference in the quality of potatoes and there should be a difference in price. But the salesman must be in a position to guarantee the superiority of his produce which can be safely done only by carefully laid plans and experiments. He must combine the best character of ground with a good species of vegetable in this case, potatoes.

But the same applies to turnips, in which there is a wide variance in quality, from the delectable smooth variety to the stringy stuff which should be fed only to cattle. It applies also to beets, to tomatoes, some of which are extremely acid and cannot stand alone for table and pickling use. Up and down the list you will find different qualities, but apparently the gardeners are slow to discriminate. At least if they do attempt to raise high quality they make little endeavour to tell the people what they are doing, one result of which is that on the market the produce is simply potatoes, turnips, beets, etc., without any distinguishing signs of quality.

contest, however momentous, mixed up with personal conflicts and considerations. For many years there has been a conscriptionist party in England; the late Lord Roberts during his life was its leader. It made no way whatever, but still it existed; and was ready to burst into fierce and active life when this war came. As the war has gone on and as the job has reached higher and broader proportions than even the worst pessimist anticipated, this party has come into active existence; and at the present moment it is making a tremendous campaign as everybody knows.

Northcliffe Hurt.

In some respect it was unfortunate for the Conscriptionists that Lord Northcliffe should have placed himself at their head. In the first place Lord Northcliffe brought into activity all those latent jealousies and dislikes which a man of such a marvellous successful career is bound to create—especially among those of the same trade as himself. In addition few people have any confidence in his political judgment, for he has boxed the compass so frequently on almost every question that people do not think he has any profound or at least constant convictions. His methods savouring somewhat of the yellow press, have also increased the prejudice and made his appearance to the popular mind rather as flamboyant journalist anxious for a reputation and circulation than as a safe political guide. And finally he injured his prestige considerably by a series of personal attacks on Lord Kitchener which brought him up against society, the army and the popular worship of an historic idol.

There was also one other rest and even more powerful factor which worked against him and which has its interests as a phase in the history and influence of journalism. Lord Northcliffe undoubtedly brought down the last Ministry. It was his publication of the mysterious telegram of Colonel Sippington, the military writer of the Times, which complained of the want of ammunition that brought the long smouldering suspicion of the capacity of the Ministry to a head, and thereby made it impossible for Mr. Asquith to go on without disarming the Opposition and bringing in the assistance of the Ministry of all the parties of the State. This suggests the suspicion that nothing will satisfy the ambition of Lord Northcliffe except to bring down another Ministry and thus create for himself the tremendous position of the Warwick, who can make and unmake ministries as the old Warwick made and unmade kings. Such a dictatorship in the hands of a journalist and a journalist of the waywardness of Lord Northcliffe, is regarded by most people as setting up a new intolerable tyranny.

Many Protests.

Thus then conscription was dumped down by protests, not merely from the Liberal press still fiercely opposed to it on principle, but also by many of the organs of the Conscriptionist Party, such as the Morning Post and the Daily Telegraph.

In addition many leading Tories such as Lord Cromer, Lord Cecil, alarmed at the possibility of another change of Ministry in the middle of the war, and alarmed also by the dangerous cleavage in opinion which conscription would lead to, also strongly opposed it. This cleavage was indicated quite clearly by Labour representatives at the Trade Union Congress, and also by the outspoken condemnation of the Irish Party, as well of course as by the hostility of the Liberal press.

And then there came into the controversy another and an even more momentous personal issue than that of Lord Northcliffe. The man who has taken the most serious view of the public men of the country has always been Mr. Lloyd George. Between his speeches, always insisting on the seriousness of the war, and the speeches of other ministers, and notably of Mr. Asquith, there has been a marked divergency of tone, the one pessimistic, the other as invariably optimistic.

Influence of Lloyd George.

It was probably the influence of Mr. Lloyd George more than that of any other minister which brought about the change in the ministry. I have no doubt that Mr. Lloyd George has been perfectly genuine in his views. I know by private conversations with him that from the beginning and above all from the moment that he visited the front and saw the position in France, he has never wavered from the view that we were taking the war too easily, and that we required to put forth our strength more universally and more promptly than we have done. But Lord Northcliffe and others, and general conditions gave to this antagonism of view between Mr. Asquith and Mr. Lloyd George the personal aspect which is so difficult to avoid in public controversy, and thus to many the issue between Mr. Asquith and Mr. Lloyd George; in other words between the continuance and the disappearance of Mr. Asquith's premiership and the present Ministry. This form of issue was as disagreeable to Mr. Lloyd George as to Mr. Asquith; indeed no issue provokes from Mr. Lloyd George a more vehement and angry repudiation; but in spite of this, the conditions which are superior to men have transformed the discussion from the purely political to the early personal issue.

This, in turn, has led to all the refracting influences that always gather around conflicts that are partly personal and partly political. You can never estimate the real character of any public man once he becomes the standard bearer of the conflict of interest and of principle which are the material of political controversy.

The Liberals, the Labour men and the Irish are all on the side of Mr. Asquith; and in spite of the extraordinary magnetism which Mr. Lloyd George is able to exercise over men, he has made himself suspect by these three classes. In addition within the Ministry itself, there is some cleavage, personal as well as political. The Ministry is divided not only on the purely public question of Conscription but also on the personal question of the leadership of the Government. To serve under a man of the extraordinary intellectual distinction of Mr. Asquith, with a great university and legal career behind him, cannot be regarded as a humiliation to any man, however high his own position, and even though like Mr. Balfour, he has formerly been chief when now he is only a subordinate. But to serve under Mr. Lloyd George, who is not yet wholly forgiven for his terrific indictment of the governing and landed classes is a thing which many Tory leaders would find it rather hard to do. In these difficult circumstances the general tendency of men even of those who are Conscriptionists is to leave the question to the decision of the Ministry and especially to the judgment of Lord Kitchener.

Cannot Be Carried.

Personally, I think conscription cannot be carried now; and personally and subject to what the Ministry may have to say at a later stage of the war, I believe that conscription would be a dangerous thing to propose. It would certainly break up that national and party unity which has hitherto been such a strength to the British Empire in the present war. It would produce great bitterness of feeling and revive all the old party passions. And it is possible that in some great centers of population it would meet either open or silently obstructing revolt. Furthermore, the difficulty at the moment is not much men or munitions. We are still behind the number of men enlisted in the matter of equipment. On the whole then, I am inclined to the belief that the controversy will be smothered up for the moment; and that it will not revive unless some disaster should bring out the necessity of such a supreme effort on the part of this country as would be necessary to achieve that ultimate victory, a doubt of which never crosses the mind of anybody in this country.

Bomb Throwing With Conspicuous Bravery Earns Victoria Crosses

LONDON, Sept. 15. — The award of five additional Victoria Crosses is announced in the London Gazette. Four of them were won by "most conspicuous bravery" in connection with bomb throwing exploits which now constitute such an important feature of trench warfare. It was during operations southwest of Krithia, on the Gallipoli Peninsula, that Captain Gerald Robert O'Sullivan, First Battalion, Royal Inniskilling Fusiliers, won the highest award for valor. This is what he did, as narrated in the official report:

"On the night of July 1-2, 1915 when it was essential that a portion of a trench which has been lost should be regained, Captain O'Sullivan, although not belonging to the troops at this point, volunteered to lead a party of bomb throwers to effect the recapture.

"He advanced in the open under a very heavy fire, and in order to throw his bombs with greater effect, got up on the parapet, where he was completely exposed to the fire of the enemy occupying the trench. He was finally wounded, but not before his inspiring example had led on his party to make further efforts, which resulted in the recapture of the trench.

"On the night of June 18-19, 1915, Captain O'Sullivan saved a critical situation in the same locality by his great personal gallantry and good leading."

On the day following this announcement came another, more sinister, in the official casualty list, giving Captain O'Sullivan in the list of missing.

Sergeant James Sommers of the same battalion won the Victoria Cross at the same time. "When, owing to the hostile bombing, some of our troops had retired from a sap," "Sergeant Sommers remained alone on the spot until a party brought up bombs. He then climbed over the Turkish trench and bombed the Turks with good effect.

"Later on he advanced into the open under very heavy fire and held back the enemy by throwing bombs into their flank until a barricade had been established. During this period he frequently ran to and from our trenches to obtain fresh supplies of bombs."

What Second Lieutenant Herbert James, of the Worcestershire regiment, did to win the cross in the Gallipoli operations is thus described:

"On June 29, 1915 when a portion of a regiment had been checked owing to all the officers being put out of action, Second Lieutenant James, who belonged to a neighboring unit, entirely on his own initiative, gathered together a body of men and led them forward under heavy shell and rifle fire. He then returned, organized a second party and again advanced. His gallant example put fresh life into the attack.

"On July 3, in the same locality, he headed a party of bomb throwers up a Turkish communication trench, and, after nearly all his bomb throwers had been killed or wounded, he remained alone at the head of the trench and kept back the enemy single handed till a barrier had been built behind him and the trench secured. He was throughout exposed to a murderous fire."

Noticeable Improvement In Business Reported By Several Retail Stores

Several merchants have volunteered the information that the fall business season has opened up very promisingly. They have given the information that the past week has produced a noticeable improvement. A dry goods retailer remarked that the fall weather has been decidedly helpful and has influenced the new buying of seasonable goods, especially dress goods and other warmer apparel. Another influence is the fact that many women realize that the woollen market is decidedly firm and that it is better to make purchases early than to wait until prices may have gone still higher. Just yesterday another merchant said he had noticed a marked improvement in his business. No attempt has been made to cover the whole situation. These are statement that were volunteered, and they would indicate that conditions are much better than the pessimists predicted. In fact there are no evidences of the "blue ruin" that some promised for the fall and winter. Possibly even the hopes of the optimists are going to be surpassed. At any rate the cheerful tone from the business section of the city is certainly welcome, and it is to be hoped that no rift will appear in the retail trade.

Throw Away Your Eye-Glasses!

A Free Prescription

You Can Have Filled and Use at Home

Do you wear glasses? Are you a victim of eye-strain or other eye weaknesses? If so, you will be glad to know that there is real hope for you. Many whose eyes were failing, say they have had their eyes restored through the principle of this wonderful free prescription. One man says after trying it: "I was almost blind could not see to read at all. Now I can read anything without glasses, and my eyes do not water any more. At night they would pain dreadfully; now they feel fine all the time. It was like a miracle to me." A lady who used it says: "The atmosphere seemed hazy either with or without glasses but after using this prescription for fifteen days everything seems clear. I can even read fine print without glasses." It is believed that thousands who wear glasses can now discard them in a reasonable time, and multitudes more will be able to strengthen their eyes so as to be spared the trouble and expense of ever getting glasses. Eye troubles of many descriptions may be wonderfully benefited by following the simple rules. Here is the prescription. Go to any active drug store and get a bottle of Bon-Opto. Fill a two ounce bottle with warm water, drop in one Bon-Opto tablet and allow to dissolve. With this liquid bathe the eyes two to four times daily. You should notice your eyes clear up perceptibly right from the start and inflammation will quickly disappear. If your eyes are both ering you, even a little, take steps to save them now before it is too late. Many hopelessly blind might have been saved if they had cared for their eyes in time. The Valmas Drug Co., of Toronto, will fill the above prescription by mail if your druggist cannot.

THE WEATHER

While the month of September had not a rainfall equal to that of the preceding month of August, it was above the average. Rain fell on 14 days to a depth of 3.48 inches. There were five thunderstorms, several of them severe. An unusually heavy downpour occurred on the 15th, when almost an inch and a half fell in three-quarters of an hour. The highest temperature was on the 15th with 82 degrees; the lowest on the 25th, with 35 degrees. Tender vegetables were touched for the first time on the 23rd. W.P.

The Growth Of Mormonism

Splendid Lecture by Rev. C. S. Applegarth, B.A., Last Night

Rev. C. S. Applegarth, B.A., of Islington Methodist Church, delivered a splendid lecture to a large and appreciative gathering at George Street Methodist Church last night on "The Growth of Mormonism." Mr. Applegarth has travelled extensively among the Mormon settlements of the West and has made a special study of the Mormon situation in Canada for years. As he stated last night, the Mormons are very active in Canada. There are about 20,000 in this country, chiefly in Alberta. There they are erecting now a magnificent temple in Cardstone to cost half a million dollars, where the rites of the Church will be performed.

A missionary training college has also been completed in Raymond, Alberta, where Mormon missionaries are being trained to evangelize Canada to their faith. They work among all nationalities, immigrants being especially favoured, and urged to migrate where their vote is of value to the Mormon Church. Every Mormon male convert agrees to give one entire year of his life without salary as a missionary to go wherever sent.

To-day there are 3,000 Mormon missionaries at work.

A short time ago Mormon dignitaries from Salt Lake City prophesied at a conference in Cardstone that in less than ten years the Mormon Church would have political control of Alberta. The prophecy is on the way to fulfillment. Alberta has elected a Mormon to her Legislature, John William Wolff, M.P.P.

Eggs At 30c Dozen The Market Feature

Eggs at 30c a dozen was a decided feature of this morning's market. There were none in sight at eleven o'clock, and previously the offering had been light. Butter opened at 38c but was rather plentiful and could be bought near the close at 35c. Chickens were also in good supply, and sold from 40c each to 60c each, there were a few ducks ranging around 75c each. There were not many offerings of potatoes, which sold on a basis of 80c a bushel. Apples and the various vegetables were fairly plentiful.

Smith Council In Session

Members of the Municipal Council of the Township of Smith met in the County Council Chamber, Peterborough, on Friday, Sept. 17th, at nine o'clock. All the members were present, with Reeve McKee in the chair. The minutes of the last meeting were read and approved.

Mr. Stephen Harrison addressed the Council and presented a petition signed by seventeen ratepayers, requesting that the Council take no action as regards opening up that portion of the road allowance lying between the 17th and 18th Concession east of the road running between Lots 30 and 31. Two letters were received from Mr. O. A. Langley, stating that, should a by-law be passed opening above road, in the interest of clients, he would take proceedings in Court to have it quashed for non-compliance with the provisions of the Municipal Act. It was decided that no action be taken at the present time.

By-law No. 740 was passed, giving the treasurer authority to borrow $1,500 from the Royal Bank. This amount is charged in collector's roll for commuted statute labour.

By-law No. 741 was passed, repealing By-law No. 739, and issuing debentures for $3,300 for S. S. No. 9, Smith.

Colonization Road By-law No. 742 was read a first and second time, and the clerk was instructed to forward the same to the Hon. Minister of Public Works for his approval. It is the intention of the Council, if a grant of $300 is secured from the Government, to spend $600 on the Buckhorn Road during the season of 1916.

A letter was received from Mr. A. E. Peck, requesting the Council to pay for the keep at the rate of one dollar per day for all recruits from the township entering the city hospitals for minor operations, such as varicose veins, to fit them for overseas service, such operations to be free. A motion was passed and the Clerk instructed to write Mr. Peck, stating that the Council would assume the expense.

A motion instructing the County Treasurer to remove taxes amounting to $1.09 against Island No. 8, Stony Lake for 1911. Such taxes having been charged in error.

The treasurer was instructed to pay the following accounts: Isaac Archer, work on road, $9.50; Fred Boyce, work on road, $11.80; Review Printing Co., advertising, $2.52; Climax Machinery Co., repairs of grader, $2.60; A. McDonald Estate, timber, $12.29; Municipal World, stationery, $5.00; Sawyer-Massey, repairs crusher, $35.00; St. Joseph's Hospital, keep of I. Bonsoleim $98.00.

Voice of The People

Editor of The Examiner:

Sir,—Could you inform me through the medium of your valued paper if $1.85 per day is all the pay a married man receives in the 80th Battalion, if they are quartered in the city all winter. I feel I should join myself but being a married man with a family I should like my children better provided for than that before I go.

I have always had a steady job and good wages myself, but the reason I ask you this is a friend of mine enlisted a weeks ago in the 59th Battalion, and when the 80th was formed the men of the 59th here were given the choice either to go to Kingston with the 59th or stay here and help to form the 80th. So my friend stayed here, and he has told me he has had no separation allowance yet, although the men were told if they stayed with the local Battalion they would receive it just the same.

DAILY READER.

All married men who enlist in the Canadian Overseas Forces are entitled to separation allowance, no matter where they are stationed, and this of course applies to the members of the local Battalion.—Editor.

Three Thousand Shells Fired in Five Minutes Steadily For Four Days

British Officer Says That For Once the Germans Were Second Best in Weight of Metal---Four Shells to Every Yard.

LONDON, Oct. 4.—"As in the earlier battles of the war, the victory in the latest fighting was mainly a question of which side had the biggest supply of shell our supply was unlimited, but the Germans had to economize in ammunition, therefore they lost," writes a London artillery officer in a letter giving a detailed account of the past week's battle in northern France.

"There was no element of surprise in our success," says the officer. "Although the actual advance came on Saturday we knew of the plan on the previous Sunday, and began preliminary artillery operations on Tuesday. The Germans must have known what was up as soon as we began systematic wire cutting operations along the extensive front. They tried to turn the tables on us by firing into our wire, but they didn't have half enough guns or ammunition to keep up the pace we set.

Same Story All Week.

"On Tuesday we began the work of wire cutting and parapet pounding. Eighteen pounders with shrapnel and howitzers with high explosives started at dawn and continued throughout the day systematically smashing the German defences. At night the Germans came out to repair the damage but were swept back by the most prodigal of machine gun fire.

"Wednesday was a repetition of Tuesday. There was no sitting of ammunition anywhere along our line, although the number of guns in action was wonderful. It was noticeable that the Germans already were husbanding their ammunition, making only a feeble reply, and their guns were palpably inferior in number and strength to ours. Wednesday night repair work again was attempted with tremendous German losses. Thursday was the same story.

"On Friday we intensified our fire. All along our section of the front the German wire was down and parapets were badly breached. The Germans had brought up more guns and ammunition and increased their artillery fire, attacking our trenches and searching for our batteries and observing stations.

3,000 Shell in Five Minutes.

"But the weight of our inexhaustible supplies of shell began to tell. The German front trenches became well night uninhabitable from constant pounding, and it was evident that the front line was very lightly held.

"Meanwhile the superiority of our aeroplane equipment also was evident. The numbers of our machines were so great that we were able to keep observers in the air above the German lines at all times, with plenty of machines in reserve to foil every German attempt to make observations above our positions.

On Friday night the machine gun fire was like rain, falling constantly on the German positions and preventing repair work on the wire. Then at 4.25 o'clock Saturday morning the real cannonade began. Along our section, of say five miles, there must have been 3,000 shells fired in five minutes. The bombardment was the biggest thing in the history of the war. The flash of guns was so continuous as to give an almost unbroken light in the grey dawn.

Then the Infantry Went in.

"The earth shook as in continuous ague. We had guns everywhere, and all were firing their hardest at carefully registered points in the German trenches. For every yard of trench four shells fell within five minutes, and each shell had a radius of destruction of at least twenty yards.

"After five minutes there was a moment's pause. The guns were switched to longer ranges, and the infantry began its work. Now it was the guns' business to search out the enemy's supports. This second bombardment was not so intense, but was fierce enough to shake the earth. It lasted fully thirty minutes, and then the guns slackened and we began to get news of how things were going.

"Our men had carried the first trench with ease, the second with some loss, and were now engaged in subduing the trench forts that still held out. At noon the task set for our section had been accomplished. During the afternoon it became evident that great German reinforcements had arrived, and they shelled us heavily, but we held the ground won."

A MILLION MEN ARE LOCKED IN DEATH STRUGGLES

New Offensive on the Western Front is Now a Week Old—Gains Made Have Been Consolidated

LONDON, Oct. 4.—The first week of the allies' great offensive ended Saturday with nearly a million men locked in death struggles in the Artois locked in death struggles in the Artois and the Champagne and no diminution in the fury of the battle. Before another week a grand assault may bring more millions into the combat, extending the Artois and Champagne fighting to every sector from Alsace to the sea.

The losses on both sides cannot be accurately estimated. The allies claim the capture of nearly 30,000 prisoners and report total German casualties of more than 150,000. Berlin reports that more than 12,000 British and French prisoners have been taken and describes the allies' losses as "enormous," but attempts no estimate of total casualties.

The net result of the first week of what may develop into the greatest battle in the world's history, as drawn from the British, French, and German official statements, are believed to be these:

First — The British have gained ground on a five-mile front, completing their occupation of Loos and occupying important positions near Lens. North of Loos, the British have only a small part of the newly captured ground through German counter-attacks.

Second—The French have recaptured Souches and an important height west of Vimy, and continue to make slight progress in the Vimy region south-west of Lens. The heaviest German counter-attacks apparently have failed to win back any of the ground taken by the French.

Third—The French have advanced from a mile or two and one-half miles on a 15-mile front in the Champagne region, and at points are within two miles of the Bazancourt-Challerange Railway, one of the lines supplying the German Crown Prince's armies in the Argonne.

Fourth — The German attempt to halt the Allies' offensive by making a vigorous attack in the Arzonne was a failure.

Booty taken by the allies, according to Paris official claims, now includes nearly 200 German guns.

Italy Ready to Send 200,000 Soldiers to the Balkans

GENEVA, Oct. 4.—Italy is preparing to send 200,000 troops to the Balkans to the aid of Serbia when the expected Austro-German-Bulgar offensive begins, according to Reme advices to-day.

French and English artillerymen are arriving at Belgrade almost daily. A detachment of Russian gunners is reported to have been sent to the Serbian front more than a month ago.

New York Doctor Vividly Describes War's Horrors

NEW YORK, October 4.—The price in human suffering which France is paying in this great war was vividly described Thursday by Dr. Mary M. Crawford, of 200 New York avenue, Brooklyn, who returned on the French liner Espagne after ten months of service with the American Ambulance Hospital at Neuilly, near Paris. Dr. Crawford, who was the first woman to become an ambulance surgeon in this country, said that the despair of the doctors and nurses tending the thousands of wounded and dying became so great at times that they felt like jumping into the Seine to avoid witnessing any more.

"Patching up and nursing maimed soldiers can be made a fairly cheerful business," said Dr. Crawford, "but when a poor peasant who a few weeks before perhaps was peacefully tilling his potato patch dies in spite of all that can be done to save him, I felt the desperate reality of war. Those were the times when I felt that this war must certainly be the last great world war. One who has seen the vast amount of suffering that I have cannot but believe that war, when men can kill each other on so vast a scale as they do to-day, has become positively atrocious. It is the general feeling among the medical people with whom I associated in Paris that this war represents the last struggle between mediaevalism and modern civilization."

TAKE "CASCARETS" IF HEADACHY, BILIOUS AND CONSTIPATED

Get a 10-cent box.
Sick headache, biliousness, coated tongue, head and nose clogged up with a cold—always trace this to torpid liver; delayed, fermenting food in the bowels or sour, gassy stomach.
Poisonous matter clogged in the intestines, instead of being cast out of the system is re-absorbed into the blood. When this poison reaches the delicate brain tissue it causes congestion and that dull, throbbing, sickening headache.
Cascarets immediately cleanse the stomach, remove the sour, undigested food and foul gases, take the excess bile from the liver and carry out all the constipated waste matter and poisons in the bowels.
A Cascaret to-night will surely straighten you out by morning. They work while you sleep—a 10-cent box from your druggist means your head clear, stomach sweet and your liver and bowels regular for months.

"Do you think I could learn to be a moving picture actor?" "Sure you could. Just remember this one thing. A heaving chest denotes surprise, fear, hate, or any other emotion."—Louisville "Courier-Journal."

Russia is Expected To Declare War on Bulgaria Ultimatum Expires To-day

Bulgaria Will Be the Thirteenth European Power to Enter the Great Conflict---Greece's Entry on Side of Allies Expected---Rumania's Course Still in Doubt.

LONDON, Oct. 4.—Russia is expected to declare war on Bulgaria to-morrow, bringing the thirteenth European power into the great conflict.

The Russian ultimatum to Bulgaria expires at four p.m. to-day. Bulgaria, it is believed here, either will ignore it or will answer with an evasion. The Czar's Minister at Sofia has made preparations to leave with his staff to-night. A Petrograd despatch to-day said he had made arrangements for turning over Russian interests at Sofia to a neutral legation.

Greece's entry on the side of the Allies is expected as a matter of course, though the Greek war declaration may be delayed for several days.

Mobilization of Greek armies has not been completed and there is no need for great haste in Athens.

Rumania's course is still in doubt. Berlin despatches to-day claimed that Rumania will remain neutral, but there was no confirmation in despatches from Bucharest.

Hostilities may begin in the Balkans this week. Fifty thousand Bulgarian troops already have arrived at the Serbian frontier, ready for the first blow. Bulgaria's mobilization is practically completed. Athens despatches to-day said three-fifths of the Bulgars' strength is to be thrown against Serbia, and two-fifths against Greece.

Czar Ferdinand apparently is confident of Rumanian neutrality and has but few troops stationed along the Rumanian frontier.

One Athens despatch to-day declared it was reported from Vienna that an Austro-German attack on Serbia is to begin to-day or to-morrow, Bulgaria entering the war a few hours later.

BUCHAREST, Oct. 2.—Field Marshal Von Mackensen, with 250,000 troops withdrawn from the Russian front, has arrived at the Serbian frontier, and will direct the Austro-German march on Constantiople, according to the newspaper Epochs. The Austro-Germans have about two thousand guns of all calibres, the newspaper reported. Gen. Mackensen is said to have established headquarters at Versecz. The above report is not confirmed from any other source. It is a fact, however, that an Austro-German centre, commanded by Mackensen, has made no progress against the Russians for about ten days. Despatches from Swiss sources hinted that troops for the Balkan campaign were being withdrawn from Mackensen's army.

PETROGRAD, Oct. 3.—(Russian Official)—Last night reports say there was a heavy German artillery bombardment southeast of Jacobstadt. East of Swenton our cavalry seized the Village of Postavin.

In a fierce bayonet action we seized the cemetery at Nese and occupied three villages at the southern end of Lake Narotche.

BERLIN, Oct. 3.—The German official report this afternoon admits the loss of a section of trenches ot the French east of Neuville in a night engagement.

PARIS, Oct. 3.—The French official statement to-day reports the repulse of four German attempts to retake lost trenches between Souchez and the Givenchy woods. There was a heavy German bombardment to the rear of the French lines in the Suippes Valley with asphyxiating shells. The French artillery reduced several enemy batteries to silence.

BERLIN, Oct. 3.—It is officially reported the French airship Alsace has been brought down in the Rethel district and the crew captured.

LONDON, Oct. 3.—Field Marshal French reports: "We delivered a counter attack Friday night and achieved our objective, which was two German trenches southwest of Fosse. No other events on our fronts."

PARIS, Oct. 3.—A squadron of sixty French aeroplanes bombarded the railway station of Voucheres and the aviation grounds near Challerange.

PETROGRAD, Oct. 3.—The Russian Minister of Foreign Affairs says if Bulgaria persits in the traitorous course she must answer to Russia. The Bulgarian ultimatum has not been presented yet, but is expected within a short time.

CAPETOWN, Oct. 2.—It is officially announced that a mob in Johannesburg tried to assassinate General Smuts. Smuts is pro-British.

LONDON, Oct. 2.—Germans are attacking British positions night and day near Loos. Fierce assault made this afternoon was repulsed, and the German attacking force annihilated.

PARIS, Oct. 2.—A unofficial report here declares Lens has been taken by the Allies to-day, but this is not confirmed.

ATHENS, Oct. 2.—The Grecian Premier to-day said Greece and Rumania would rally to Servia's aid if attacked by Bulgaria.

Prince's Automobile Blown to Pieces But He Escapes

PARIS, October 4.—An officer attached to the British staff who returned to Paris yesterday, stated that the Prince of Wales had a miraculous escape from death during the Battle of Loos.

Strictly accurate details are that the Prince was speeding towards the front in an automobile. He ordered the driver to pull up at the foot of a knoll while the Prince mounted and watched the progress of the fighting through his binoculars.

While he was standing on the hill, a big shell fell on the automobile, utterly destroying the car and blowing the driver to pieces. Reproached with running into danger which the Heir to the Throne must avoid, the Prince replied: "Well, I have plenty of brothers."

WOUNDED TELL OF THE DARING FRENCH CHARGE

PARIS, Oct. 4.—From the accounts given by wounded soldiers who have returned from the front the story of the French charge which marked the commencement of the new offensive movement has been partially pieced together. One point on which there is general agreement is the great pace with which the movement was executed.

A colonial infantryman who was wounded in the fighting between Souchez and Neuville on the 25th pays:—

"Our captain said to us at the moment for the charge: 'You'll have to run hard for we are in the first wave of men.' And we did run. When we came to the first trench of men we leaped over it with a yell of the savages. You could hear nothing but the noise of battle, of our neighbors and the roar of the guns. Bullets whistled about everybody's ears. Men on one side dropped from machine guns.

"Our captain cried: 'Stop at that redoubt.' We were now in the first machine gun zone. Bullets poured as thick as hail—several officers were made straight for a tunnel. We lay panting there and then—

"You needed to be quick in a charge like that. A moment meant death. But speed also had come.

"Lieut. Cousin, of the Colonial Infantry, who was wounded in the Argonne, declared protests at once that German uniformed women were among the enemy.

"It was only at the last moment when they realized that their line could not stand that they dropped their rifles and threw up their hands. Lieutenant Cousin then threw his men on the enemy with fresh vigor and revolvers.

"I was in one of these encounters that I was wounded. I was fighting with two Germans. I killed one of them who had fired off my rifle into my face while a sergeant behind me killed the other."

Little Pitchers.

In a certain small town there are two young women whose favorite occupation has been to discuss the affairs of their neighbors. Having met for that purpose one afternoon, they found themselves blocked in the indulgence of their pastime by the presence of the small daughter of the hostess. A slight indisposition of some sort prevented sending the child out of doors, so they were forced to put up with her presence, doing their best, however, to nullify it.

Something eatable was produced and an absorbing new game invented which she could play quite by herself, so they breathed freely and began.

The talk at length reached a point involving the latest scandal of the neighborhood and the retailing of some inside information which must not become public property. A hurried look at the child on the floor found her apparently so occupied with her gume that it seemed quite safe to go on if one observed a decent discretion. Voices were accordingly lowered and direct allusion veiled, but when the matter had been thrashed out to their satisfaction the child raised her eyes and remarked with deliberation and emphasis:

"I hear, I know, I understand, and I'll bet it!"—New York Times.

Books and Their Care.

Books on shelves may be seriously injured if packed too tightly. When quickly pulled out for use the top of the book is likely to come off. Moreover, the constant pressure, if too great, will loosen the whole back in time and the friction in putting upon and taking from the shelf mars the covers. On the other hand, a reasonable amount of lateral pressure is necessary. If placed on the shelves too loosely the leaves tend to open and admit dust, dampness and consequent mildew. In the case of heavy volumes the weight of the leaves will be found resting on the shelves if the books are placed too loosely. This is likely to make the backs concave. Badly painted shelves are another source of injury to books. Care should be taken when paint or varnish is used that the surface is perfectly smooth, hard and dry when the books are put in place and that the surface will remain so during variation of temperature or humidity.—House Beautiful.

An Anecdote of Pope.

There is an old anecdote of Alexander Pope concerning one of the old watermen who were employed for many years in rowing Pope on the Thames. Pope was in the habit of having his sedan chair lifted into the punt. If the weather was fine he let down the glasses; if cold he pulled them up. He would sometimes say to the waterman:

"John, I am going to repent some verses. Take care to remember them the next time I go out."

When that time came Pope would say:

"John, where are the verses I told you of?"

"I have forgotten them, sir."

"John, you are a blockhead. I must write them down for you."

John said that no one thought of saying when speaking of him, "Mr. Pope," but that he was always called "Mr. Alexander."

CHAPTER XIX.

I Meet Mrs. Titus.

WHILE we were crossing the muddy stream my secretary, his teeth chattering with cold and excitement combined, related the story of the night.

"We were just starting off for the boathouse up the river, according to plans, Max and Rudolph and I with the two boats, when the countess came down in a macklntosh and a pair of gum boots and insisted upon going along with us. She said it wasn't fair to make you do all the work and all that sort of thing. While we were arguing with her—and it was getting so late that I feared we wouldn't be in time to meet you—we heard some one shouting on the opposite side of the river. The voice sounded something like Britton's, and the countess insisted that there had been an accident and that you were hurt, Mr. Smart, and nothing would do but we must send Max and Rudolph over to see what the trouble was. It was raining cats and dogs, and I realized that it would be impossible for you to get a boatman on that side at that hour of the night—it was nearly 1—so I sent the two Schmicks across. I've never seen a night as dark as it was. The two little lanterns bobbing in the boat could hardly be seen through the torrents of rain, and it was next to impossible to see the lights on the opposite landing stage—just a dull, misty glow.

"To make the story short, Mrs. Titus and her sons were over there, with absolutely no means of crossing the river. It took two trips over to fetch the whole party across. Raining pitchforks all the time, you understand. Mrs. Titus was fonning at the mouth because you don't own a yacht or at least a launch with a canopy top or a limousine body or something of the sort.

"I didn't have much of a chance to converse with her. The countess tried to get her upstairs in the east wing, but she wouldn't climb another step. I forgot to mention that the windlass was out of order and she had to climb the hill in mud six inches deep. The Schmicks carried her the last half of the distance. She insisted on sleeping in the hall or the study—anywhere but upstairs. I assumed the responsibility of putting her in your bed, sir. It was either that or"—

I broke in sarcastically, "You couldn't have put her into your bed, I suppose."

"Not very handily, Mr. Smart," he said in an injured voice. "One of her sons occupied my bed. Of course it was all right, because I didn't intend to go to bed, as it happened. The older son went upstairs with the countess. She gave up her bed to him, and then she and I sat up all night in the study waiting for a telephone message from you. The younger son explained a good many things to us that his mother absolutely refused to discuss, she was so mad when she got here. It seems she took it into her head at the last minute to charter a special train, but forgot to notify us of the switch in the plans. She traveled by the regular train from Paris to some place along the line, where she got out and waited for the special which was following along behind, straight from Paris too. A woeful waste of money, it seemed to me. Her idea was to throw a couple of plain clothes men off the track, and, by George, sir, she succeeded. They thought she was changing from a train to some place in Switzerland and went off to watch the other station. Then she sneaked aboard the special, which was chartered clear through to Vienna. See how clever she is? If they followed on the next train or telegraphed it would naturally be to Vienna. She got off at this place, and—well, we have her with us, sir, as snug as a bug in a rug."

"What is she like Fred?" I inquired. I confess that I hung on his reply.

"I have never seen a wet hen, but I should say on a guess that she's a good bit like one. Perhaps when she's thoroughly dried out she may not be so bad, but"—he drew a long, deep breath—"but upon my word of honor she was the limit last night. Of course one couldn't expect her to be exactly gracious, with her hair plastered over her face and her hat spoiled and her clothes soaked, but there was really no excuse for some of the things she said to me. I shall overlook them for your sake and for the countess'." He was painfully red in the face.

"The conditions, Fred," I said, "were scarcely conducive to polite persiflage."

"But, hang it all, I was as wet as she was," he exploded so violently that I knew his soul must have been tried to the utmost.

"We must try to make the best of it," I said. "It will not be for long." The thought of it somehow sent my heart back to its lowest level.

He was glum and silent for a few minutes. Then he said, as if the thought had been on his mind for some hours: "She isn't a day over forty-five. It doesn't seem possible, with a six foot son twenty-six years old."

Grimly I explained, "They marry quite young when it's for money, Fred."

"I suppose that's it," he sighed. "I fancy she's handsome, too, when she hasn't been ruined upon."

We were halfway up the slope when he announced nervously that all of my dry clothing was in the closet off my bedroom and could not be got at under any circumstance.

"But," he said, "I have laid out my best frock coat and trousers for you and a complete change of linen. You are quite welcome to anything I possess, Mr. Smart. I think if you take a couple of rolls at the bottom of the trousers they'll be presentable. The coat may be a little long for you, but"—

My loud laughter cut him short.

"It's the best I could do," he said in an aggrieved voice.

I had a secret hope that the countess would be in the courtyard to welcome me, but I was disappointed. Old Gretel met me and wept over me, as if I was not already sufficiently moist. The chef came running out to say that breakfast would be ready for me when I desired it; Blatchford felt of my coat sleeve and told me that I was quite wet; Hawkes had two large, steaming toddies waiting for us in the vestibule, apparently fearing that we could get no farther without the aid of a stimulant. But there was no sign of a single Titus.

Later I ventured forth in Poopendyke's best suit of clothes, the one he uses when he passes the plate on Sundays in faraway Yonkers. It smelled of moth balls, but it was gloriously dry, so why carp? We sneaked down the corridor past my own bedroom door and stole into the study.

Just inside the door I stopped in amazement. The countess was sound asleep in my big armchair, a forlorn but lovely thing in a pink peignoir. Her rumpled brown hair nestled in the angle of the chair; her hands drooped listlessly at her sides; dark lashes lay upon the soft white cheeks; her lips were parted ever so slightly, and her bosom rose and fell in the long swell of perfect repose.

Poopendyke clutched me by the arm and drew me toward the door or I might have stood there transfixed for heaven knows how long.

"She's asleep," he whispered.

It was the second time in twelve hours that some one had intimated that I was blind.

The door creaked villainously. The gaunt, ecclesiastical tails of my borrowed frock coat were on the verge of being safely outside with me when she cried out, whereupon I swiftly transposed myself and stuck my head through the half open door.

"Oh, it's you!" she cried, in a quavery voice. She was leaning forward in the chair, her eyes wide open and eager.

I advanced into the room. A look of doubt sprang into her face. She stared for a moment and then rather piteously rubbed her eyes.

"Yes, it is I," said I, spreading my arms in such a way that my hands emerged from the confines of Poopendyke's sleeves. (Upon my word, I had no idea that he was so much longer than I.) "It is still I, countess, despite the shrinkage."

"The shrinkage?" she murmured, slowly sliding out of the chair. As she unbent her cramped leg she made a little grimace of pain, but smiled as she limped toward me, her hand extended.

"Yes, I always shrink when I get wet," I explained, resorting to facetiousness.

Then I bent over her hand and kissed it. As I neglected to release it at once, the cuff of Poopendyke's best coat slid down over our two hands, completely enveloping them. It was too much for me to stand. I squeezed her hand with painful fervor and then released it in trepidation.

"Poopendyke goes to church in it," I said vaguely, leaving her to guess what it was that Poopendyke went to church in, or, perhaps, knowing what I meant, how I happened to be in it for the time being. "You've been crying!"

Her eyes were red and suspiciously moist.

As she met my concerned gaze, a wavering, whimsical smile crept into her face.

"It has been a disgustingly wet night," she said. "Oh, you don't know how happy I am to see you standing here once more, safe and sound, and—and amiable. I expected you to glower and growl and"—

"On a bright, glorious, sunshiny morning like this?" I cried. "Never! I prefer to be graciously refulgent. Our troubles are behind us."

"How good you are!" After a moment's careful scrutiny of my face she added, "I can see the traces of very black thoughts, Mr. Smart, and recent ones."

"They were black until I came into this room," I confessed. "Now they are rose tinted."

She bent her slender body a little toward me, and the red seemed to leap back into her lips as if propelled by magic. Resolutely I put my awkward, ungainly arms behind my back and straightened my figure. I was curiously impressed by the discovery that I was very, very tall and she very much smaller than my memory recorded. Of course I had no means of knowing that she was in bedroom slippers and not in the customary high heeled boots that gave her an inch and a half of false stature.

"Your mother is here," I remarked hurriedly.

She glanced toward my bedroom door.

"Oh, what a night!" she sighed. "I did all that I could to keep her out of your bed. It was useless. I did cry, Mr. Smart. I know you must hate all of us."

I laughed. "'Love thy neighbor as thyself,'" I quoted. "You are my neighbor, countess. Don't forget that. And it so happens that your mother is also my neighbor at present, and your brothers too. Have you any cousins and aunts?"

"I can't understand how any one can be so good natured as you," she sighed.

The crown of her head was on a level with my shoulder. Her eyes were lowered. A faint line of distress grew between them. For a minute I stared down at the brown crest of her head, an almost ungovernable impulse pounding away at my sense of discretion. I do take credit unto myself for being strong enough to resist that opportunity to make an everlasting idiot of myself. I knew even then that if a similar attack ever came upon me again I should not be able to withstand it.

All this time she was staring rather pensively at the second button from the top of Poopendyke's coat, and so prolonged and earnest was her gaze that I looked down in some concern, at the same time permitting myself to make a nervous, jerky and quite involuntary digital examination of the aforesaid button. She looked up with a nervous little laugh.

The merchant who conducts his business according to the method of the last century is not giving his customers the service they are entitled to. The spirit of the new century is to do more than to merely turn goods over at a profit. It is to really earn that profit by giving real service, accommodation and reliable advice. The modern merchant must know his goods thoroughly and what is best adapted to every household requirement.

That class of merchant invariably advertises. That is the one sure test of his being abreast of the times.

The Doctor Knows

No one better than he understands the value of insurance to those who are fortunate enough to be carrying it at the supreme moment. Experience has told him what a consolation it is at the time of sorrow. He knows, too, how prone to accident and to sudden, unexpected illness we mortals are.

Armed with this knowledge is it any wonder the medical profession is one of the occupations having the highest percentage of insured amongst its members?

In the face of his special knowledge, the doctor who neglected to protect his life by adequate insurance would be unusually careless of the welfare of those dependent upon him. Medical men have been particularly attracted by the Canada Life Monthly Income Policy. It is the form of policy best suited to the professional man. It is sure protection plus satisfactory investment and it is issued by the

PEACH CREAM PIE

Mix 3 tablespoons flour with cup of sugar and ½ teaspoon of salt; add 2 beaten eggs, then add 1 pint of scalded milk and cook in double boiler, stirring frequently. Remove from the fire, cool and flavor with 1 teaspoon of vanilla. Whip ½ pint of heavy cream until still and add 2 tablespoon powdered sugar and a few drops of almond extract. Fill a baked pastry shell with stewed peaches, pour in the custard, cover with the cream and serve immediately.

PICKLED PEACHES.

Eight pounds of fruit, 5 pounds of sugar, 1 pint of vinegar, 2 ounces of stick cinnamon and 2 ounces of whole cloves. Pare the peaches and stick three cloves in each. Boil the sugar, vinegar and cinnamon five minutes, put in the peaches a few at a time, cook until they may be easily pierced with a fork, then take them out and put in jar. Boil the syrup down until thick, pour it over the peaches and seal while hot.

BOILED FROSTING

Beat whites of 2 eggs until stiff and dry. Boil 2 cupfuls of sugar and ½ cupful of water until the syrup threads from the spoon. Do not stir after boiling begins. Pour the syrup into egg whites and beat until it is ready to spread. Season with one teaspoon of vanilla when cooled, but before it hardens.

DUTCH CHOW CHOW.

Two quarts or more of green tomatoes, 2 quarts white onions, 1 head cauliflower, cut or chop all these in small pieces. Scald the cauliflower, divided into small clusters, 3 minutes. Make brine of four quarts of water and 1 pint of fine salt. Let mixture stand in the cold brine. Scald all together in the morning, bring to a boil, then drain. Mix 1 cup of sugar, 2 tablespoons of mustard, tablespoon of tumeric powder in a little vinegar to make a smooth paste, then add to 2 quarts of boiling vinegar and cook until it thickens, put altogether and heat through. If desired, celery and green string beans may also be added to the above mixture.

A TOMATO RELISH.

Chop 12 large tomatoes ripe and green mixed with one cup of seeded raisins, six onions, grated rind and juice of two oranges and two lemons. Add to these one-half bottle of capers, one and one-half tablespoons dry mustard, one teaspoon curry powder, one teaspoon of mace, one-fourth teaspoon of cayenne pepper, one and one-half cups of vinegar, one tablespoon of salt, two tablespoons of horseradish, one teaspoon of celery salt, one teaspoon of kitchen bouquet, one and one-half cups of brown sugar. Mix well and cook for two hours.

"Beware, my son, of love without." Do you know how they spell end? "N," of course.

CALL AND PREPARATION OF THE BRIDE CLASS

The Church Called to be Christ's Bride.

The Church a Virgin, Espoused to the King's Son—Called From Her Father Adam's House—How the Called Ones Are Made Fit for the Bridegroom—Isaac and Rebecca Types—God Seeks Only a Choice Few for the Bride of His Son—Some Called, but Miss Their Calling—How Spots Are Removed From the Bridal Robe—The Testing Day Now Upon Us—"They Shall Walk With Me"—"They Are Worthy."

[The matter under this heading is supplied by the Pastor Russell Lecture Bureau, who conduct the Brooklyn Tabernacle (unsectarian) Bible Studies, and who have arranged for its publiction.]

New York, N. Y., Oct. 3. Pastor Russell delivered a forceful and helpful discourse in the New York City Temple, W. 63d St., near Broadway, to-day. His text was, "Hearken, O daughter, and consider, and incline thine ear. Forget also thine own people and thy father's house; so shall the King greatly desire thy beauty; for He is thy Lord, and worship thou Him." (Psalm 45: 10, 11.) He said in part:

Never was there greater need for the Lord's people to remember the words of this text than at the present time. We recognize these words of the Psalmist David as prophetic, referring to the Church of Christ. The Church has been called out during the Gospel Age to be Christ's Bride. The Prophet here pictures the Call of this class, the terms of the Call, and the Bride's preparation for her marriage to the King's Son. The exhortation is that those who have thus become espoused as a virgin to Christ who have taken upon themselves the covenant of faithfulness, are to be separate from the world. Hence the injunction, "Forget thine own people and thy father's house."

Our own people are the human family. Our father's House is Adam's House. By nature we belong to his House; we have a natural interest in his inheritance; and although we have received woeful experiences through Adam's fall, yet whatever we have as human beings we have received from Adam. Those who are now the Lord's people "were by nature children of wrath, even as others." But something has occurred in our case. We have been called out of this condition, and invited to become "the Bride, the Lamb's wife." —Revelation 21:2, 9-11; Psalm 45:9.

God's Wonderful Condescension.

None of the human family could claim to be worthy of this high exaltation to be the Bride, members of the Christ company; for neither Jew nor Gentile could keep the Divine Law. Our Lord Jesus was the only one who could keep it; for it is the full measure of a perfect man's ability, and, except Father Adam, there was never a perfect man upon earth but the Lord Jesus. Having kept the Law, He became Heir of all things, and just as a wealthy man might take a beggar for a wife, lifting her up from her degraded condition and making her joint-heir in his inheritance, his name, his honor and his property, so the Lord Jesus is to take a Bride from the fallen human family and make her joint-heir with Himself.

We had nothing which would ever entitle us to be taken into God's family, but God has made this way for us through His Plan of Redemption. How wonderful an opportunity for us, that God should choose us to be the Bride of his Son! God has called us with a Heavenly Calling. This choice is being made in harmony with the custom of olden times as in the case of Abraham and Isaac. Abraham typified Jehovah; Isaac, our Lord Jesus Christ; and Isaac's bride Rebecca, the Church. As Abraham sent his servant to seek a bride for his son Isaac so God has sent, throughout this Gospel Age, the Message of His grace, by His Holy Spirit, His servant, to seek a Bride for His Only Begotten Son.

The promises of God have gone here an there through the world and have acted like a magnet upon certain individuals. The Magnet of God's Truth has been a power that has drawn a certain class, but does not attract others very much. Is God making a discrimination? Yes. There are many whom He does not wish at all for His present purpose. He is not seeking the world now.

This statement would have seemed very strange to us once; for we had in mind the idea, handed down from the errors of the past, that whoever did not understand and accept spiritual truths and become a saint during this present life, would have to roast for all eternity. Now we see that God is merely gathering out a special class, that have special characteristics. God uses measures to drive others off. Just as you, if you were drawing tacks to a magnet, would blow off any sawdust that might loosely adhere, so the Lord is causing the winds of adversity to blow upon His Church, in order that any of the worldly who have attached themselves to the Church class may be blown off. But those who are of the true Church will only adhere the closer.

Separation of Wheat and Tares.

In the parable of the Wheat and the Tares, Jesus shows that in the Harvest time of the Gospel Age He would completely separate the wheat from the tares. (Matthew 13:36-43.) Not a grain of wheat is to be left amongst the tares, and not a tare is to be left amongst the wheat. There will be such persecutions and oppositions as will make a complete separation and division. The wheat class will be taken out by the Lord and gathered into the garner. The tares will be uprooted from the wheat-field and burned. In other words, in the Time of Trouble they will be shown to be of the world, as they have been all along.

There is only one class desired for the Bride class—true Christians. Millions of people are associating together and calling themselves Christians that have not the slightest relationship to God. They are tares. God never authorized these. They did not come into association with the Church through the Doorway. (John 10:1-7.) Some came in because their parents or their friends were in. Some thought that unless they were baptized they would go to eternal torment.

In the end of this Age, now present, there is to be a great burning time. Not the people, but their religious conceptions and affiliations will burn up. "The fire of that Day shall try every man's work of what sort it is." (1 Corinthians 3:13.) Those who have built with the stubble of human tradition will suffer loss. Their works and their professions will perish. Those who have built upon the sand will be overthrown. But any who have been real Christians "shall be saved so as by fire." Their systems and their doctrines will be consumed in the fire of this Day—a bitter humiliation. These may be assured that their great church systems will suffer complete collapse in the Day of the Lord. They will fall to rise no more.—Jer. 51:58.

Terms of Our Covenant Binding.

This special class that God has been gathering out for eighteen centuries to be the Bride of Christ have accepted God's terms and have entered into a special covenant with God in order that they might become members of the Bride class. These terms are very positive and definite. In older times, when there was a betrothal, it was usually the father that looked after the contract. This was not a merely verbal contract, but a written one. It was a binding engagement with positive stipulations on both sides. Just so our Heavenly Father, in making the arrangement by which we may come into His family, drew up a very positive, unchangeable contract. It is a condition of full surrender to Him. We give up our own wills. This agreement is more binding than any earthly marriage contract.

Those who have become betrothed to the Lord Jesus Christ give up their all to Him. They do not have very much to be sure. Most of us have very, very little, for not many great, not many wise, not many learned, not many noble, are called. (1 Corinthians 1:23-29.) But association with the One to whom they are betrothed gives these a nobility of character. The wonderful promises of God begin immediately to work in them to will and to do of His good pleasure. It is a transforming work. The Apostle Paul tells us that we are "transformed by the renewing of our minds"—not our bodies. (Romans 12:2.) Our body is the same body that we had before, but we have a new mind. We are New Creatures. All things are new; old things have passed away. (2 Corinthians 5:17.) This makes a change everywhere.

We need not go into detail as to what changes it makes. We know, if we are of this class, that "the things which once we loved we now hate." We loved the things that were pure, noble, and beautiful in proportion as we were naturally of a noble disposition; but many of the things which once we loved were things of which we cannot now approve. We have received the begetting of the Holy Spirit; and as God's Spirit abounds in us more and more, we become copies of God's dear Son, our Redeemer, our Head, our Bridegroom.

In the case of the Hebrew marriage contract, if the bride-elect was guilty of infidelity to her betrothed bridegroom, the unfaithfulness was punished with death. So if any of us who have made a contract with the Lord should violate that contract and be untrue to our Bridegroom, we would come under the penalty of the Second Death. "If any man draw back," says the Lord, "My soul shall have no pleasure in him." God would not give eternal life to those in whom He has no pleasure. The Apostle Paul says that these draw back to perdition — destruction. (Hebrews 10:38, 39.) So the matter is clear before us. We are espoused to a Husband. We have taken upon us certain obligations. We must go on now, and make our calling and election sure. We must either gain the reward of everlasting life or else go into the Second Death.

Christ's Righteousness Our Covering.

Does this mean that if we make slips we shall go into the Second Death? No. One might make unintentional slips of various kinds. Presumably there is no child of God living who has not made such slips. Our imperfections are hindrances to our doing perfectly. "With my mind I serve the Law of God," but with my imperfect body it would be an impossibility. Our great Redeemer, who is our prospective Bridegroom, has made satisfaction for our imperfections. Therefore when we err, we are to go to the Throne of Heavenly Grace to obtain mercy—mercy with God through Christ. If you and I were perfect, we would not need to go to the Throne of Grace to obtain mercy and find grace to help in time of need. (Hebrews 4:16.) But as we become developed as Christians, we shall not need to go so often to obtain mercy. As we grow stronger, we grow wiser.

But we shall always need mercy as long as we are in the imperfect flesh. The Lord knows of the blemishes of our flesh and of our unsuccessful strivings to overcome; and He has provided us a covering—the precious Robe of Christ's righteousness. So by the Lord's arrangement this Bride class may be eventually received at the wedding. The spotless robe given us at the first is the wedding garment mentioned in our Lord's parable. (Matthew 22:11-14.) Clad in this precious Robe, we may come in and be participators at the great Marriage, as members of the Bride of Christ.

Spots on the Robe—How Removed.

The Lord Jesus intimated that some of His disciples will not be ready to go in to that Marriage, because, although they are wearing the robe, they have gotten it besmirched and spotted. We are to keep our garments unspotted from the world. Can any one pass through the world and always remain absolutely unspotted? No; that is not the thought. But if those who are in the right attitude of heart should get a spot upon their robe, it will be so grievous to them that they will hasten to remove it. There is only one way to get a spot off from that robe. We must take the matter to the Throne of Grace; and whatever our sin—whether it was temper or what—when our lapse has been acknowledged, the cleansing merit of Jesus' blood is applied; and our robe it spotless again.—1 John 1:7-9.

In this way our robe is kept white. We are to keep ourselves unspotted by going to the One who alone can remove such spots and by asking the forgiveness necessary. "If we confess our sins, He is faithful and just to forgive us our sins, and to cleanse us from all unrighteousness." The blood of Jesus Christ, the atoning merit of His sacrifice, cleanses us day by day as we, appreciating our need, come to Him daily to have His blood applied.

There is a class, however, who do not keep their robe clean; for any stain upon this robe remains until the proper steps are taken for its removal. There are many Christian people who have not taken these steps, and who therefore have not had the spots removed. Why do they not have these spots cleansed? you ask.

There are things connected with that matter which some of you may know about. When first you came to the Lord, full of earnest desire to keep yourself unspotted from the world, you were very careful about your robe. Oh, how shocked you were at the first spot! You said, "I am a child of God; and oh, what a mistake I have made!" But as time passed and you realized more and more keenly your infirmities of the flesh, you found that you were often overtaken by these weaknesses; and you were so humiliated thereby that you were tempted to remain away from the Throne of Grace, the Mercy-Seat provided by the Lord for this very purpose. But if you were a true disciple of Christ, you conquered this feeling and went to the Lord to have the spots removed.

For Careless Christians Reckoning Near.

But a great many Christian people have not been faithful in this respect and are being deceived, and a reckoning time is at hand. They have doubted the Lord's mercy or else have been careless of their covenant; and they are not living close to the Lord. Their lives are unsatisfactory to themselves and to God. They will not be of the Bride class. Nobody whose robe is covered with spots will be received into the wedding as a member of the Bride of Christ; for the Bride must be "without spot or wrinkle or any such thing." (Ephesians 5:25-27.) Only thus could she be presentable to the Heavenly Bridegroom. "There will be weeping and gnashing of teeth" amongst the foolish virgins when the door to the wedding is shut. (Matthew 25:10-12.) Many will be disappointed in this Day of Christ.

Where shall you and I be then? I hope that we shall make our calling and election sure; that, knowing the terms, we shall keep our garments unspotted from the flesh, from everything that is contaminating. There is a peculiar beauty about a pure white robe. A robe spotted all over would not look very attractive, nor would a robe all wrinkled. The King will greatly love and appreciate those who are in a spotless condition.

"Forget also thine own people and thy father's House." The temptations to wrongdoing, to disloyalty to our covenant with the Lord, come largely through relations with our own people. It is very trying to endeavor to do two things: to keep on good terms with the world's people and with the Lord at the same time. To do so is an impossibility. This is where the Great Company class make their failure. They fear what their acquaintances and neighbors will say. They do not care to be considered peculiar. But we are not to be ashamed of the Truth or of the brethren or of reproach for Christ. Matthew 10:32, 33.

"So shall the King greatly desire thy beauty." This is a beauty that dwells in the heart, a beauty of character. Every Christian should see to it that he is growing daily in grace. In all the true Body of Christ there is a growth in the Lord's Spirit, a growth in love. This is the beauty that our Bridegroom desires in His Bride: this beauty of character likeness to Himself. We desire this in ourselves. We wish to see our minds and hearts opening more and more widely to take in the interests of others, especially our brethren of the Body of Christ. Those who prove faithful unto death shall receive glory, honor, and incorruptibility. They shall walk with Me in white," says our Lord Jesus, "for they are worthy."

Soldiers' Uniforms.

Experiments have been made in Europe to determine what colour of a soldier's uniform is the least conspicuous to an enemy. Of ten men, two were dressed in khaki grey, two in grey, two in dark grey, two in green, two in dark blue, and two in scarlet. All were then ordered to march off, while a group of officers remained watching them.

The first to disappear in the landscape was the light grey, which was surprising as it may seem, the scarlet. Then followed the dark blue and green, while the dark grey and khaki remained visible long after the others had disappeared.

Experiments in firing at bits of red targets, made at the same time, proved that blue could be most easily seen at a distance, then red.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

BROTHER GARDNER.

His Advice to Three Departing Limekiln Club Members.

MAKES THE PRESIDENT SAD.

He Didn't Like to See Them Go, but Thinks They'll Be Better Off—Has a Talk With Each One of Them—A Parting Song.

[Copyright, 1915.]

"My frens," said Brother Gardner of the Limekiln club as he arose in his place the other evening, "I reckon most of you have heard de news dat three of de oldest members of dis club am gwine to depart from among us. It brings sadness to my heart to see 'em depart, but yet I know dat dey will be better off. Brudder Shindig Watkins, will you please riz up?

"Brother Watkins, you am gwine away from yere to de town of Syracuse to enter into de grocery business.

"NINETEEN HUNDRED POUNDS OF COAL FOR A TON."

You am gwine among strangers, and it's gwine to be make or bust wid you If you succeed in climbin' de dizzy height of success, all will be well; if you don't succeed, you'll come out next spring wid chilblains all ober you and take your place in de list of has-beens. Bekase we all wish you well I want to say a few words to you.

"If you have resolved to run a grocery business in a strictly honest manner, take back dat resolve aud make another.

"Dar won't be no show fur you in Syracuse or any other town in America.

"You might git out forty millyon handbills, and you might hire forty brass bands to play befo' your grocery, and yet you couldn't convince de public dat you was gwine to gib 'em an honest deal. In dese days de mo' a man talks of his honesty de less de public believes in him, and when you come right down to it I don't believe dat any of us want to bump up agin a real honest man. We wouldn't know how to take him. Dar would be heaps of embarrassment in dealin' wid him. We'd be mo' apt to wrong him dan to gib him just praise.

"You will open your grocery calkerlatin' to make de usual profit of 20 per cent. You will mingle old eggs wid de fresh. You will sell Itio coffee fur Java. You will sell oleomargarine fur best dairy butter. You will sell thirty-five and fifty cent tea out of de same chist. If you kin take eighteen ounces fur a pound when you buy and gib fo'teen ounces fur a pound when you sell, you will do so, and arter the first few days you will be surprised to see how easy your conscience am about it.

"Now and den de public will pass lead nickels and chipped quarters off on you. You will hold 'em till a nigh-sighted customer comes along and den soak him wid de hull lot.

"If you have to carry ober two or three hundred cans of co'n and tomatoes and peaches, it will be easy 'nuff next year to buy new labels and pass 'em off as fresh.

"In buying vinegar by de bar'l and sellin' it by de pint or quart you will not furgit to add a proper quantity of water. Dar am ninety-six odder leetle tricks practiced by the grocer who has ambishun, and I reckon you will git on to 'em in time. Dat will do, Brudder Watkins. You kin sot down, and I'll say a few words to Brudder Amendment Green."

Arouses Brother Green.

Brother Green was enjoying a nap behind the stove, but was aroused and stood up, and the president said to him:

"Brudder Green, you am gwine to de town of Hosford to engage in de butcher shop business. De residents of dat enterprisin' town have informed you dat three different butchers have failed dere in the last two years bekase dey was dishonest. Don't you believe it. On de odder hand, believe dat dey had to quit bekase dey was too honest and let it be a warnin' to you.

"You am aware of de fact, Brudder Green, dat in buyin' meat or live stock you have to buy de bones wid it. In case of live stock you have to buy de horns and hoofs and tail as well. In sellin' again you have got to figger on these things.

"De one word dat should eber be present in your mind am bones. You have got to get rid of 'em. De mo' bone you kin sell wid de meat de mo' change you kin ring up on your cash register.

"I has bought fo'teen ounces of meat fur a pound and I has bought six-teen, and arter I had sot down and thought it ober it was hard to tell which butcher I thought de most of Both had de same chance to cheat me and perhaps I felt a leetle contempt fur de one who didn't take advantage of me when de way was open to.

"Don't make any purtense of honesty. Leave de matter open, so dat you kin take advantage of a good thing when it comes along.

"You shall make some bad debts You must expect dat and figger accordingly—dat is, you must figger on de good customers payin' up de debts of de bad.

"Don't assert yourself too much, and don't be too retirin'. If you am too conspicuous you will be asked to contribute $5 to ebery Fo'th of July celebration; if you am too retirin' you won't be asked to hold de stakes in a leetion bet.

"Dat's about all, Brudder Green, and you may set down while I remark a few remarks to Brudder Absolute White."

The one sat down and the other stood up and the latter was addressed with

"Brudder White, you 'hate' fallen asleep at ebery meetin' of dis club fur years and slept frew de hull purceedin's, but we have nuthin' 'cept kindness in our hearts fur you. If you haven't done any good you haven't done any harm, and dat's mo' dan kin be said of most men. Time arter time I has lent you money, and you has always paid it back. I believe you am a thoroughly honest man, and fur dat reason I'm a bit afraid to have you sot out fur Horseheads to go into the coal yard and ice business. You have told sartin members of dis club dat you believed de people of dat town would tumble ober each other to gib deir custom to a squar' man and dat you'd be honest wid your coal and ice if it busted you inside of a year.

"You am deservin' of praise fur such words, Brudder White, but if you foller 'em out it won't take sixty days to bring about de bustin' act. You'll be workin' fur some of your competitors fur a dollar and a half a day.

As to Coal.

"When I go to buy a ton of coal I hain't lookin' to git 2,000 pounds. De miner cheats de coal company if he kin, de coal company cheats de railroad, de railroad cheats de wholesaler, and what's gwine to become of de retailer if he don't cheat me to git eben? I jest sorter glance ober de coal when de cart comes up and make up my mind dat de shortage am not ober a hundred pounds and let it go at dat. If I went to de coal man, I'd only obleege him to lie about it and thus add another sin.

"Nineteen hundred pounds of coal fur a ton, Brudder White, and if you kin take fifty pounds off'n dat at any time widout bein' cotched at it you'll last so much de longer. Dar am two sorts of coal, as you must know—de good and de bad. When dey am judiciously mixed together de profits am increased.

"As fur ice, I contract fur twenty-five pounds so many times a week. I smile ober dat contract, and so does de iceman. We both know dat it means eighteen or twenty pound chunks. He knows dat I've got an old mewl to sell and dat I'm not gwine to p'int out his ringbones and spavins. I'll do de buyer if I kin, and de iceman knows he will do me.

"Anywhere from eighteen to twenty pounds of ice fur twenty-five, Brudder White. If you gib mo', it will only melt away in de box. If you should sot out to gib twenty-seben, you'd find half your customers howlin' fur thirty. De squar' man of today am de man who am squar' by hisself. It has come to dat pass wid human natur' dat we am mo' shy of an honest man dan of a rascal. We know what de latter am, but we don't know what sort of a trick de former may be gittin' ready to serve us.

"We will now riz up and sing 'Auld Lang Syne,' which was composed by a man who died in de porchouse fur bein' too honest, and den we will shake hands wid de departin' brethren and disperse to our var'us abidin' places."

Connubial Diplomacy.

[Original.]

"I doubt if there is more truth in any aphorism than in 'The least said the soonest mended,' only if I had written it I would have put it, 'Let the other fellow show his hand before showing yours,' or, as applied to connubial differences: 'Not only give your wife the last word, but give her the first, and be particular that she takes it. Not only that, keep on giving it to her till she hangs herself with her own rope.'"

Sam Abert adored his wife, but he had no more conscience in his dealings with her than an Italian bandit.

"What put that into your head, old man?" I asked.

"Well, the other day my old chum Billy Perkins asked me if I couldn't take a night off for the theater, and so forth. I told him I would. I'd been out a good deal without Effie just before that, and I knew she'd object. What did I do? Have a long powwow with her about it, with such words and phrases as 'neglect,' 'shameful treatment,' 'you ought to be ashamed of yourself,' and all that. Not I. I just says: 'My love, I'm awful sorry, but I shall be detained downtown tonight late by business. Don't sit up for me.' Then I kiss her more affectionately than usual and go to the office.

"As luck would have it, some of her friends during the day telephoned her an invitation to go to the same theater where Billy and I were going, and, knowing she was to be alone at home, she accepted. Billy and I were sitting down in the baldheaded row when, glancing aside into a proscenium box, I saw the party filing into it and my wife take a chair where she could rake me with both eyes.

"I kissed my hand to her, but after a look of surprise she paid no more attention to me than if I were one of the supes on the stage. I knew I'd meet a cyclone when I got home and had plenty of time to think matters over. When a man gets caught that way it's a great mistake to flounder around among a lot of improbable excuses. There's two ways of working it—one owning up and the other way. I chose the other way. I assumed an air of one badly treated, but too noble minded to defend himself. I didn't say a word. I simply looked at her reproachfully.

"Now, that piqued her curiosity. You see, when a woman sets up an idol she doesn't like to have it shattered. She had put me on a beautiful white marble pillar, and I didn't propose to come down. She couldn't realize that I would deliberately do what I had done without a reason. Since I gave her no reason, why, of course, she began to figure one out for herself; but, not being able to do it, she got madder than ever.

"Andrews of Howe & Andrews happened to have sat in the seat directly in front of me at the theater. Andrews is in the same business as I, and I have known him for years. I leaned forward several times and talked to him about a soubrette on the stage. She was pretty as a picture, and Andrews, who knew the stage manager, offered to take me behind the scenes between the third and fourth acts and introduce me, an offer I accepted. When the curtain fell at the appointed time Andrews and Billy and I got up and went out together.

"Well, Effie kept up a pretty sharp thinking as to the cause of my brutal deception. I saw something was working and just declined to come down from my high horse and crawl on my stomach. Instead, I said nothing about the matter between us, confining myself to 'Yes, dear,' and 'No, dear,' confident that if I let her alone long enough she'd work out my salvation for me and save me the trouble. At last it came out one morning while we were at the breakfast table.

"'Frank,' she said, 'I want you to tell me one thing. Where did you three men go when you got up and went out of the theater?'

"Not knowing but that she's got on to my going behind the scenes and for what purpose, I winced inwardly. Outwardly I was game. 'I suppose,' I replied calmly, 'you think we went out for a drink?'

"'No.'" she said; 'knowing that you and Mr. Andrews are in the same business, I did not know but that you went to the theater on purpose to meet him for a business conference.'

"That put the beautifulest idea into my head you ever saw. I recalled that Andrews and I had been trying some time before to sell the Scrim-mens estate, a 200 foot lot on Main street, for $500,000. We'd failed, and I had forgotten all about it. But it gave me a tip all the same.

"'Effie,' I said composedly, 'don't you know that some of the biggest business deals are effected in that very way?'

"She looked down under my honest gaze, and I saw that she was very much ashamed of herself. Seeing that she had kept me at swords' points for several days by the want of faith in me, her lip trembled, and she burst into tears.

"Going to her, I took her to my manly bosom and said:

"'Don't trouble yourself any more about it, sweetheart. You have my entire forgiveness.'"

He rolled a cigarette and lighted it in his quick way, giving the match a shake and throwing it away, evidently quite proud of his exploit.

"Sam," I said, "do you know what you are especially fitted for?"

"What—a big diplomatic mission?"

"No; to light the streets with a coat of tar on you."

Wakeful Night.

A rather imaginative Washington lady decided she had insomnia. She couldn't sleep, she said. One morning she was more than usually depressed.

"What's the matter, dear?" asked the husband. "Another sleepless night?"

"Worse than that," she replied gloomily. "I did manage to drop off to sleep, and I dreamed all the time I was asleep that I was awake."—Philadelphia Saturday Evening Post.

Made the Rhyme.

"Carpet" rhymes with no single word, but some bold poet dared to evade the difficulty thus:

"Sweet maid of the lan, 'tis surely no sin to toast such a beautiful bar pet; believe me, my dear, your feet would appear at home on a nobleman's carpet."—London Answers.

Cynical.

"The course of true love doesn't always run smooth," sighed the young widow.

"That's right," rejoined the old bachelor. "Sometimes it ends in marriage."—Chicago News.

Cleaning Windows.

The easiest way to wash windows during cold weather is to wipe them with a soft cloth or sponge which has been dipped in kerosene; then in a few minutes go over them with tissue paper or soft newspaper and rub off most of the oil and dirt, after which with fresh water give them a good polishing. They will soon be clear and bright.

No Paprika In Her Bones.

A Hungarian restaurant in New York became famous for its culinary triumphs, and many visitors to the city became acquainted there with the mysterious dishes produced in Hungarian kitchens. In one of these parties several years ago was a young matron from the far west, who, anxious to extend her culinary knowledge and seeing how her husband relished one of the courses of the meal, asked the head waiter for the recipe for the dish.

"I can give it to you, madam," was the courteous reply, "but you can't make it."

"And why not?" asked the sightseer.

"Because you must be Hungarian. It might come right for an Austrian, but an American never. You must have paprika in your bones." And, taking that high ground, the request was refused.—New York Tribune.

A Saving Grace.

"What do you think of the two candidates?" asked one elector of another.

"What do I think of them?" was the reply. "Well, when I look at them I'm thankful only one of them can get in."

Surely.

Pat: "Marriage is loike making a call. First, ye go to adore. Secondly, ye ring a belle. Thirdly, ye give your name to a maid."

Mike: "And then ye get taken in."

Half Bet.

Only one man in every 808 is over six feet tall, and it's dollars to doughnuts that some little five foot woman can make most of them feel as if they had shrunk in the wash.

If You Bake

You will want to try Crisco. The experience of thousands of practical housewives has shown it to be the ideal cooking fat.

CRISCO
For Frying-For Shortening
For Cake Making

It makes cakes that are as wholesome and as tasty as if made with the best of creamery butter. Yet it costs no more than ordinarily good lard.

Foods made with lard are likely to produce indigestion and to give a "heavy" feeling after eating. When made with Crisco, they are light and digestible.

A thorough trial, in baking as well as in pastry making and in frying, will convince you of the many merits of Crisco.

IMPRESSIONS OF A PRIVATE WHO ENLISTED A YEAR AGO

There's death, there's glory, there's shame, there's misery, there's life fierce, vivid, and cruel; there are all these things out there. Into the middle of them I am about to be flung.

I try to marshal my thoughts and array my ideas about it all, but they will not keep in line. If one knew whether one was coming back again it would be easier. But there's life there and there's death; and there's mangled torn life and there's living death. And which of them all is it to be?

Exhilaration and wild joy mingled with sorrow; a great, satisfied content jostles with a sickening feeling at the heart. It must be so. For nearly a year I have trained and drilled and sweated in preparation for the great ordeal. It has not been easy to keep one's enthusiasm; the work has been often childish and sometimes futile, responsibility has barely existed. There is nothing in the Army's autocracy that can appeal to the private who turned his "Hurrahs" and flag-waving into something tangible; to the patriot who suffered sergeant-majors that a month before delivered his letters to bawl "boy" at him and tell him to get his hair cut.

Glad to Go.

The year has been so long and the war has been so far away—the soldier thinks least about the war and reads fewest newspapers—that it has been difficult to remember that all the sweating, all the drill, was not the ordeal, not the work, but only the preparation. Odd as it sounds, it has been when I have gone back to my old friends, when my home has been among civilians, that Flanders has come very near. As the months dragged by, though, the pleasure at going to one's town has been doubtful. Folk have a way of being surprised at sight of you and saying cheerily but disconcertingly, "Hullo, not gone yet?" and blood-thirsty little boy I know ask me, "How many Germans have you stabbed?" and are beginning to have their doubts as to my being a soldier at all.

I know too much of the time has been spent in getting us bodily fit. The Army found us out. Many of us, though, have been found out in a way that we had not thought of. None of us knew how selfish we were; how little generosity was ours; how hastily some of our tempers, and how degenerate some of our gentleness. The army found us out—though not all see it and not all that see it admit it—on red-hot route marches, on rain-coaked nights, on days when food did not come or was not enough, in the heat of discussion, in the annoying of weaker ones. But though the Army found us out it did not spoil our heart. Most of us are a bit warmer-hearted, a bit more intrepid, and a bit readier to fear God and hit out straight for ourselves and other men.

I have a brother who has been a soldier only as long as I, but he has fought and gained his battle scar; is healed and fights again; and still England is my bed.

I am glad at going when I think of all these things.

One's Life, One's Duty.

There is one life which for mine would be quite the best thing I have will bear my death, if I die, I dare not think. There will be no anger, though, against England, nor will there be remorse, for never has man or woman's duty lain so plain before them; never has it been so easy to see the line that divides right from wrong, honor for dishonor. But never, too, has one seen life's end so near or imagine with such pain the effect on those that will be left. There can be nothing but sadness in bequeathing sorrow, be the idea one dies for never so perfect. And, thinking so, one may regret, quite honestly and unashamedly. I think, one's going out.

Not that I can believe that I am to die. I am young, with the optimism of youth; and no healthy minded youth thinks to die—yet. The great majority may go, yes; the nine hundred of thousands may be killed but I—no. So every soldier thinks.

Easier to go Than Stay.

I do not go abroad with the false ideas of my worth. Going is all men's task—common, and only noble as each man may make it so. For it is easier to go than to stay behind, as it was easier to join the army than to face jeers and gibes outside it. Injury is easier faced by most men than sneers, and death than the suspicion of cowardice.

There is no merit, is there, in leaving your dinner to go and fight a man who is coming to steal your silver plate or, a million times worse, insult your wife or your sister?

If a man is making for your garden to despoil it, it is natural, is it not, to go and meet him on his way in the field over the river and fight him there?

Lastly if a villain is coming to make you and yours his slaves, with death near if you fight, think you you will hesitate? Hesitate, when your brothers, your friends, mayhap dearer than brothers are already wounded or fallen in the fight? Well, it is all as clear and simple as that.

One who goes with me says, "Death I do not mind. Dying so would be quite the best thing I have done; it would be my trump card."

I cannot say so with honesty. I have not done enough, lived enough. But I am going out a little alive to the wild joys, the miseries, the horrors, the fear of it; with a great hope that I shall be an Englishman tryng to say with Rupert Brooke: If I should die think only this of me: That there's some corner of a foreign field.

That is forever England.

An Early Finish.

"You are sentenced to be shot at sunrise," announced the villain of the melo-drama. "Have you anything to say?"

"Very little," answered the comedian. "Sunrise is an early hour. I shall not dilate."

Seized With Paralysis Could Not Walk

Most Extraordinary Cure Effected by the Use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food

To have the nervous system paralyzed, to be unable to walk and scarcely able to talk, and then to be completely cured, is not a usual experience, but Mr. Hyatt tells in this letter what he passed through. Doctors told him that his case was hopeless, and when they gave up he turned to Dr. Chase's Nerve Food and obtained complete cure.

Mr. Avery Hyatt, blacksmith, St. Anns, Lincoln Co., Ont., writes: "I am a blacksmith by trade and ten years ago became afflicted with paralysis. I could not walk or read or write, and could talk with difficulty, so that it was a hard matter to understand anything that I would say. Being only a young man I was nearly discouraged. Two doctors told me it was brought on by overwork, and that my case was hopeless.

"One day my father read about Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, and advised me to try it. I bought 12 boxes, and when the fifth was used I saw that I was getting better. By the time the 12 boxes were used I was cured. I am well and strong and working every day, thanks to Dr. Chase's Nerve Food."

This statement is certified to by Mr. Elmon J. Hodgkins, J.P.

No ailment is more dreaded than paralysis. And yet how few people realize that paralysis of the nerves is only the natural result of neglected nervous troubles.

At first you do not sleep well, have nervous headaches or indigestion, find yourself easily irritated and annoyed, can hear noises which in good health you would never notice. You do not consider yourself sick, and yet you lack the usual energy and vigour and feel out of sorts.

Restore the nerves by using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. 50c a box, 6 for $2.50. All dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto.

The Case of Jones.

(Copyright.)

Jones at the age of twenty-eight was a mechanic and working every day at fair wages and happy to work. A year later he married. A year later still he lost his wife and babe as the former became a mother. Then he got into trouble with his union for working overtime, was expelled from the society, and during the next year it was a bitter fight with him against odds. The shops turned him down, his health became poor; there were more laborers than there were picks and shovels. He was carrying in a ton of coal now and then or carrying out a ton of ashes, when he got in the way of a street car. He wasn't killed. Indeed, he wasn't badly hurt, but a policeman took it as a bit of impudence on his part to interrupt traffic, and he was collared and sent up for thirty days. In one sense the imprisonment was a great relief to Jones. He got something to eat and got it regularly. When night came he got a fairly comfortable bed. In another sense he felt degraded. His keepers and most of the other prisoners would have laughed at the idea, but it was nevertheless true. He had made a good fight for it and had been downed through no fault of his own, and he had done nothing to deserve imprisonment. It humiliated and embittered him, and when his sentence had been served he had lost his self respect and had a feeling that the world was against him.

From that day Jones became a hobo. He tramped without any particular aim except wanting to get somewhere. When he went among the farmers the usual thing was to set the dog on him as soon as he entered the gate or climbed the fence. If there was no dog, then the farmer came forward to give the hobo the boot. For every one farmer who fed and lodged him fifteen turned him away. The latter thought it necessary to call him names and threaten him and make him feel his position. The former demanded that he pay five times the value of the food in work, and when he got ready to move along they insisted on searching him to make sure that he wasn't carrying off a plow or the contents of the granary. Now and then, at long intervals, Jones met a human being, man or woman. They talked to him as one human being talks to another, and for an hour after he would feel himself again a man. Then along would come a country constable to run him in on suspicion of having stolen a wagon load of wheat or potatoes and abuse him because the proofs were lacking.

For five years Jones wandered over the face of the earth. In that time he met more people and saw more of human nature than the ordinary man would see in living two lifetimes. In particular he saw the littleness of his fellow men. He discovered that for every broad minded man there were a thousand with pinched and contracted souls. He heard gossip and scandal and lying. He saw the injustice of man to man. He saw so little that was good and so much to condemn that, hobo as he was, he became disgusted and no longer wondered why hogs crowded each other at the trough.

One day he picked up an old newspaper on the highway and sat down and read, among other things, that a certain philanthropic old lady had founded and endowed a home for the ailing and indigent. Jones had known for a year past that he was a victim of consumption and that his tramping days were drawing to a close. Sometimes as he lay under a tree and thought of it he reasoned that the roadside ditch was good enough for a tramp to die in. Again, there would come a longing to have human beings about him when the end came, to die under a roof, to die in his bed, even to have to talk with a minister before the lamp flickered out.

A month later Jones was asking for admission to the home. He was then a human wreck, and his days were numbered. Yes, they took him in, but the attendant in his ward gave him warning that if he made an effort he'd get the boiler. The same attendant had asked him in the frankest manner why he didn't die somewhere in a snowdrift instead of coming around his betters. The doctor didn't bother him over. He said there was no need of that. Any one with ears on him only to listen to that racking cough. His excellency the doctor further remarked that there was no need of wasting good chicken broth and porterwine on that case, and the supposed there was a coffin in the basement to fit. The nurses in that ward had a great deal of gossiping and very little nursing to do. At first doses were taken this and that and even dared to eat out at night and awaken the sleepy nurse, but after a few days, after he had been kicked to a few times, he learned better. One day when he asked for the minister he was laughed at. They did finally bring him a Testament, but by that time his eyes were too weak to read the fine print. He realized that the end was near, but was clinging to life as even a hobo will when he heard the nurse complain of his base ingratitude. She said he was that he ought to have died a week before and that his hanging on the way he did showed a selfish obstinacy.

Jones figured it out that the nurse couldn't very well poison him off or choke him to death without attracting suspicion, and that night as she slept after warning him not to call out he gave up the fight and his soul passed on to its Maker. Exit workman, husband, wife, child—Jones. And the world rolled on as if they had never been.

SLIGHTLY MIXED.

He was sitting in one of the Brooklyn pay-as-you-enter cars that look like torpedo boats. He was in a dreamy state, and ever and anon his head dropped wearily toward his neighbour's shoulder; then, at an indignant nudge from the neighbour, he would hastily resume the perpendicular.

Finally he decided to get off. With some difficulty he made his way to the exit in the centre of the car, where the conductor, with a bored air, stood meditatively behind his little white stand. The tired passenger held a quarter and a transfer in his hand. Reaching carefully around the white posts as the car stopped, he laid them down on the stand in front of the conductor. Then he waited, balancing as best he could.

"Hey, youse!" said the indignant conductor, pushing them toward him and motioning toward the open door. "M'change, yes," murmured the passenger as he cautiously alighted. Then, with a backward look, he added bitterly, "Homeliest cashier ever saw in this restaurant."—Exchange.

The Partner's Apology.

During a civil suit in a Western court the judge decided a contested point against a young lawyer, whereupon the latter lost his head.

"Your Honor," said he, in a palpitating voice, facing the court, "I am amazed."

Instantly the young lawyer's partner, who happened to be in the courtroom, sprang to his feet.

"Your Honor," interposed he, "I want to apologize for the hasty remark of my young partner. By the time he is as old as I am he will not be amazed at anything your honor does."—Baltimore American.

EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

GIRL'S DRESS.

By Anabel Worthington.

The fulness of both waist and skirt which characterizes the costumes of mature women is repeated in the dresses of little girls. In none is it shown to better advantage than in the little frock herewith illustrated.

The bodice has a plain straight yoke with a very full front and back below it. The sleeve is loose and either long or short, with frill or band finish.

The skirt is a straight edge model gathered along the upper edge and with a flat belt or girdle where waist and skirt are joined together.

The material which is most effective in this style is embroidered flouncing. This combines well with plain lawn or cambric and leaves little sewing as far as the skirt is concerned. It may also serve for the blouse, with the embroidered edge at the upper line where the material joins the yoke. Plain organdie is also much worn by little girls, and as it is both soft and sheer it needs the fulness of such a model as this.

The upper fulness of the fronts may be smocked in the new manner by those who know how to do this pretty work, or it may be simply gathered or shirred. With such a design as this it is impossible to go astray, no matter how simple the material and finish may be. The style lies in the design and it cannot be spoiled so long as it is cut with accuracy and finished neatly.

The dress pattern, No. 7304, is cut in sizes 6, 8, 10, 12 and 14 years. Medium size requires 1⅝ yards of 40 inch lawn, 2⅝ yards of 11½ inch embroidered flouncing, 2⅝ yards of insertion and 7⅛ yards of edging.

This pattern can be obtained by sending 10 cents to the office of this paper.

When ordering remember to give your name and address as well as the number and size of pattern required, and age of a child.

Price 15 cents, or 2 for 25c.

BE PRETTY! TURN GRAY HAIR DARK

Try Grandmother's Old Favourite Recipe of Sage Tea and Sulphur.

Almost everyone knows that Sage Tea and Sulphur, properly compounded, brings back the natural color and lustre to the hair when faded, streaked or gray, also ends dandruff, itching scalp and stops falling hair. Years ago the only way to get this mixture was to make it at home, which is mussy and troublesome. Nowadays, by asking at any drug store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," you will get a large bottle of this famous old recipe for about 50 cents.

Don't stay gray. Try it. No one can possibly tell that you darkened your hair, as it does it so naturally and evenly. You dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair disappears, and after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully dark, thick and glossy.

From New York To Hawaii

NEW YORK, Oct. 2. To the announcement made yesterday that Theodore N. Vail, president of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company, had spoken by wireless from Arlington, Virginia, to Mare Island, California, a distance of 2,500 miles, was added today the still more remarkable one that late Wednesday evening the voice of John Mills, an engineer on the New York staff of the company, speaking into the receiver of the apparatus at Arlington, had been heard at the Pearl Island naval station at Hawaii, 4,600 miles away.

This experiment had been carefully planned out previously by cable. At the appointed hour Mills began to count into the transmitter at Arlington. His words and numbers and a few simple words which followed them were caught by Lloyd Espenschied, another engineer of the company, stationed at the receiver at Hawaii, and later were returned with confirmation of the time when they were received by cable. The Arlington station is the only one equipped with a sending apparatus.

This latest feat means that within talking distance of New York when conditions atlantic will be all the permit experimentation will be all the leading capitals of Europe—London, Paris, Berlin, Brussels, Vienna, Petrograd and Rome and probably Rio de Janeiro. It also means that with proper equipment at Seattle the voice would be carried to Yokohama, Japan, a distance of 4,850 miles. This statement was made unreservedly by Bancroft Gherardi, engineer of the plant of the Company, in the New Yorkk offices today.

The further very remarkable possibility was brought forward by Mr. Gherardi, of speaking around the world. "This would be accomplished," he said, "by a series of wire and wireless connections, wire wherever possible and wireless across the gaps. In spite of the rapidity of the transmission of electrical waves the delay for such a distance would be very appreciable, so that the speaker's voice would return to him lagging, like an echo. Mr. Vail has made experiments in this line. We have made tests of this phenomenon. At one time Mr. Vail talked to himself over the wire to Denver and return, and the delay was found very noticeable."

"Madam," said the tattered and torn supplicant to the benevolent lady who answered his timid rap at the door, "have you any old clothes you can spare for an unfortunate victim of the Great War?"

"I think I have, my poor man; but how does this happen? You cannot have been in the war surely."

"No, madam," humbly replied the sufferer, "by my wife has sold all my clothes to the Belgians."

BALKAN STATES ON BRINK OF WAR

THE RUSSIAN FLEET READY TO ACT

THE CRISIS IN THE BALKANS IS RIPENING RAPIDLY HOUR BY HOUR

Russian Fleet Appears Off Bulgarian Seaport of Varna, Ready to Open Fire on the Expiration of the Ultimatum--Bulgaria Blames Serbia and Greece For Trouble---The Entrance of Greece Into the Conflict Is Assured.

GEN. IAN HAMILTON VISITS SALONIKA

LONDON, Oct. 4.—At Bulgaria's time limit, two o'clock this afternoon, London time, Czar Ferdinand's intentions were not known in London. It is possible that the ultimatum expired without an answer, and that the Russian Minister and his staff already have left the Bulgarian capital.

Petrograd despatches earlier in the day asserted that Russia would accept nothing but a complete back down by Bulgaria, whom she wants pledge herself to sever her relations with the central empires.

Russia still hopes war may be avoided even following the withdrawal of her Minister. There is possibility that the Bulgarian Cabinet may change its policy when it realizes the Allies mean war.

If hostilities come Russia will probably strike first by bombarding and landing an army of occupation on the Bulgarian Black Sea coast.

SOFIA, Oct. 4.—The Bulgarian News Agency to-day announced that it has been authorized by the Government to-day to state that German officers have arrived in Bulgaria to participate in the administration of the railways and the command of the army, and that Premier Radoslavoff had declared Bulgaria was to receive from Germany ten millions a month after she entered the war.

ROME, Oct. 4.—A telegram from Athens to the Tribune says that General Sir Ian Hamilton, British commander at the Dardanelles, has been at Salonika to inspect the arrangements made for the landing of troops.

ATHENS, Greece, Oct. 4.—All doubt as to the entrance of Greece into the war on the side of the entente Allies is disposed of.

A BULGARIAN STATEMENT.

LONDON, Oct. 4.—"The obstinate refusal of Serbia and Greece to recognize the rights of Bulgaria in Macedonia" forced the mobilization decree that has brought Bulgaria to the brink of war, M. Radoslavoff, Prime Minister of Bulgaria, declared to-day.

Bulgaria's claims to Macedonian territory were conceded as legitimate by all the great powers, Premier Radoslavoff said. The Prime Minister's statement, which was dated September 30, and evidently underwent much delay in transmission, declared that Bulgaria had no aggressive intentions, but planned to realize "her legitimate claims."

Furthermore, she is prepared to resort to arms if necessary, he asserted.

OTTAWA, Oct. 4.—The commands of the First and Second Divisions of the Canadian Expeditionary Forces have now officially been made known as follows:

First Division, commanded by Major-General A. W. Currie, C.B., consisting of the First Brigade, including the four first contingent Ontario battalions under Brigadier-General Lord Broke, and also the Second and Third Brigades.

Second Division, commanded by Major-General Turner, V.C., D.S.O., consisting of the second contingent Ontario battalions, under the command of Brigadier-General Garnet B. Hughes, D.S.O., and also the Fifth and Sixth Brigades.

BERLIN, Via London, Oct. 4.—The French troops yesterday obtained a firm footing on a German trench on one of the hills north-west of Givenchy, the German War Office admitted this afternoon. The official statement, however, claimed the repulse of all other Allied attacks and claimed German gains against the British line north of Loos and against the French west of Vimy.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 4.—The note submitted by Ambassador Von Berstorff to Secretary of State Lansing in New York on "the Arabic incident," makes necessary still further negotiations, it was learned, following Secretary Lansing's return to work to-day.

Just where the German note fails to come up to the demands of President Wilson is not disclosed, but Ambassador Von Bernstorff will be asked to come to Washington in the next few days and go over the matter in detail with Secretary Lansing.

NEW YORK CITY, Oct. 4.—The half billion dollar loan to England and France is now guaranteed, and the books of the syndicate handling the huge financial project will be closed to-morrow.

AMSTERDAM, Oct. 4. — Six Allied aviators bombarded the German naval base of Zeebrugge on Sunday. One of the aviators was shot down and another forced to land near Nieuvliet, Holland. The damage done at Zeebrugge was not ascertained.

SALONIKA, Oct. 4.—Two powerful Russian squadrons have appeared off the Bulgarian Black Sea port of Varna, and will open a bombardment immediately on the expiration of the ultimatum. Bulgaria has no navy.

LONDON, Oct. 4.—Up till 2 p.m. to-day the German War Office had issued no official statement for the day, except a short paragraph to the effect that it had been proven that the British successes near La Bassee eight days ago was the result of a surprise attack, in which the British used asphyxiating gases.

NEW YORK CITY, Oct. 4.—At the offices of Rockefeller interests no confirmation or denial could be obtained of the report that John D. Rockefeller had subscribed ten millions to the Allied Loan.

It will be a rousing gathering, to which the public is cordially invited. Efforts are being made to have Lieut.-Chaplain of Port Hope, invalided home from the front, give an address. There will be no charge for admission and the Committee ask the citizens to show their interest in the Band and the Battalion by turning out en masse on Friday night.

Tinsmithing Work At McPherson Co'y's

Householders and others will be interested in the announcement made in our advertising columns by the Messrs. F. R. J. McPherson Co., stove dealers, plumbers and tinsmiths, that they intend devoting increased attention to the installing of furnaces, eave troughing and general tinsmithing work. With this object in view they have secured the services of Mr. W. C. Bennett, of Kingston, who comes to them with a long, practical experience in these lines, and a workman well skilled in the best class of city work. Mr. Bennett will make another addition to our household residents, and comes well recommended from the limestone city.

"To get soldiers we must have music; to get music we must have money." These are the words of the Lord Mayor of London in a recent appeal for funds to assist the recruiting bands, and they apply with equal force to Peterborough. It is recognized that the 57th band of the local battalion has already proved a splendid stimulus to recruiting. It is desired to equip the band with instruments worthy of their fine playing and of the magnificent spirit they have shown in offering their services. So confident are the Speakers' Patriotic League in the patriotic generosity of the people of Peterborough that they have already entered into a contract for the instruments, and the greater part of them will be here and ready for presentation to the band on Friday night at the big gathering in Brock Street Rink. It would be a splendid endorsation to the band if the money needed was all subscribed by that time. Every citizen should get in behind the movement. RECRUITS COMING IN SPLENDIDLY FOR THE LOCAL COMPANY

Seventeen Have Passed the Doctor Since Saturday Morning and First Company Should Soon Be at Full Strength —Overseas Band of 33rd Battery to Be Photographed Instruments Ordered For the Band—To-day's Military News.

Enlistment for the local overseas company is going with a bang just now and from present indications the first company will be completed by Saturday night, after which the recruiting of the second company will be proceeded with. On Saturday nine recruits were passed, the high-water mark for last week, but this week has opened even more auspiciously, as eight recruits were accepted this morning, and this number will be augmented this afternoon and to-night. There were 210 on the roll at noon, with a number of others in the hospital, ready to come on in a few days, and a number of others who have passed and have not yet reported. The recruits are of a uniformly high class, looking in every way worthy of the splendid boys who have already enlisted in the local battalion.

Among those who enlisted this morning was Bandsman H. Wood of the 57th Regiment Band, who will be a splendid addition to the ranks of the Peterborough Overseas Band. Bandsman Wood has two sons in the Canadian Expeditionary Forces, one with the 8th C.M.R. and one with one of the Toronto regiments. Another of this morning's recruits was George East of the 57 Regiment Bugle Band, who will be of assistance in the Overseas Bugle Band. A brother of Gunner Ned Simmons, who is at the front with the 24th Field Battery detachment in the 4th Battery C.F.A., was another of this morning's recruits. He has been a member of the 57th Regiment and also of the 3rd Prince of Wales Dragoons. Three Campbellford boys secured as a result of the visit of Capt. Munro and his recruiting party to the Campbellford Fair, last week, also passed the medical examination this morning.

The inspiration of the splendid band of the local battalion counted with the fine conduct of the men and the efforts of the Speakers' Patriotic League, are all having their effect in producing a stream of recruits. Peterborough people are not going to be satisfied with raising one full company, but five hundred men in line, before the snow flies, is the object aimed at now. And they are going to come from the Peterborough district, too. Some of the Townships around Peterbrough are contributing splendidly now, and the others will fall in line while the city itself continues to supply men. The point to be remembered, however, is that all these men and many more are needed and needed at once.

The formation of the fourth platoon of the local company was commenced this morning. When the platoons were organized a few days ago No. 1 and No. 2 were complete, but No. 3 needed a number of men. All three are now at full strength and the surplus are forming No. 4 Platoon. As a result a number of promotions were announced this afternoon as follows:

To be Sergeant, provisionally, Acting Corp. J. Knowles; Acting Corporal, W. Jones, Pte. Hartshorn.

To be Lance Sergeant, provisionally, Pte. Naples (Band), Pte H. Freeman.

To be Corporals, provisionally, Pte. Jay, Pte. E. P. Clarke, Pte. W. Leader, (Band).

To be Lance Corporals, provisionally, Ptes. E. Laing, F. G. Manley.

All Peterborough members of the 33rd Battery draft who are home on leave from Barriefield Camp, are asked to meet at Roy's Studio to-morrow (Tuesday) morning, at 9 o'clock, sharp, for the purpose of having a photograph taken. Every member is asked to be on hand sharp on time.

Instruments Ordered.

At a meeting of the Speakers' Patriotic League, held at the headquarters on Saturday night, it was decided to order the instruments for the Peterborough Overseas Band at once. The Band will be equipped with the finest instruments that can be secured, Besson Class A instruments having been ordered. The contract that has been given calls for twenty-one Class A brass instruments, four B flat, and one E flat Class A buffet ebony clarionets, and soprano, alto, tenor, and baritone saxaphones, all Class A. It will be noticed that the order does not include the drums. These are to be presented to the Band by the Overseas Company and will be of the best quality. No band in the Canadian Expeditionary force will be better equipped than the Peterborough organization. The citizens generally are expected to stand behind the Committee in their endeavour to accomplish this splendid object.

Sergt.-Major Succee, formerly of the 57th Regiment, and now of the instructional staff at Barriefield Camp, was home for the week-end. Sergt. Instructor Springer, also of the Barriefield instructional staff, was his guest over Sunday.

Pte. Hirst, of the 48th Highlanders detachment in the 92nd Battalion, C.E.F., and formerly a foreman in the Auburn Woollen Mills, spent Sunday in town renewing acquaintances. A kilted soldier is almost as great a novelty in Peterborough as is a jolly Jack Tar.

Lieut. Wilfred Huycke, of the 59th Battalion, spent Sunday at his home here.

Quite a number of the local overseas company were on week-end leave yesterday.

The youngsters of Peterborough are very keen to go to the front as buglers. Already the full complement allowed by regulations has been taken on here, and others are on the waiting list. The organization of the bugle band will be proceeded in as short time; in the meantime the young buglers are learning the different calls.

More Progress To The North of Arras

To-day's Official Communique Announces That Allies Are Continuing to Make Progress in the Artois Region — Important Points Occupied.

COUNTER ATTACKS FAIL

PARIS, France, Oct. 4.—(French Official Communique.)—The Allies continue to make progress north of Arras, to-day official communique declared.

The War Office made no claim to important success in the Champagne region, but asserted that all German attacks on that front have been repulsed.

"We have made further progress in the Givenchy woods, west of Vimy," said the official statement. "Our troops have occupied an important cross road on Hill No. 119.

"In the region of Quennevjerres and Nouvron, the battle from trench to trench continued yesterday and last night.

"Near the Navarin farm, Champagne region," there was heavy bombardment by both sides. All the enemy's attacks against our newly won position north of Mesnil were repulsed.

"A French air fleet dropped forty large bombs on the Sabions railway station at Metz."

SEND-OFF FOR THE 33RD BATTERY BOYS ON TUESDAY NIGHT

Members of the Draft Who Are Home for Last Time Before Going Overseas Will be in Line in a Big Procession Headed by Overseas Band

FAREWELL ADDRESSES

Arrangements are being made to allow the people of Peterborough an opportunity to show their feeling towards the splendid body of boys who have enlisted with the 33rd Battery. All the Peterborough boys in the draft that is to go overseas at once are home just now on leave and will go to Kingston on Wednesday morning. A big procession will be formed to-morrow night at the armouries at 7.30 o'clock in which all the battery boys will take part. The band of the Peterborough battalion will head the procession and all the infantry recruits will parade in honour of their comrades in arms. After the procession there will be farewell addresses in the armouries. This is the last time home for the draft before going overseas.

The citizens generally are asked to turn out and make the demonstration one that the boys will remember. When the 33rd men left for Kingston they went in small detachments and little opportunity was given of showing the city's appreciation. To-morrow night will give the citizens a chance to give the boys a real send off.

Dismissals From Military Camps Occur Every Day

Not every recruit who swears his allegiance to the King and dons the uniform is destined to reach the front. On September 30 for instance, there were 120 men dismissed from the various military camps in Canada. Practically every day there is a list prepared and sent to the local patriotic fund offices throughout the country in order that the men who are discharged may be checked off the local lists of the funds's beneficiaries. Last Thursday's list was an exceptionally long one, but almost every day Ald. Dobbin at the local committee's office receives a copy of the latest list.

The dismissals indicate the extent of the weeding out process resulting from the strenuous work in the camps. Most of them are retired on account of medical unfitness, a few for inefficiency, some others for drunkeness, some by their wives purchasing their release; a very few desert. The most of them are turned back, however, for medical unfitness. The route marches and general work in camp brings out the weaknesses that escaped the medical examiners. The reports show the dismissals from all the camps from Nova Scotia to British Columbia, including Valcartier, Barriefield, Niagara and the Sewell Camp.

SAN TOY REHEARSAL

San Toy rehearsals this week will be on Tuesday for men at 8 p.m. at 295 Park street, and on Wednesday at 8 p.m. for all the company at Greene's Music Store, Charlotte street. It is important that all members should be present. Actions in two most important numbers will be taken up.

Prospects For Local Option Campaign

Will Be Discussed This Evening —Council May Be Asked to Endorse Movement

The Temperance forces of the city are considering the advisability of introducing a local option campaign at the January municipal elections. It is understood that a meeting will be held this evening to deal with the matter. If the prohibitionists decide to inaugurate a contest they will in all probability, wait upon the City Council this evening and request the Council's endorsation of the project in which case it will not be necessary to get up a petition. If the Council decide to take no action in regard to the matter the temperance forces will be confronted with the necessity of securing a petition representing twenty-five per cent. of the total vote of the city. Three years ago a similar request was granted by the Council. This year it is understood there is a division of opinion. Some of the aldermen have expressed their disapproval of a local option campaign under existing conditions.

Examiner Want Ad. Found a Five Dollar Bill

The Examiner Want Ad column seldom lets a day go past without recording some exceptional recoveries. On Saturday a woman advertised the loss of a five dollar bill. This morning, at 10 o'clock, a woman called at this office in order to get in communication with the loser of the five dollar note. She had picked up a bill of that denomination in front of the Turnbull store on Saturday. The other woman, however, lives in Orrington Road, a minute's walk from Crawford's Grove—too long a distance for a morning walk. However, the bill is as good as returned. A few of the articles returned to owners through the medium of the Examiner, and particularly through the honesty of the finders, were a gold bracelet watch a cameo pin, a gold brooch, and other goods.

SERBIA NOT IN DANGER

Reports of a Great Force for Invasion are Exaggerated,

PARIS, Oct. 2—Reports originating in various places that an immense number of German and Austrian troops has been concentrated on the Serbian front appear to have been greatly exaggerated, in the light of advices received here.

These reports gave the size of the Teutonic army as 200,000 to 600,000 men, who, it was represented, were ready to back a way to Constantinople.

It is now known that only about 10,000 men are threatening Serbia.

BALKAN STATES ON BRINK OF WAR

THE RUSSIAN FLEET READY TO ACT

THE CRISIS IN THE BALKANS IS RIPENING RAPIDLY HOUR BY HOUR

Russian Fleet Appears Off Bulgarian Seaport of Varna, Ready to Open Fire on the Expiration of the Ultimatum--Bulgaria Blames Serbia and Greece For Trouble---The Entrance of Greece Into the Conflict Is Assured.

GEN. IAN HAMILTON VISITS SALONIKA

LONDON, Oct. 4.—At Bulgaria's time limit, two o'clock this afternoon, London time, Czar Ferdinand's intentions were not known in London. It is possible that the ultimatum expired without an answer, and that the Russian Minister and his staff already have left the Bulgarian capital.

Petrograd despatches earlier in the day asserted that Russia would accept nothing but a complete back down by Bulgaria, whom she wants pledge herself to sever her relations with the central empires.

Russia still hopes war may be avoided even following the withdrawal of her Minister. There is possibility that the Bulgarian Cabinet may change its policy when it realizes the Allies mean war.

If hostilities come Russia will probably strike first by bombarding and landing an army of occupation on the Bulgarian Black Sea coast.

SOFIA, Oct. 4.—The Bulgarian News Agency to-day announced that it has been authorized by the Government to-day to state that German officers have arrived in Bulgaria to participate in the administration of the railways and the command of the army, and that Premier Radoslavoff had declared Bulgaria was to receive from Germany ten millions a month after she entered the war.

ROME, Oct. 4.—A telegram from Athens to the Tribune says that General Sir Ian Hamilton, British commander at the Dardanelles, has been at Salonika to inspect the arrangements made for the landing of troops.

ATHENS, Greece, Oct. 4. All doubt as to the entrance of Greece into the war on the side of the entente Allies is disposed of.

A BULGARIAN STATEMENT.

LONDON, Oct. 4.—"The obstinate refusal of Serbia and Greece to recognize the rights of Bulgaria in Macedonia" forced the mobilization decree that has brought Bulgaria to the brink of war, M. Radoslavoff, Prime Minister of Bulgaria, declared to-day.

Bulgaria's claime to Macedonian territory were conceded as legitimate by all the great powers, Premier Radoslavoff said. The Prime Minister's statement, which was dated September 30, and evidently underwent much delay in transmission, declared that Bulgaria had no aggressive intentions, but planned to realize "her legitimate claims."

Furthermore, she is prepared to resort to arms if necessary, he asserted.

OTTAWA, Oct. 4.—The commands of the First and Second Divisions of the Canadian Expeditionary Forces have now officially been made known as follows:

First Division, commanded by Major-General A. W. Currie, C.B., consisting of the First Brigade, including the four first contingent Ontario battalions under Brigadier-General Lord Broke, and also the Second and Third Brigades.

Second Division, commanded by Major-General Turner, V.C., D.S.O., consisting of the second contingent Ontario battalions, under the command of Brigadier-General Garnet B. Hughes, D.S.O., and also the Fifth and Sixth Brigades.

BERLIN, Via London, Oct. 4.—The French troops yesterday obtained a firm footing on a German trench on one of the hills north-west of Givenchy, the German War Office admitted this afternoon. The official statement, however, claimed the repulse of all other Allied attacks and claimed German gains against the British line north of Loos and against the French west of Vimy.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 4.—The note submitted by Ambassador Von Berstorff to Secretary of State Lansing in New York on "the Arabic incident," makes necessary still further negotiations, it was learned, following Secretary Lansing's return to work to-day.

Just where the German note fails to come up to the demands of President Wilson is not disclosed, but Ambassador Von Bernstorff will be asked to come to Washington in the next few days and go over the matter in detail with Secretary Lansing.

NEW YORK CITY, Oct. 4.—The half billion dollar loan to England and France is now guaranteed, and the books of the syndicate handling the huge financial project will be closed to-morrow.

AMSTERDAM, Oct. 4. — Six Allied aviators bombarded the German naval base of Zeebrugge on Sunday. One of the aviators was shot down and another forced to land near Nieuvliet, Holland. The damage done at Zeebrugge was not ascertained.

SALONIKA, Oct. 4.—Two powerful Russian squadrons have appeared off the Bulgarian Black Sea port of Varna, and will open a bombardment immediately on the expiration of the ultimatum. Bulgaria has no navy.

LONDON, Oct. 4.—Up till 2 p.m. to-day the German War Office had issued no official statement for the day, except a short paragraph to the effect that it had been proven that the British successes near La Bassee eight days ago was the result of a surprise attack, in which the British used asphyxiating gases.

NEW YORK CITY, Oct. 4.—At the offices of Rockefeller interests no confirmation or denial could be obtained of the report that John D. Rockefeller had subscribed ten millions to the Allied Loan.

More Progress To The North of Arras

To-day's Official Communique Announces That Allies Are Continuing to Make Progress in the Artois Region — Important Points Occupied.

COUNTER ATTACKS FAIL

PARIS, France, Oct. 4.—(French Official Communique.)—The Allies continue to make progress north of Arras, to-day official communique declared.

The War Office made no claim to important success in the Champagne region, but asserted that all German attacks on that front have been repulsed.

"We have made further progress in the Givenchy woods, west of Vimy," said the official statement. "Our troops have occupied an important cross road on Hill No. 119.

"In the region of Quennevierres and Neuvron, the battle from trench to trench continued yesterday and last night.

"Near the Navarin farm, Champagne region," there was heavy bombardment by both sides. All the enemy's attacks against our newly won position north of Mesnil were repulsed.

"A French air fleet dropped forty large bombs on the Sablons railway station at Metz."

Members of the Draft Who Are Home for Last Time Before Going Overseas Will be in Line in a Big Procession Headed by Overseas Band

FAREWELL ADDRESSES

Arrangements are being made to allow the people of Peterborough an opportunity to show their feeling towards the splendid body of boys who have enlisted with the 33rd Battery. All the Peterborough boys in the draft that is to go overseas at once are home just now on leave and will go to Kingston on Wednesday morning. A big procession will be formed to-morrow night at the armouries at 7.30 o'clock in which all the battery boys will take part. The band of the Peterborough battalion will head the procession and all the infantry recruits will parade in honour of their comrades in arms. After the procession there will be farewell addresses in the armouries. This is the last time home for the draft before going overseas.

The citizens generally are asked to turn out and make the demonstration one that the boys will remember. When the 33rd men left for Kingston they went in small detachments and little opportunity was given of showing the city's appreciation. To-morrow night will give the citizens a chance to give the boys a real send off.

Dismissals From Military Camps Occur Every Day

Not every recruit who swears his allegiance to the King and dons the uniform is destined to reach the front. On September 30 for instance, there were 120 men dismissed from the various military camps in Canada. Practically every day there is a list prepared and sent to the local patriotic fund offices throughout the country in order that the men who are discharged may be checked off the local lists of the funds's beneficiaries. Last Thursday's list was an exceptionally long one, but almost every day Ald. Dobbin at the local committee's office receives a copy of the latest list.

The dismissals indicate the extent of the weeding out process resulting from the strenuous work in the camps. Most of them are retired on account of medical unfitness; a few for inefficiency, some others for drunkeness; some by their wives purchasing their release; a very few desert. The most of them are turned back, however, for medical unfitness. The route marches and general work in camp brings out the weaknesses that escaped the medical examiners. The reports show the dismissals from all the camps from Nova Scotia to British Columbia, including Valcartier, Barriefield, Niagara and the Rewall Camp.

SAN TOY REHEARSAL

San Toy rehearsals this week will be on Tuesday for men at 8 p.m. at 205 Park street, and on Wednesday at 8 p.m. for all the company at Greene's Music Store, Charlotte street. It is important that all members should be present. Actions in two most important numbers will be taken up.

Prospects For Local Option Campaign

Will Be Discussed This Evening —Council May Be Asked to Endorse Movement

The Temperance forces of the city are considering the advisability of introducing a local option campaign at the January municipal elections. It is understood that a meeting will be held this evening to deal with the matter. If the prohibitionists decide to inaugurate a contest they will in all probability, wait upon the City Council this evening and request the Council's endorsation of the project in which case it will not be necessary to get up a petition. If the Council decide to take no action in regard to the matter the temperance forces will be confronted with the necessity of securing a petition representing twenty-five per cent. of the total vote of the city. Three years ago a similar request was granted by the Council. This year it is understood there is a division of opinion. Some of the aldermen have expressed their disapproval of a local option campaign under existing conditions.

Examiner Want Ad. Found a Five Dollar Bill

The Examiner Want Ad. column seldom lets a day go past without recording some exceptional recoveries. On Saturday a woman advertised the loss of a five dollar bill. This morning, at 10 o'clock, a woman called at this office in order to get in communication with the loser of the five dollar note. She had picked up a bill of that denomination in front of the Turnbull store on Saturday. The other woman, however, lives in Orpington Road, a minute's walk from Crawford's Grove, too long a distance for a morning walk. However, the bill is as good as returned. A few of the articles returned to owners through the medium of the Examiner, and particularly through the honesty of the finders, were a gold bracelet watch a cameo pin, a gold broch, and other goods.

SERBIA NOT IN DANGER

PARIS, Oct. 2—Reports originating in various places that an immense number of German and Austrian troops has been concentrated on the Serbian front appear to have been greatly exaggerated, in the light of advices received here.

These reports gave the size of the Teutonic army as 200,000 to 450,000 men, who, it was represented, were ready to hack a way to Constantinople.

It is now known that only about 10,000 men are threatening Serbia

FLAG DISPLAY AND LOYALTY.

We have had frequent communications regarding the absence of display of flags of the Empire on occasions of special patriotic character; on the absence of the cheering of soldiers departing for the wars. A well-known writer has recently said:

The other day Premier Borden was visiting the great and loyal city of Toronto, with the object of delivering a message from our soldiers at the front. His visit coincided with the news of victories in Flanders and the Argonne—a double reason for flags and paeans of joy. One would have thought to see flags everywhere, on the shop fronts, on towers and steeples, in the hands of the young men and maidens, in the hands of the old people and the little children. Manifestly it was a time for flags. In an American city had been celebrating a double triumph like that — victory in Europe and a visit from the First Commoner — it would have been ablaze with flags. The landscape would have been completely covered with stars and stripes. But Toronto the loyal, Toronto the Conservative, with the premier of its heart in its very midst, did not hang out one extra flag.

One reference to the above while true to the letter, indicates that flag-waving is not all. We all know that when the United States was in the throes of Civil war, that threatened to split it in twain, a century of the cult of flag-waving and flag-display did not serve to implant deep into the popular heart the spirit that the flag should develop and inflame. We all know that that country, the biggest democracy of the world, had to resort to conscription, the instrument of despotism, to get the people to fight for their national life, to save the flag that had been waved and displayed on every possible occasion and from every possible point; whose worship had been made a subject of training in the schools and the home for a century. The people in hundreds of thousands, who, each, had done more flag-waving in a day than the average Canadian would do in a year, had to be forced into the ranks to defend the flag they flaunted with such energy and artificial enthusiasm, and as a matter of habit. Toronto, which did not make a special show of the flag on the occasion of the visit of Premier Borden on a patriotic mission, and would have been a fluttering blaze of flags if he had come as a party leader, has shown her real regard for the flag by doing her bit in a rather big way—that is, thousands of its citizens, have rallied to the ranks, while the professional flag-wavers modestly effaced themselves in the cellar.

Our best friends, the friends we can count upon, and have proved true, in time of real need, do not wear their hearts upon their sleeves and flaunt their friendship in season and out of season. They live their kindness, and act their kindness in the time of need. The men that wave the flag the most, are not the most ready to stand by it and fight for the interests it represents, in the hour of call. Canadians as a whole are not great flag-wavers and given to cheering; but as a general thing, they are behind the flag, and their cheering is expressed more in deeds than clamours. Loyalty to the flag, and regard for its defenders, is rightly a matter of principle, not of emotion. The friend who gushes most under the impulse of temporary emotion; is not always the man who acts the friend in need. That will be the man whose personal loyalty is a matter of principle. So the man who waves the flag and cheers and shouts, is not the real devotee of the flag, but the man whose loyalty is a principle, who expresses his loyalty in acts, is the true believer in the flag.

We Canadians are most of us a good deal like that. We are as a rule, men and women, not given to gushing and sentimental, showy parade of the flag. But we are showing our loyalty to the flag by enlisting to fight, or by working to aid the cause, and advance the success of the efforts of those in the firing line. Any patriotism that will pass at par is founded on principle, and is keyed for its face value in the gold of action. That staunch old ursine cynic Dr. Johnson, said that "patriotism is the last refuge of a scoundrel." This is true of a good many of the flamboyant flag-wavers whose real interest is to serve personal or partizan interests by prostitution, or by display of his prostituted and pretended patriotism. At the same time, while absence of display of the flag, and profession of patriotism is not an evidence of deep-seated patriotism, it is almost universally an accompaniment.

COL. WATTERSON IN PROPHETIC GARB.

There are many eminent Americans who unreservedly express their sympathy with the Allies and their hope that German militarism will be crushed, but few are so outspoken as Col. Henry Watterson, the veteran Kentucky journalist, who recently, when interviewed by The Globe, declared that he was no clammy neutral, and added a few observations about the Kaiser that would make the Colonel distinctly persona non grata were he to visit Berlin. Col. Watterson not only believes the Allies ought to win, but he is quite convinced they will win.

"Marse Henry" has a well-established reputation as a prophet. One of the best bits of forecasting to which he has ever given expression was published in his paper, The Louisville Courier-Journal, sixteen years ago, on the outbreak of the Boer War. On that occasion he wrote:

"Whether in the frigid zone or in the tropics, the British Government has adapted itself to the wants and even the foibles of the people, and made them feel the inestimable value of the British birthright. What it once was to be a Roman citizen it is to be a British subject in the nineteenth century. The feeling that the majesty and power of England are extended over every one of her hundreds of millions of subjects, and the assurance thus given them of all the rights and privileges of life, are things that Americans, who have been in the habit of looking upon themselves as a little better than Britons, have not thoroughly realized. It is fully understood elsewhere, as is shown by the enthusiasm with which the colonists are hastening to help their titanic mother strike down the puny forces of the Boers. The lesson is an impressive one. It teaches not only that the Boers must inevitably be overcome, but that it will be infinitely better for them as well as for the remainder of South Africa. Civilization has a great deal of work to do in the Dark Continent, and the best workers should do it. The English stand head and shoulders as colonizers above Germans, French, and Portuguese, who divide the territory with her. Under them not only the natives will receive the largest possible liberty, but the Dutch themselves will feel the quickening influence of a higher and better civilization. The Boers may be conquered, but they still will be permitted to rule themselves, though they will not be allowed to rule other people. Their unprogressive, wasteful, tyrannical, and corrupt government will give way to an enlightenment that will fit them into a higher plane of life. They are fighting now against their best destiny, but it is not conceivable that they will fight long, and it is to be hoped they will not."

The Boers to-day realize that to be part of the British Empire is something worth fighting and dying for, although it is only sixteen years since they battled stubbornly to prevent incorporation in that Empire. Not since the Highlanders who fought at Culloden for the Stuarts scaled the Heights of Abraham for the Hanoverians fourteen years later has there been seen so sudden and so complete a reconciliation as that of Briton and Boer. The plans of Germany to detach South Africa from the Empire have utterly collapsed, and the man who, above all others, brought about Germany's undoing is General Botha, a Boer. "Marse Henry" never said a truer word than when he told the readers of The Courier-Journal in 1899 that under British rule "Dutch themselves will feel the quickening impulse of a higher and better civilization."—The Globe.

GERMANY'S LAST COLONY.

After the war is over, the only colony left to Germany will be the United States of America. —New York Herald.

HATE JOHN BUT THEY NEED HIM.

Because of his intensely anti-British activities in Munich, United States Consul Gaffney is shortly to return to the United States. No doubt, he, too, will apply to the British Government for a safe conduct, and be accommodated. They all look alike to John Bull.—London Advertiser.

NO MORE POLITICAL AUTOCRACY

That the days of government by an autocrat, or by a clique, have passed in Manitoba, is indicated anew by the announcement that the Norris Government has called a meeting of all the Liberal members of the Legislature to confer with it in reaching a decision upon some important matters is now under discussion. As no less than forty constituencies will be represented in the caucus, an informal meeting of the Legislature is, in fact, being held to deal with matters of public moment. — Manitoba Free Press.

GERMANY HAS LOST CHANCE OF GETTING THE GARDEN OF EDEN

The British expedition which for months has been fighting the Turks in Mesopotamia has now reached a point less than a hundred miles from Bagdad, after routing a greatly superior force. So stupendous is the conflict in Europe that the smaller side campaigns have been lost sight of, but this latest success of the British on the dry steppes of Arabia again draws attention to an important section of the conflict. Since early in the war a British-Indian force, entering by way of the Gulf of Persia, has been driving steadily up the valley of the Euphrates and Tigris Rivers towards Bagdad, ancient city of the Caliphs. Once Bagdad is taken the British will have little difficulty in holding this part of Asiatic Turkey, as Bagdad is the junction from which runs west to Alexandretta, a branch of the Kaiser's Bagdad Railway. Probably Kitchener's original object in sending this force was to cut the communications of a Teuton-Turk invasion of Egypt, one army of which it was expected would take this route. The collapse of the Turkish plans to seize the Suez has not altered the plans of the British, but it has given them a new objective. Controlling the caravan roads that radiate from Bagdad and completing the well-advanced railway systems of the Germans, would place the Allies in a position to send a large army against the Turks in Asia Minor. We may yet see armies of the Grand Duke coming over the Caucasus to co-operate with a British-French force driving up from the south. Caught thus on three fronts, the Ottomans would be trapped and crushed.

But even should the British be content with merely holding Mesopotamia, it makes a richer prize than is generally supposed and well worth the cost of a military expedition and occupation. The greater portion of its 143,250 square miles consists of lowlying level plains, conspicuous for their aridity, but lying as it does between the Euphrates and the Tigris, engineers have declared that irrigation can make of it a rich producer of cotton, fruits and cereals. In the north, which is mountainous, there are indications of great mineral wealth and signs of vast supplies of oil. It was the recognition of these possibilities that caused the Germans to secure rich concessions from the Sultan. The Kaiser dreamed of great German colonies in Asiatic Turkey that would open up new markets for industrial Germany, supply him with an outlet for an over-populated Fatherland, give him a power in the Near East to offset Great Britain's strong position in Egypt and the Suez, and provide him with a short cut for the descent of his armies on India when the hour struck to launch his world-conquest. Now all these hopes have vanquished.

But the British can be depended upon to make the most of the natural possibilities of Mesopotamia. And it may be that it will lead to a reclamation of the waste places of the adjacent Palestine until that land is once more a land "flowing with milk and honey." Perhaps restless millions of India may work out a splendid destiny under Arabian skies. Rid of the influence and domination of the slothful Turk and brought under the influence of British ideals and energy, the deserts of Asiatic Turkey may blossom into a fruitful land, home of a vigorous race. Mesopotamia to most of us has been nothing more than a name vaguely associated with the Bible, but it promises to be much more than that from now on. That British expedition that is winning its way to Bagdad is small in numbers, but big in the possibilities its success will open up.

The victorious little army holds an interest greater than the crushing of the Sultan's forces, and its further progress will be keenly followed.—London Advertiser.

END NOT DOUBTFUL.

We have all of us lost much, we shall many of us lose more, in the ghastly tragedy of this struggle. The end may be still far distant. But it is not doubtful. Man will master the machine whatever havoc it may work before the control from which human folly and human wickedness has released it is again decisively re-asserted.—London Daily News and Leader.

BELGIAN SLAVERY.

The Belgians who are forced to make war material that the Germans may have more ammunition to kill the friends who are fighting for Belgium's liberation are in a pitiable plight. These slaves are fed scientifically according to the thorough methods of Kultur and their souls are bent to the tasks at the point of a gun. The friends of peace in this country are asking for our contributions to keep alive this slavery in Belgium which is never mentioned in the German-American press.—Brooklyn Eagle.

AUSTRIA NEARING THE LIMIT.

Professor John Archer Silver, of Hobart College, has just returned from Vienna, where he has been for some time the guest of Ambassador Penfield, and he draws a dark picture of the condition of the public mind throughout Austria-Hungary. Dr. Silver describes the country as on the verge of commercial collapse, disgusted at German high-handedness, horrified at German atrocities and submarine attacks, apathetic over the outcome of the war, and looking forward only to oppression in future, no matter what the results of the war may be.—Detroit Free Press.

Swapping Armies.

It is something in these times to get a novel view of the war. Two workmen were discussing it, obviously under the influence of a great deal of unofficial news.

"It'll be an awful long job, Sam," said one.

"It will be an' all," replied the other. "You see, these Germans is taking thousands and thousands of Russian prisoners, and the Russian is taking thousands and thousands of German prisoners. If it keeps on, all the Russians will be in Germany and all the Germans in Russia. And then they'll start fresh over again, fighting to get back to their 'omes.

At the Sign of the Blue Pill.

I had occasion lately to tell a patient that he was suffering from shingles. "Shingles," he muttered, slowly. Thereafter a pause of thought "Weel, I dinna wonder; my mither cam' frae Peebles, an' my faither had gravel!" He was conscious of a nasty geological taint in his family history.

HER DARLING BOY.

His Mother Thought She Was Doing the Right Thing.

The small boy's mother was the only one who sat unmoved while the small boy himself, most unwelcome addition to the informal afternoon tea, gleefully galloped around the circular table, dalntily spread with silver and china and towered over by a cut glass lamp.

"I'm a squirrus pony!" shrilled the infant joyously as he tossed his flaxen locks and twinkled his besocked legs with ever increasing speed.

"Mercy! He'll have the lamp over!" shivered a nervous young woman as the human gyroscope stumbled over the edge of a rug, clawed at the table for support, then triumphantly continued circling. Conversation froze on pallid lips as they sat awaiting the inevitable crash. Only the voice of the small boy's mother rippled along serenely.

The nervous young woman could stand it no longer. In sheer despair she ventured, "Mrs. Archibald—er—pardon me—your dear little boy"—

The lady addressed stared blankly, then grasped the situation. "Malcolm!" she said sweetly. "Malcolm, dear, run around to the opposite direction, darling. Miss Vinton's afraid you'll make yourself giddy."—Success Magazine.

Hard to Please Him.

"Is he an actor?"

"Well, I wouldn't want to call him that."

"But he said he was connected with the profession?"

"Yes; I know."

"Is he connected with it in some menial form?"

"Oh, no! You see, it's difficult to tell just what to call him. He is the man that recites the plays into the funnel for the new theatorium machine."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Plenty of Material.

"And you refuse me, fair Beatrice?" cried Gaspard gloomily.

"Yes," retorted the haughty heroine, "I refuse you."

"Merciful turtles! You are the tenth girl that has handed me the marble heart."

"And what will you do now, poor man?"

"I think I shall open up a marble yard."—Chicago News.

Ocean Liners Booked For Rest of Season

The September Bulletin of the Canadian Patriotic Fund, says:

Branch secretaries are requested to note that for the time being no further accommodation can be secured on vessels sailing from Montreal to England. Nearly every boat for the balance of the season is booked full.

Correspondence received from a passenger on a liner that recently made the crossing to England renders it necessary to consider whether we are justified in sending further families to the Old Country until the Germans have abandoned their submarine policy. In the event of a vessel being torpedoed, the duty of saving women and children must inevitably result in the loss of life among men, and the latter are too valuable to be needlessly thrown away.

THE WORLD OF SPORT

RED SOX APPEAR STRONGER THAN THE NATIONAL CHAMPS

NEW YORK, Oct. 4.—On plain, unvarnished "dope" the Red Sox, from this comparatively early viewpoint, stack up stronger than the Phillies in the coming world's clash, and probably will, barring injuries, go into the October classic as big a favourite as ever did the Mackmen over the Giants, or the Mackmen over the Braves.

It wasn't luck that gave Bill Carrigan a pennant winner this year. It was plain, ordinary grit, plus a couple of tons of sheer fighting, and some rattling good, consistent baseball. No manager ever faced an April gateway with a stiffer field to fight against than did this same Bill Carrigan. Chicago's new, sadly crumpled White Sox, reinforced by the meteoric Collins at second, and with a cracking staff reckoned to be the class of the circuit, started well, and set the pace until June. When they had been squelched, a new ogre rose to confront the Boston Mentor—the Tigers. And it was some ogre. Cobb was playing the best baseball of his scintillating career. Crawford was slugging with all his old-time power. Veach was playing like a fiend, and Jennings had an infield—his first since 1908. All this array of power was backed up with a fair pitching staff.

But Bill Carrigan came through. When the time came for a "crucial" series—like the recent one with the Tigers at Boston, which really gave his men the pennant—he went out and won games. There was no cracking under the strain.

Boston has worked its way into the Big Tilt through the classiest field that ever represented Ban Johnson's loop. The Phillies have won a penannt from a field that probably is the weakest that ever represented the national circuit, and that's taking no credit away from Pat Moran either, because he deserves all the roses that can be shied at his red head.

Both the favourites in the National league dropped by the wayside. The Giants never were in the hunt, and the Braves, handicapped by injuries and suspensions, put up a game but futile fight, Brooklyn threatened for a while, but their opposition was not of the steady variety. The Phillies haven't played flashy ball. They displayed a flash to take the lead early in the season, but since then have played 50-50 ball, content in the belief that their enemies didn t have the stuff for a spurt that would overtake them. They were right, for had either the Braves or Superbas possessed a drive of any power at all, the Phils could have been unseated at almost any stage of the race.

And because of this—because Bill Carrigan's clan has fought its way to a pennant through a bunch of hard clubs while Moran has had comparatively easy sailing—because of this, the American league entry will, barring unforeseen events, go into the series a favourite, if for no other reason.

RECRUITS COMING IN SPLENDIDLY

bols" the men of the overseas company were going to present to the band. Cymbals was the word intended, but there is many a slip, etc.

No official announcement of the transfer of the local overseas company from the 80th Battalion to the new battalion that is to be organized has yet been made. At present the local company remains B Company of the 80th, but it will undoubtedly soon be changed to A Company of the new battalion. No number has yet been given out for the latter, but it will likely be in three figures.

The 80th Battalion at Barriefield is now about 750 strong. If the Peterborough company was counted in the 80th it would only need 150 recruits to complete its establishment.

Lieut. Jas. Lundy, of the 24th Field Battery, left this morning for Kingston to take a qualifying course in the School of Artillery, preparatory to going on active service.

A few short years ago Harold Meldrum, Norman Geale and Fred Denison formed the defence for the Peterborough Collegiate hockey team. Now all three are helping to defend the Empire, and by a singular coincidence two of them, Flight Sub-Lieutenants Meldrum and Geale, are aviators. Lance-Corpl. Denison is with the 34th Battalion, C. E. F. Hal. Wallis, who played with the Chieftains about the same time, is now a lieutenant at the front.

The list of former Peterborough hockey players who have heard the call of duty and have enlisted is a refutation of the statement sometimes made that Canadian athletes are indifferent to the Empire's need. Here are some of them: Bill Crowley, Cyril Giroux, Maurice Park, "Skid" Jones, Fred Denison, Orme Cavanah, Harold Morrow, Harold Knapman, Norman Geale, Hal. Wallis, Harold Meldrum, Walter Flowers, Pete Camobell, Stan. Wade, Alex. Butcher, Alf. Hagerman, Barney Quinn, Scotty Rogers, and Jack O'Dette.

The Peterborough overseas company is not only gathering good recruits, but is picking up talent of all kinds, as the public will find out the next time the boys put on a concert. The latest additions in this line are Ptes. Frank Traynor and Fred Clarke, who enlisted on Saturday night. Both have been connected with the theatrical business for a long time and are good musicians.

Corp. Lewington is in charge of the guard to-day. Corp. W. Theobald was the non-com. with yesterday's guard, while Corp. Wicker had charge on Saturday.

More uniforms for the Peterborough overseas company are being ordered. When the present consignment of uniforms arrived several weeks ago there were fifty to spare, but these as well as a number of khaki uniforms belonging to the 57th Regiment, have all been issued, and this morning half a dozen other recruits had to drill in civilian garb. The situation shows that recruits are coming in steadily. Another supply of uniforms is expected in at once.

Gunner Cook of the 33rd battery has an attack of malaria and is in the field hospital.— Kingston Standard.

Lieut. Rogers, of the 8th C. M. R. could easily make a living with the best minstrel show. He is a blackface comedian of no mean ability. His work on the programme at the Wednesday night dinner was worthy of the best artist.—Kingston Standard.

That the 21st Battalion is now occupying the trenches in which the Princess Patricia Light Infantry made such a gallant stand is shown by a letter received in the city this morning. The writer sent the letter on September 21st and on that date the battalion was in France and just behind the Princess Pats trenches.

As the second contingent has been in action, the battalion has most likely gone into the trenches immediately in front. This news has created considerable excitement in the city and all feel that the 21st Battalion will be a worthy successor in the trenches to the gallant Princess Pats.

On the date of writing the members of the 21st Battalion were all in good health and from the tone of the epistle they were all anxious to be in the trenches to do their "bit."

When the Princess Pats were in the trenches they nicknamed parts after famous hotels. It is now wondered what nick-name the Kingston battalion will use.—Kingston Standard.

Lieut. Jas. Lundy of the 3rd Prince of Wales Dragoons left to-day for Toronto, to take a course at Stanley Barracks before leaving for service overseas.

Capt. R. P. Watt and Bandmaster Walter Hughes of the local Battalion, leave to-morrow for Toronto to purchase the set of drums for the Peterborough Band. These drums are the gift of the officers and men of the Peterborough Company who subscribed $125 for the purpose among themselves. It is desired to have the presentation take place at the big concert in Brock Street Rink on Friday night.

The Part the Canadians Had In Great Battle

OTTAWA, Oct. 4.—Major-General Sir Sam Hughes last night received the following cable from Sir Max Aitken, general representative of the Minister of Militia in France:

"Canadian headquarters in France, Oct. 3.—During the latter half of the period, September 20-30, a combined British and French offensive has been steadily developing. Fierce fighting has taken place at various points along the allied line in weather alternating brilliant sunshine and torrential rains.

"Progress has been made on our front. Hostile fire has been somewhat heavier than usual, and the enemy's artillery has been more aggressive, but with little net results. The enemy's aeroplanes and snipers have been particularly active.

"On the morning of Saturday, September 25th, a demonstration was carried out by our divisions. The German trenches were heavily manned, and our artillery machine gun and rifle fire are believed to have caused numerous casualties. The enemy's official communique stated that an attack had been made by us and had been repulsed with heavy loss. This of course, is false.

Reports indicate considerable movement of troops in the rear of the enemy's lines opposite our front. Our working parties have repaired the slight damage to our wire and parapets caused by the enemy's shell fire, and have been continuously employed improving our lines. Our patrols continue to be very active at night.

"Major H. H. Matthews, has assumed command of the 8th Infantry Battalion."

Lord Hardinge's Address Before National Council of India

Tranquility Prevails in the Indian Empire—Several Outbreaks Fomented by Emigrants From Canada and the United States Have Been Put Down.

LONDON, Oct. 4. — A special despatch from Simla, India, says:

"Lord Hardinge, the Viceroy, made an important speech at the conclusion of the autumn session of the Council. Having briefly reviewed the progress of the war, he emphasized the fact that Great Britain's sea power was a decisive factor in the struggle, and paid high tribute to the magnificent courage and tenacity shown by the armies of Russia.

"The Viceroy affirmed that in India tranquility prevailed, the defence of India act having succeeded in restoring order in Punjab, which had been disturbed by emigrants returning from Canada and the United States imbued with revolutionary ideas. His Excellency in this connection praised the work of the Lieutenant-Governor, and said he believed the loyal people of Punjab were thoroughly satisfied with the measures taken.

Indian Tribesmen Loyal.

"Frontier points of India, he continued, had often been attacked by ignorant and fanatical tribesmen, but these attacks had always been repulsed with considerable losses to the attacking parties. Our own tribesmen were absolutely staunch and loyal. The Ameer of Afghanistan had throughout observed the strictest neutrality, which he would continue rigidly to maintain, but the situation in Persia was disturbed by roving bands armed with Austrian and German rifles, who wandered about endeavouring to make trouble.

"No one could look back on the last fourteen months and contemplate the part which India had played in the war with greater pride than he; nobody could appreciate better than he the deep-seated patriotism and whole-hearted loyalty of the people of India, which was ever shining as a beacon to illumine the history of the land. But as the war progressed he presumed, it would be felt more and more, and there might be times of anxiety and depression. If such a time came, they must show the world that India is united and that the blood of Englishmen and Indians had not been shed on the field of battle in vain. All attempts to create trouble and sow sedition would prove vain and fruitless.

War Over in Spring.

"Lord Hardinge concluded by referring to the question of the extension of his Viceroyalty and the desire of many that he remain in office after March next. He said the decision rested with the Imperial Government. He had readily agreed to remain until March (his period of office regularly expiring in November), to meet the wishes of the people of India, to make some slight, though inadequate, return for their sympathy and affection. He asked them to believe that the decision of the Imperial Government was in the best interest of India, and he trusted that by next spring the horrible war would be over.

"The Viceroy's speech was punctuated with cheers, and at its conclusion there was prolonged and hearty applause."

HOT SHOT FROM ST. PAUL'S PULPIT

Stirring Missionary Appeal for Greater Growing for Evangelization Purpose-

Sunday morning the esteemed pastor of St. Paul's Presbyterian church delivered an earnest missionary address to his congregation. During his discourse Rev. Mr. Pogue made some very pointed statements, which must have appealed to all concerned.

Last year the Presbytery of Peterborough were asked by the Synod to raise $30,000 for missionary purposes. It only raised $13,000. The average missionary contribution of the members of St. Paul's church was 5c. per Sunday.

Out of a congregation of over 1,000 members, only about 300 were contributing anything at all to the missionary schemes of the church.

There was already an overdraft of over $700 during the past nine months of the year against the church.

Envelope contributions are $900 in arrears for the past nine months of this year.

The average amount contributed by each member of St. Paul's for the stipend of the minister was only $2.65. Compared with a country congregation like Springville, who contributed $9.00 per member.

Farmers should have a separate bin set apart for the Lord. Merchants should open a bank account in the morning on behalf of the Lord's work.

The text was taken from 1st Chronicles, chapters 28 and 29, in which a description of King David's great work for the building of the temple was portrayed. The pastor appealed to his people to emulate David's example.

Willie Spoke.

Sister — "Come, Willie, and take your powder like a little man. You never hear me make any complaint about a trifle like that." Willie—"Neither would I if I could daub it on my face like you do. It's swallowing the stuff that I don't like."

Stock Markets

NEW YORK, Oct. 4—Weekly market summary: With daily sales averaging 1,500,000 shares the week in the Stock Market was the most active in almost a decade. Speculation in war shares, coppers and specialties of all descriptions continued on a scale unknown since the years of the great industrial boom.

U. S. Steel was the foremost feature in point of activity, but failed to make appreciable headway until Saturday, when it advanced to 81¼, a small fraction under its best quotations since 1911. Conditions in the steel trade are now at the stage where producers are able to pick and choose, as was demonstrated by further advances in prices of finished materials. Similar conditions attend the copper market, refined metal advancing in response to increased inquiries from home and abroad.

Railroads alone failed to take part in the advancing movement of the week, despite the publication of numerous favourable statements of earnings for August. The annual report of the Union Pacific Railroad for the fiscal year 1914-15, was disappointing. However, in that earnings on the common stock fell almost 2 per cent.

In the broad domain of finance the completion of preliminaries connected with the Anglo-French loan constituted the outstanding feature. The price at which the loan is to be offered to the public is believed to insure its success but the effect of the flotation on the bond market in general is problematical.

According to officials of the New York Stock Exchange, the campaign to prevent bucket shops from obtaining the use of its tickers has already borne fruit. The Exchange's agents have been unable to get trace of any bucket shop that has been opened since last December that has had the use of its quotations.

At a special meeting on October 18 stockholders of the Tennessee Copper Company will vote on the proposed issue of $3,000,000 first mortgage convertible six per cent. bonds. The right to subscribe for these at par will be offered to stockholders. The bonds will be convertible into stock after two years at the rate of $40 a share.

According to a despath from Washington, the government's cotton condition and ginning reports which were to have been issued Saturday, will not be given until to-day. The Southern storm has delayed collection of complete ginning figures and issuance of the condition report was postponed because the law provides that both must appear on the same day.

Leading bankers admit that in their opinion it is a most fortuitous circumstance that the fortunes of war changed in favour of the allies just at the time when help was most needed in securing the co-operation of bankers in support of the foreign loan. But for weakening of the German offensive in Russia, and the success of the offensive of the British and French along the western front, the loan negotiations might now be merely marking time, instead of having reached a successful conclusion.

In the World of Finance.

On the New York Stock Exchange someone started a movement for the closing of the Board all day Saturday, on the ground that a holiday was necessary to enable the clerical forces in brokers' offices to catch up with their work, fallen behind because of the vast increase in business. In view of the fact that yesterday was Sunday and October 12 will be celebrated as Columbus Day, the movement was quickly stopped.

With the increase in its foreign exchange business the Guaranty Trust Company has appointed George Weston as an additional assistant to Max May, head of the Company's foreign department. Mr. Weston had been in charge of the foreign exchange business of the American Express Company for several days.

By reason of maturity, the New York Stock Exchange has stricken from the list the following securities: Pennsylvania railroad Company, convertible 3 1-2 per cent. bonds and General Motors Company first lien five years 6 per cent notes.

On October [illegible] comes in England and France, and about there amounted to [illegible] tons —a decrease of 3,169 tons as compared with September 15.

NEW YORK, Oct. 4.—The buying movement in Westinghouse and Car Foundry showed no abatement in the second and final hour of business, but extended into a number of other stocks so that trading developed greater breadth than at the opening. It was conceded that in the general list, realizing sales had been absorbed without over-taxing buying demand, and that the market's technical position was improved as the result of the day's operations.

INFLUENCE OF MISSIONARIES IN SUBLIME LOYALTY OF INDIA

Referred to in Sunday Morning Address at Murray Street Baptist Church by Rev. Dr. Brown, of Toronto—How India Passed Through its Own Crisis as Related by an Admirer of That Country.

The cumulative effect of the unremitting ministrations of the English-speaking missionaries was attributed as one of the impelling influences behind India's loyalty in the present war, by the Rev. Dr. J. G. Brown, of Toronto, Superintendent of Baptist Foreign Missions, in his address on "India and the War" at the Murray Street Baptist Church yesterday morning. All the world has wondered, it may be well said, at India's munificent and devoted assistance to the Mother Country in her great crisis, and probably slight credit for this response has been given to those men and women who have spent their years in the wide provinces of India as ambassadors of Christ and unconsciously as ambassadors of Great Britain. They went to preach the gospel and the ideals of Christianity; incidentally they represented the ideals of the British people.

While not unduly emphasizing this point, Rev. Dr. Brown remarked that the donors to missionary work might find in it an added satisfaction.

The Wave of Asiatic Unrest.

Seven years ago the tide of unrest that swept Asia from Turkey to Japan exerted a considerable force in India. The Russo-Japanese war at that time was regarded as a contest between the most powerful countries representative of Europe and Asia. The people of India were all on the side of Japan, not only because Great Britain was with her but because somehow or another they regarded the Japanese as brothers and felt that they were involved in the great struggle. Dr. Brown said that the Indian people believed that Japan had conquered by reason of the fact that she was a free country, managing her own affairs and moved by a new democracy. India was tremendously affected thereby. Followed the revolution in China which witnessed the sloughing in a day of the old trappings of the past. Then in her revolution Persia stepped out as a self-governing country. In Turkey the Young Turk party set up a new constitution with the changes that involved.

The Attitude In India.

Witnessing these conditions, the people of India began to see visions, and to dream dreams. They began to wonder why they were under British rule, and if it were not time to throw it off. A grave situation was affecting the whole people. It was the nearest to the mutiny that was then taking place. The wiser men say that the country was unfit for self-government. Nine-tenths of the populace could neither read nor write, and the country was divided into one hundred and forty races and tribes. Rev Dr. Brown apostrophized that it was a mistake to think India was entirely an unintellectual country. A great number of the Hindus, Mohommedans, and Christians were intelligent men. They felt that there was no national conscience and there was not a sense of unity. But, if they were not ready for self-government, they believed that the Mother Country should begin to give them a more active part in the affairs of the country.

The Indian National Assembly.

At that time, Lord Minto was the Viceroy and Lord John Morley was Secretary of State. It was fortunate, Dr. Brown observed, that both these men were in sympathy with the aspirations of India. As a result, there was established the Indian National Assembly for the whole country, and each province was given an elective assembly. The franchise was given to those who knew how to use it. The result was that the wave of unrest broke and was followed by the wave of loyalty which has been illustrated by India's generous participation in the war.

Lord Hardinge is a Godsend. Rev. Dr. Brown stated; there never was a Viceroy who captivated the people as he has done. He and Lady Hardinge have given a son to the conflict and have created a strong bond with the people.

The Kaiser Thwarted.

The fact of the revolutions among India's neighbours emphasized the depth of her loyalty to the crown, and Dr. Brown still further exemplified it in the Kaiser's failure to stir up trouble among India's Mohommedans by his influence in Turkey.

"They did rise," said Dr. Brown. "They rushed to the Viceroy upon the outbreak of war, and to a man said, 'all that is ours is yours.' It was the most wonderful exhibition of loyalty the world has ever seen, as they stepped into line with the rest of the Empire."

Reasons for India's Loyalty.

Dr. Brown mentioned three reasons for India's loyalty to Great Britain. First, she has had one hundred years of British rule and is by far the best governed country in the world to-day. Great Britain sends her greatest sons to India, the flower of the universities, the ablest members of the bar, of the civil service, of the army. The country is going forward and will be one of the best countries in the world. India looked around remembering the old days with their war and bloodshed from the Himalyas to Cape Comorin. The country was growing richer, the population was increasing at the rate of two millions a year in spite of difficulties and remembering these facts the people showed their appreciation of British rule.

Secondly, India realized that the cause of the Allies was just. They have a high sense of justice, and they saw that Great Britain had been reluctantly drawn into the war and was giving her men and money because of her pledged word. That touched the imagination of the people. They were proud to come to the help of such a nation. They felt in these words, "A nation that would keep its word to Belgium, would keep its word to us."

And thirdly the work of five thousand missionaries and with them their twenty thousand native workers and four millions of Christians of whom three hundred and fifty thousand are Baptists. The natives do not often see the Government officials; but the missionaries are always among them. They see that he is a scholar, a gentleman and a Christian and they learn to trust him. When the bazaars are filled with wild rumours, spread by German emissaries, the people go in their perplexity to the missionaries saying, "we know you will tell us the facts."

Would Have Been Handicapped.

Had India not been loyal Britain's hands would have been so tied that she would not have been able to send a man to France, the first regulars could not have beendispatched to assist the French and the world knows "that contemptible little army's" share in wrecking the German machine. The effect of the example and presence of the missionaries is self-evident.

When the bazaars are filled with able to repay India for all she has done, Dr. Brown asked in conclusion. Her armies are in Flanders and France, in the Dardanelles, in Egypt and the Euphrates Valley. "Give them this," said Dr. Brown holding up his Bible. "Multitudes there are intellectually convinced of the truths of Christianity. They are only waiting till the shadow of war is lifted."

A GRAND OPERA FESTIVAL TO BE HELD IN TORONTO

Large Portion of the Proceeds Are to Go to Patriotic Purposes

The approaching Grand Opera Festival to be held at the Arena, Toronto, on the nights of Thursday, Friday and Saturday, October 21, 22, and 23, with a Saturday matinee, should hold peculiar interest for local music lovers. The organization combines the forces of the Boston Grand Opera Company and the Pavlowa Ballet Russe, and a generous proportion of the entire receipts will, through the medium of the National Committee of Women for Patriotic Service, go to provide "Field Comforts for our fighters at the front."

The peculiar merit of the combination consists in the fact that with the unusual number of 250 artists, they are able to present certain operas that have never before been given in Canada and but rarely in the United States. These are "The Dumb Girl of "Portici," by Auber and the modern production of Montemezzi, "The Love of Three Kings." Only the addition of a trained ballet of the rank of the Palowa Imperial organization makes these performances possible, and so they have usually been shelved by managers. Two operas de lux will be given: "Carmen," to which will be added the original ballet produced in Petrograd and Paris, and never seen on this continent, and "Madama Butterfly." In this last opera, the dream of Puccini has been materialized in the engagement of a Japanese prima donna for the title role, and Americans for the parts of the naval lieutenant and the United States Consul. Mlle. Tamakik Miura is the only real Japanese who has mastered the art of accidental tone production. She was congratulated by Mascagni and Mde. Patti and personally presented to King George and Queen Mary on the occasion of her performance in London of the part of Cio Cio San.

The organization covers other artists of the absolutely highest and established rank in both the orchestra and in the cast of the programme and the Company is under an absolute guarantee to bring these artists to Toronto. One interesting fact concerning them is that they are all allies with the exception of [illegible] the American [illegible] and Miss Gay, who is [illegible]. The [illegible] include Elizabeth Campbell, Canadian; Margo Teyte, [illegible] Lyse, Armenian; Zenatello, Italian; Stephanie Pleskowska and Richard Ordynski, late of the Stage Direction, Polish; Zanelli, Primo, French; Tanek, Nevada, Japanese; and of [illegible] Petrova, Russian.

The Americans are Riccardo Martin, Kentuckian, who was chosen to fill the place of Caruso at the Metropolitan Opera Company and Thee Chalmers, Missourian; with many others of all nationalities, who are either on the side of the Allies or distinctly neutral. All this makes the affair emphatically patriotic, aside from the fact that the bigger the house the more comforts will be provided for our Canadians holding the Western frontier.

The entire equipment will come to Canada in a special train of twelve cars, bringing the scenery specially painted for the new organization, by such artists as Bakst, Urban and Sines, whose grotesque caricatures reproduced in the London illustrated weeklies are but a minor part of his real work. The whole affair is not merely novel from the audience standpoint, but new. Never before has such a combination of music, pantomime and dancing been effected. It is the war itself which has enabled Max Rabinoff, Impresario-in-Chief, to assemble such a gathering.

The opening bill will be "The Dumb Girl of Portici," followed by "The Love of Three Kings." "Madama Butterfly" will be given at the Saturday matinee and "Carmen" on Saturday night. After the Friday performance of "The Love of Three Kings" the ballet of "Orpheus and Eurydice" will be given by Mlle. Pavlowa and her entire ballet of fifty and the principals and chorus of the Boston Grand Opera Company. After the matinee performance of "Madama Butterfly," "Snowflakes" (Tschaikowsky's "Nut-Cracker" Ballet) will be given with Mlle. Pavlowa.

Tickets for the season can be obtained from the Mason & Risch Piano Rooms, Yonge Street, Toronto, and range from $1.00 to $3.50, with box seats at $5.00.

YESTERDAY AT ST. JOHN'S CHURCH

At the services in St. John's church yesterday several subjects of interest came before the congregation. The passing of Miss Yokome and Mr. John Bell during the past week called the Rector to express the deep sympathy of St. John's members for the relatives. The bequest of $1,000 by the late gallant Major Bennett was announced. Mr. Howard Crowe, civic in the city and Canada for active service was given good-bye and God-speed by his fellow choristers after Evensong, he having been a chorister from a boy. Miss Kathleen Moore in the morning and Miss Daisy Sharman in the evening sang well during the offertory. The Church Woman Association announce a musical for Oct. 20th, to provide Christmas comforts for the soldiers on active service. The noon day services are to be held until further notice.

"See that man across the street. He landed in this town ten years ago without a penny in his pocket." "And now?" "Now he owes me £10."

MONTREAL, Oct. 2.—Up from the valley of death, abandoned as hopeless by the surgeons, officially reported dead, yet now safe in Montreal, is the remarkable experience of a young gunner of the 5th (Westmount) Field Battery, Jack Forman. This is a war of unique happenings, but his adventure is among the strangest. Much of it he only knows from those who told him of it afterwards. He still has one arm in a sling, owing to an injury to the bone of his elbow, and he is fairly pitted with scars on face, head, arms, body and legs, but lost no limbs and is in a fair way to complete recovery.

It was on April 26, the sixth day of that terrible continuous fourteen days' fight at Ypres, which began with the "Gas," and all but exterminated the Fifth Battery that Forman "got his." He was on "C" gun, and the battery had taken up a new position, had "dug themselves in" (completed a concealment trench), the gun next him, "B," had fired two or three rounds towards St Julien, and those on "C" were just preparing to do the same. Their position had not been discovered, but the Germans were firing wildly in almost every direction, and a stray shell dropped squarely on the gun. It was a heavy high explosive, and what was "C" gun of Westmount, became a flying mass of atoms; what had been crew were dead, with the exception of two torn and mangled men. One of these two was Forman.

Blinded by Blood.

Blinded by blood pouring from a score of wounds in his head; deafened by the awful crash, he turned and staggered towards "D" gun, only ten feet away. His comrades from that gun ran out and carried him into their dugout. Fortunately one of the gunners had taken a course in first aid in Montreal, before the war was even talked of, and held a St John's Ambulance certificate. With such means as were available, Forman's wounds were bandaged and improvised tourniquets used, to stop the bleeding. It was three days before he could be got to the dressing station.

"All that I knew," he said, when asked by a Herald reporter, "was that there was a blinding flash. I heard nothing, felt nothing, knew nothing else, until I found myself lying off my back. I could not tell where. It was dark, oh so dark! It turned out that I was at a dressing station and it was three days after the shell struck us. They tell me that I talked frequently, but I had no consciousness of doing so or of anything else. Then I heard some one say, 'Take that man away; we can do nothing for him.' It was one of the surgeons. Who was he talking about? Then I felt them raise me up and carry me outside. Still it was dark. I could not see the men moving me.

The Terrible Thought.

"Was I blind? The thought seemed to stir me up to full consciousness. I was the one for whom nothing could be done. I had been carried out to make room for some one else for whom there might be a chance! Both of my arms were paralyzed, but I managed to get one hand up. It was bandaged. This must have been done by the boys on "D" gun, next to ours. Finally I reached my eyes and dug out the clotted blood. I could see! Then there came upon me a conviction that I was not going to die. It thrilled me through and through. My case had been abandoned as hopeless; I was confident that it was not. I called an orderly and induced him to put me among those whose wounds had been dressed and were to be moved to the hospital. As I [illegible] the [illegible] the [illegible] the two factors that had much to do with my life being saved was that personal confidence that I was not going to die and the good condition that I was in at the time I was wounded.

Down to Last Shell.

"It is changing positions that we get it. When entrenched the enemy do not often find us, but it is necessary to get more or less in the open when the condition of the line requires that we should change. Then shells are falling so thickly that it is impossible always to avoid them. We changed six times from the time the fight at Ypres commenced until I got mine. For three days we had no food and only what water we had in our bottles when the fight began. Then, in one of our new positions, we found a tin of biscuits, and divided them among us. The shelling by the enemy was so heavy that supplies could not be got to us. Three times in the six days we were own to our last shell, before we got aid from the ammunition park."

One Lost an Eye.

The only other survivor of the "C" gun was not so fortunate. He is living, but had one eye and part of his jaw shot off and has both arms paralyzed. While the old Westmount Battery was reduced to one gun, and that had to be taken away to be repaired, the battery has been reconstructed and is awain in action. Sergeant Charles Weldon, who was wounded and is now in a convalescent home in England, returns to the front on October 1. Bdr. Leslie Joyce, wounded in attempting to get ammunition to the guns in the Ypres fight, is back on the firing line. Acting Sergeant Olsen, who was awarded the D. C. M., was killed while endeavouring to repair the field telephone, under heavy fire. He was struck by a shell and killed instantly. Gunner Shaw (of 6 Buckingham Avenue, Montreal) was working with him at the time, and was wounded by the same shell. He is still in hospital in England. His younger brother has enlisted and is going out with the Third Contingent. Ingraham (Gitz) Rice has been transferred from the Westmount Battery to the Army Medical Corps. Williams Weldon, the second son of Ald. Weldon, and brother of Sergt. Charles, has joined the 31st Battery, and goes to the front with the rank of sergeant.

Mr. Sillery is one of the best known Methodist preachers and his eloquent addresses yesterday were much appreciated. At the Mark Street Methodist Church yesterday, which was marked by a rally day in the Sunday School with a very large turnout. Rev. G. T. Bartlett the Grand Secretary of the Young People's Societies of the Methodist Church, delivered an interesting address. Rev. Mr. Bartlett also preached at the evening service, and conducted a service of praise illustrated by lantern views depicting the life of Christ.

Paragraphs of Interest to Farmers

Potato Crop Will Be Light—Farmers Are Still Harvesting in Some Parts of the County

Isolated instances are known in Peterborough County where farmers are still endeavouring to complete the harvesting of the grain crop. Such a condition is unusual, and is directly attributable to the wet season.

Sir Adam Beck announced in Ottawa last week that the purchases of remounts for the Canadian forces is finished for the present. He now starts to buy horses for the British Government. The average prices paid were: Light horses, $165; artillery horses, $176.

Notwithstanding reports to the contrary, Guelph expects the big winter fair to be held there as usual.

W. H. Bryce, a successful breeder of Clydesdales in the west, died at Arcola, Sask., last week. He exhibited in the United States and Canada.

Two daughters of A. Capling, Shakespeare, had a close call. A large slide barn door was blown off its tracks, fell on them and broke the leg of one of the girls.

In some districts farmers are having to pay more per bushel for threshing. The straw is so long and tough that it takes more time running it through the separator.

A man in close touch with the potato crop in western Ontario states that it will be a dismal failure.

Potatoes are a very unsatisfactory crop this year so far as Peterborough County is concerned. Many farmers are taking them up a little earlier than usual in the hope that it will help to save them from rotting.

John Brown, aged 45, a farmer living seven miles from St. Mary's, was killed Tuesday. His horse ran away and threw him from the buggy.

John Burgess, farmer, residing near Petrolea, had his leg broken by being thrown from his horse crossing the G.T.R. tracks.

Live stock buyers have been hit hard during the past few weeks by the falling markets.

Fall fairs have been attended better this season, farmers taking more interest in exhibiting and in looking over stock with the object of improving their herds.

The fortnightly report of the Saskatchewan Department of Agriculture, issued Tuesday, states that harvesting of grain is practically completed, while 25 per cent. of the flax crop remains still uncut. Grain is grading high. Prices are a disappointment. Forty bushels to the acre is not uncommon.

A car of horses purchased at Rockwood last week by a Montreal buyer brought an average of less than $150.

The Keene Fair will be held on October the fifth and sixth and Norwood Fair on October the twelfth and thirteenth. This winds up the fall fair season for Peterborough County.

A few good horses are being picked up at the fall fairs by city buyers at fair prices.

J. Walsh of Walton sold a fine pair of carriage horses in Toronto last week for $475.

John E. Swarts of Wingham, proprietor of the Queen's Hotel, Wingham, and extensive farmer as well, and one of the best known horsemen in western Ontario, died suddenly of heart failure on Saturday.

Owing to the wet season farmers were prevented from preparing the ground for fall wheat. This will make the acreage sown much lighter than expected.

Allen Newman, a farmer living near Windsor, committed suicide by shooting himself with a shotgun. Depression caused by failure of crops on account of heavy rains is thought to have unhinged his mind. He was 50 years old.

Threshing in Peterborough County is reaching a speedy conclusion. Threshermen report a fairly good quality of grain despite the unfavourable season. Barley is somewhat discoloured.

LOCOMOTOR ATAXIA.

"My nerves were very bad, and I could not sleep at night, nor could I control my legs or legs," writes Mrs. Robert Bustard, Hantsell, N.B. "Dr. Chase's Nerve Food cured me of what I believe was the early stage of locomotor ataxia or paralysis. I cannot describe what I suffered, but now I am entirely cured."

ANNUAL CONVENTION OF COUNTY TEACHERS' INSTITUTE

The annual convention of the County of Peterborough Teachers' Institute will be held on Thursday and Friday, Oct. 21st and 22nd. The forenoon and afternoon sessions on Thursday will be at the Normal School. The evening meeting on Thursday and all the meetings on Friday will be in the Assembly Hall of the Collegiate Institute. These will be joint meetings with the City Teachers' Institute.

At the evening session, to which the public are invited, there will be, in addition to a short musical programme, a lecture by Dean Coleman, of the Faculty of Education of Queen's University, on "The Hundred Years of Peace Between Canada and the United States. Dr. Coleman will also address the convention on Friday forenoon. One address each day will be given by Mr. Chisholm, of the Peterborough Normal School.

T. A. S. MEMBERS AT CHURCH YESTERDAY

The Total Abstinence Societies of the city received Holy Communion on Sunday morning at early masses in the three Catholic Churches yesterday morning. At St. Peter's Cathedral Bishop O'Brien renewed his admonitions to the members to remain true to their pledges and to endeavour to influence others, by example and otherwise, to join the society. A meeting of the amalgamated T.A.B. was held in the afternoon, at which plans for the Fall and Winter work were considered. There will likely be an active canvas for new members.

4,000 Married Men Enlisted in August Adds $70,000 a Month to Patriotic Fund's Expenditures

Four thousand married men were included in the August enlistment of Canadian volunteers for service overseas. With the estimated September quota this brings the total number of married men up to twenty-three thousand. Ald. Dobbin told the Examiner to-day that when the Patriotic Fund was established it was believed that not more than five thousand married men would be enrolled during the first year. But the present total is practically six times greater than was anticipated.

The September bulletin from the Patriotic Fund says that the August enrollment of married men will probably increase the fund's expenditure by $70,000 per month, or $840,000 a year. From this it will be recognized that an effort may be made to discourage the enlistment of married men. There has been no action taken in this direction, but it would not be surprising if some movement was made to that end.

August enlistment of married men is made up as follows:

North Alberta	273
South Alberta	240
Vancouver	274
Saskatchewan	168
Toronto	1,300
Montreal	500
Hamilton	264
Ottawa	200
	3,219

The balance of the 4,000 is made up by Victoria and other parts of British Columbia, New Brunswick, Nova Scotia, Prince Edward Island, and various centres in the provinces of Ontario and Quebec. Manitoba, as an independent organization, is not included.

Waterloo County's Total.

Waterloo County, Ont., with a population of about 65,000, half of which is German or German origin, is the first rural county to subscribe over $100,000.00 to the Canadian Patriotic Fund, its total paid-up subscriptions to Sept. 30th, 1915, amounting to $114,538.60.

This result has been largely brought about by the efforts of Berlin, Galt and Waterloo.

SHELLING THE GERMAN LINES FOR SECOND DRIVE IN WEST

PARIS, Oct. 4.— The French progress in Champagne continues without abatement, although the official communiques are becoming more laconic and lacking in detail. The French advance along the entire Champagne front now averages several miles, and the French front line now for the greater part faces what was the German second line.

As I attempted to indicate in my despatches a few days ago, without disclosing details, the French on their first advance actually penetrated far beyond the first German line in some cases. At one point they threatened a position which would have enabled them to rout the enemy to right and left by the severance of his communications.

One fantastic account, written in Paris by a correspondent who projected his astral body to the battlefield, was allowed to pass because in the light of later Press Bureau announcements nearly every paragraph in it was wrong. For instance, he mentioned a certain river, describing how the French forded it on bridges composed of the bodies of Germans. It is pointed out this river is so small and dry at this season that one living German standing in it would effectually dam it.

The reason given by a Foreign Official for the meagreness of detail in the latest communiques is that the artillery is now engaged in doing to the second line just what it did to the first—applying the "iron curtain," as the French call it— and carrying out the orders of the general commanding that particular army. "I expect you to do your work that the infantry can advance with their rifles on their shoulders."

It is the French form of warfare opposed to German mass attacks supported by artillery that is now preparing ultimate victory for the French arms. For, no matter how hard, the French Commander-in-Chief's orders addressed to the soldiers of the republic will be carried out.

TO COLLECT PAPERS AND MAGAZINES

Ashburnham Patriotic League Will Gather Them Thursday and Friday of This Week—Have Yours Ready

Citizens of Peterborough are asked to assemble all their old papers and magazines, to be collected on Thursday and Friday of this week by the Ashburnham Patriotic League for the purpose of raising money for Red Cross work. This league, which has done splendidly on behalf of the sick and wounded soldiers, deserves the hearty cooperation of every citizen in their effort to increase their funds. The city has been divided into sections, and people will greatly facilitate matters by having their papers and magazines tied in bundles with strong twine. The entire city will be covered in the two days. The business men of Ashburnham are giving their waggons and automobiles to assist the ladies in the collection. Everyone has his or her share in this great conflict, and here is an opportunity where all can do something to help the wounded soldiers. Get your old papers together and have them ready when the collector calls.

Armenians Write of Massacres

LEOMINSTER, Mass., Oct. 4.—Jacob David, of Leominster, a Baptist missionary at Urumiah, Persia, has written to William S. Reed describing the cruelties inflicted on thousands of Christians by Turks and Kurds. The letter says:

"The poor Christians left their homes and all their belongings and fled to the American colony for refuge. The Kurds and Moslems plundered villages, took captive young women and killed any person, old or young, who could not escape. About 110 villages were laid waste by the torch.

"The Turkish officials do not let us go out and bury our dead. Almost every night they loot at least one Christian house. All shops that belong to Christians are plundered. We are carrying the brunt of the war, a nation is reduced to beggary."

"Teacher has been telling us a lot about improper nouns," said the little girl. "I don't know what things are coming to," replied the grandmother; "nothing improper was ever taught when I was at school."

AN ENTHUSIASTIC RECRUITING MEETING HELD AT WARSAW

Able Addresses by His Honour Judge Huycke, Mr. J. A. Sexsmith, M.P., Mr. F. D. Kerr and Others

A largely attended and representative audience gathered at the Town Hall, Warsaw, on Saturday evening in connection with the series of patriotic meetings being held throughout the County.

Dr. Munro of Warsaw, occupied the chair, and in a short address stated that he felt that the people of Dummer would do their duty, but felt that they, in common with many other parts of the Dominion, had not yet fully realized the tremendous import of the great war. The proceedings then opened with prayer by the Rev. Mr. Brown, Presbyterian Minister.

Mr. J. A. Sexsmith, M.P., delivered an earnest and impressive address, dealing with the duty of the Canadians at the present hour and urged the young men of Dummer to enlist for their country's cause.

Mr. F. D. Kerr strongly urged the duty of each citizen in supporting the Red Cross and Patriotic Funds, pointing out that this was a duty that came home to every man in the audience.

His Honour Judge Huycke, who made the final address, kept the audience's undivided attention in an impressive and eloquent appeal to the young men of Dummer to rally to the support of their country and their country's flag. The Judge's appeal evidently made a deep impression upon the audience, and at the conclusion of his address a recruiting committee was enthusiastically formed and several young men indicated their intention of enlisting.

The Rev. Mr. Brown and the Rev. Mr. Hinton also delivered short but earnest addresses which were well received.

A pleasant feature of the evening was a recitation by Miss Crowe and two spirited vocal selections by Mrs. Hamblin, which were enthusiastically applauded by the audience.

In connection with the patriotic movement in the Township of Dummer it is interesting to recall that the first attempt toward settlement was made in 1831, the settlers being almost entirely from England, Ireland and Scotland. In 1837 the militia of the township was organized for active service in the rebellion and went to Toronto under S. J. Carver, as captain, and so enthusiastic were the militia of Dummer that they turned out for active service on two occasions during the rebellion. The names of the officers and men, which we take from Poole's History of Peterborough, will doubtless be interesting reading to their descendants in Dummer. Ensign Robert Wigmore, Sergeant-Majors Sampson Lukey and John Lumsden, Sergeant James Watson, Robert Sloan, Hugh Moore, Charles Murphy, Joseph Pegg, 2nd Sergeant Major William Wigmore. Privates Kenneth Kempt, John Robb, Thomas Robinson, William Anderson, Patrick Cassidy, Thomas Cassidy, John McMillen, Frederick Oxford, Henry Ferguson, John Kelly, George Sampson, Bernard McCann, John Clydesdale, John Kidd, William Christie, Daniel Murphy, William Davis, Edward Johns, John Hendron, Thomas Hendron, Jr., Hugh McIntosh, Philip McGuire, James Bulolck, Frederick Edwards, David Payne, William Thomas, William McFadden, Edward Payne, A. Mulcahey, George Lumsden, Samuel Lumsden, Richard Manly, Charles Bisset and William Archer.

The young men of Dummer township are among the most expert rifle shots in Canada and will make a splendid addition to Canada's military forces.

WOMAN TRIED TO WRECK THE LOCAL POLICE STATION

Magistrate Dumble Disapproves of This Form of Pastime —Will Serve Fifteen Days in the Local Bastile—One Month for Vagrancy.

A woman who gave Buffalo as her place of residence appeared in the Police Court this morning on a charge of being drunk and disorderly in a public place. She was also charged with destroying the bed and other equipment belonging to the cell in which she was confined. The damage was placed at six dollars.

The accused pleaded not guilty. She said she was merely angry and excited at the attempts of the officers to place her under arrest. She also accused the police of breaking her glasses which she said she wouldn't have had broken for a hundred dollars.

Chief Thompson said the woman was very drunk when arrested. The police received a telephone call from the C. P. R. station on Saturday, at noon. They were compelled to handcuff the woman, who, when placed in the cells, proceeded to tear the bed to pieces. She finally succeeded in turning it upside down. She then attacked the plumbing and wound up by smashing a couple of panes of glass.

"You had better stay in Buffalo," said Magistrate Dumble. "We don't want any critters like you, here," he added.

"I am very much opposed to drink" countered the accused.

"You shouldn't carryit with you," replied the Chief, who asserted that a flask, half full of whiskey, was found on the prisoner.

"Everybody carries it when they go on a long journey," volunteered the accused.

Magistrate Dumble imposed a fine of two dollars for drunkenness, and an extra six dollars for the damage done to the cell, or as an option, fifteen days in gaol.

The accused said she didn't care she could stay. She was her own boss and would stay the fifteen days in preference to paying the money. The Magistrate advised her to stay here a while and try the climate in the vicinity of Victoria Park.

One Month in Gaol.

Howard Innis' place of residence for the next thirty days, that is providing the police are able to locate him, will be the county gaol. The charge against him was one of vagrancy. He was given an opportunity to enlist, but failed to qualify. Since he was liberated for that purpose, the police have been unable to locate him.

The African Dodger.

William Lewis loomed up in court like a big black cloud. When last heard of he was performing the African dodger stunt at the Millbrook Fall Fair, where he was knocked out by a fast ball. It's a long time since a real live negro has been seen in Police Court. The Magistrate gave him a few words of advice about the drink evil, concluding with a two dollar fine or fifteen days. A similar sentence was imposed on three other drunks.

CITY HALL PARAGRAPHS

The Temperance forces will occupy the first line trenches at the City Council meeting this evening. They are seeking permission to inaugurate a local option campaign without the necessity of getting up a petition.

A Deadlock.

There may be a deadlock over the request of the temperance delegation that will invade the City Hall this evening. The members of the Council are divided about equally. Three years ago a similar request was granted.

A Light Budget.

To-night's session of the City Council promises to be fairly light unless some of the members attempt to fill in the time with oratorical combat.

WITH OTHER MUNICIPALITIES

Windsor City Council voted $5,000 to purchase 200 rifles for the use of the Home Guard.

Guelph City Council decided to continue to pay the premiums on the insurance of soldiers of the first two contingents.

Refers to the "Intolerable Belgians"

General von Bissing has already left Belgium, the Boulogne correspondent of the Telegraph learns. It appears that the German baron was relieved of his governorship at his own request. The following is a letter he is stated to have sent to a near relative in Holland:

"I must be relieved! The Belgians are intolerable, uncivilized. They do not understand the proper sense of the word Culture. They are even more stupid than the English. (Strafe them!) There is a day not far away when the Belgians will turn on us—their protectors — and drive us from amongst them. It is far better that I should leave their devastated land of my own free will than be sent out at the kick of a Belgian boot."

80th Battalion Attend St. Andrew's

Inspiring Address by the Rev. James Rollins

Members of the 80th Battalion went away from St. Andrew's church yesterday morning with a more defined conception of Christ as a redeemer of men and of their duty and method of realizing in their own life and in the lives of their fellows, the Kingdom of God. The speaker was the Rev. James Rollins, who wore the familiar uniform of a lieutenant. The soldier preacher who is now taking an officer's course at Barriefield, preliminary to going overseas in defence of his country, voiced a feeling of comradeship that is common to military life, especially when on active service. The local company turned out full strength, accompanied by the band. They entered the church with true military precision to the strains of "O Canada," rendered by the organ. The men occupied seats in the centre of the edifice while the remaining seats were assigned to the civilian section of the congregation. The church was filled to capacity and a number of chairs had to be requisitioned before the entire congregation was seated.

A Grave Danger.

Rev. Mr. Rollins took for his text the words found in the sixteenth chapter, twenty-sixth verse, of the Gospel according to St. Matthew: "For what is a man profited if he shall gain the whole world, and lose his own soul? Or what shall a man give in exchange for his soul?"

Grave danger, said the speaker, creates a common comradeship with God and fellowman. It is doubtful if a man ever went into battle without first offering up prayer in some form or other. The danger of to-day is a grave one and threatens the noblest heritage we have. Men have elected to uphold the liberties we enjoy with the only kind of argument German kultur can understand. Men who in normal times were men of peace have become men of war. They have become soldiers of the king and if they but conduct themselves as God fearing men should, there will be little danger of them falling below the standard that our king and country cherish.

The speaker referred to the increasing prevalence of profanity and urged his hearers to do their utmost in an effort to check the evil. He deplored the conditions that enabled a man in the king's uniform to become intoxicated, the sight of which seldom failed to rouse public indignation, not against the soldier himself, but against the conditions which made such a thing possible. In conclusion the speaker admonished his hearers to not content themselves with a mere intellectual study of the word of God, but to incarnate it in everyday life.

The name "Dardanelles" which has been bestowed on the infant daughter of one of the British soldiers fighting the Turks, is more musical than some geographical names with which children are burdened. He being a courier, there was a St. Petersburg and a Naples; Kattegat and Skagerrak were the twins; while the only daughter was named Vienna.—London Chronicle.

REMOVED TO THE HOSPITAL.

Lieut. Chas. Ackerman May Have to Submit to Another Operation

Citizens generally will be sorry to hear that Lieut. Chas. Ackerman, who arrived home from the front last Tuesday, had to be removed to Nicholls Hospital yesterday, and it is feared that another operation will be necessary. His injured arm, in which there are still some pieces of shell, had been giving him trouble and it was considered desirable that he should receive hospital treatment. The arm is badly swollen and Lieut. Ackerman's temperature yesterday was very high.

FARMER'S TEAM DRIVEN INTO POST WHEN ONE REIN WAS BROKEN

Mr. Hubert Hunter of Menvers remained with a relative in the city over Sunday and this morning drove his team up town to make some final purchases before returning home. Near the Customs House the horses became frightened at a street car. Mr Hunter strained on the reins to hold them. One line broke and rather than let them get away he pulled hard on the other, turning the team into a post. The damage was not serious, but it showed a broken whiffletree and parts of the harness were also snapped.

EXTENDED SYMPATHY TO BEREAVED ONES

At St. John's Church yesterday fitting reference was made to the death of the late John Bell, one of the oldest and most faithful members of the Church. Yokome, who were bereaved during the past week by the death of their daughter, Miss Louise Yokome, the heartfelt sympathy of the congregation.

Opening of the Orono School

Peterboro' Contractors Are Commended For Their Excellent Workmanship

A fine new Public and High school was opened in Orono in the presence of a large gathering which included many of the Orono old boys and girls who had received their earlier education and training in the old school, which in its sixty years of service had more than served its day. There was a sadness in it to many of the old pupils gathered, some of whom we might mention, Messrs. R. Knox, Dr. M. M. Tucker and C. J. Hugnson had entered the old school on the opening day, in memories and past associations, but to those it is a satisfaction to know that the old bell finds a place on the new building. Several of the old Masters were also there looking fresh and hearty. A Barber, Bowmanville, Edwin Ball, who is still teaching at Islington, and W. C. Allin, recently retired at Bowmanville. They enjoyed many a hearty handshake with old pupils.

The new school is of the most approved design, well lighted and ventilated, pronounced by educationalists who attended the opening, to rank with the best in the Province. The site is the same as the old school on "College Hill" but the grounds have been considerably enlarged. The architect was J. P. McLaren, Esq., of Ottawa, and the contractors, J. J. Hartley and McIntyre Bros., Peterborough, who are to be congratulated on their workmanship—everything is first class, nothing having been slighted in the smallest particular. It has been a source of great satisfaction to all those who have taken an interest in the work of construction, that the contract was taken by so worthy a firm. The contract price was $10,315, which is considerably below the estimate, but there are a few small extras. The plumbing by Campbell and Dickson cost $1320.00. The grounds have been considerably enlarged, and the price for the additional land is yet to be fixed by arbitration. The building is 65 feet long by 37 ft. 6 in. wide, containing two stories and basement. The continuation classes will occupy the upper story which is divided into three rooms. The Public school the ground divided into two rooms separated by corridor and stairways. The basement is divided into two rooms, one for the boys the other for the girls—with lavatories in connection. The building is heated with hot air from two large furnaces in the basement, bricked in, removing all danger of fire. A large steel reservoir tank for water supply is also in the basement, and ample supply of good pure water is pumped by electric motor power from a spring well some distance away.—Orono News.

5,000 WORKERS WALKED OUT

Special to The Examiner.

SCHENECTADY, N.Y., Oct. 4.

Directly after 2,000 machinists of the General Electric Co., left their work at the plant, here, at 9 o'clock this morning and marched through the streets to a mass meeting in Red Men's hall. 3,000 electrical workers also left the plant. The hall was altogether too small for the meeting and another was immediately called in Crescent Park, a public square in the heart of the business section.

President Harvey Simmons of the Machinists' Union, a Socialist Alderman from the Ninth Ward, was the principal speaker. He urged peace and order upon the strikers, and announced the fact that the Electrical workers had quit the plant. He also stated that the Railway Employees' Unions had informed the strikers that they could turn the cars. This side of the General Electric Works in ten minutes' notice. This announcement was greeted with applause.

Simmons said that the press of the city, which up to the present time had been unfair to the workers, must, in the face of the demonstration given this morning, now be fair or the workers would know what to do about it.

"What is the difference between a visit and a visitation?" "Well, when your pretty young sister comes to see us that's a visit. When your mamma comes and stays a month that's a visitation."

Preparations Go Ahead Rapidly To Meet New Enemy

ALLIES REPULSE SEVERAL COUNTER ATTACKS

Europe Waits Impatiently For Bulgaria's Answer To Russian Ultimatum

Since Time Limit Expired Yesterday No Word Has Come From Sofia or Petrograd--Bulgars Expected to Attempt Swift Dash Upon Nish.

LONDON, Oct. 5.—Preparations to meet a new enemy in the Balkans went forward rapidly in the Allies' capitals to-day while Europe waited impatiently for Bulgaria's answer to the Russian ultimatum.

Since the time limit expired yesterday no word has come from Sofia or Petrograd. All despatches from the Bulgarian capital have been delayed from 24 to 72 hours during the past fortnight, and it is possible Bulgaria's answer, if she made one, would not reach Petrograd until late to-day or to-night.

The London newspapers to-day unanimously expressed the view that Bulgaria has ignored the Russian ultimatum and the Czar's Minister probably left Bulgaria last night.

The Bulgars are expected to attempt a swift dash upon the Nish-Salonika railway.

Rome and Athens had reports to-day of great military activity both at Odessa and Sebastopol, declaring that Russia was preparing to transport a large expedition to the Bulgarian Black Sea coast.

NEW YORK, Oct. 5.—The last chapter in the now famous "Dumba incident" closed to-day when the liner Nieuw Amsterdam left her dock with Dr. Constantine Dumba, his wife and members of his suite aboard, and President Wilson's demand that the Austro-Hungarian Ambassador depart from this country was complied with.

600,000 RUSSIANS MOBILIZED AT ODESSA TO FIGHT BULGARIA

ATHENS, Oct. 5.—Austria has closed the frontier abutting Rumania to facilitate movements of the troops. Six German army aviators have arrived in Sofia. Skilled German munition workers are leaving Constantinople for Bulgaria. Greece has taken over three Macedonian railway lines.

PETROGRAD, Oct. 5.—Six hundred thousand Russian troops have been mobilized at Odessa for a campaign against Bulgaria. Extreme pressure is being brought on Rumania by the Teutons to remain neutral.

BERLIN, Oct. 5.—Two British monitors bombarding Zeebrugge coast yesterday were damaged by German airship fire before La Panne.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 5.—The United States Government yesterday informed the Turkish Government that unless Armenian massacres ceased friendly relations between the United States and Turkey would be threatened.

BERLIN, Oct. 5.—War Office admits that Russians apparently with reinforcements and heavy supplies of ammunition are attacking vigorously in the northern areas and are inflicting heavy losses on the Germans.

NISH, Oct. 5.—Serbia has repulsed Austro-German attempts to seize strategic islands in the Danube.

LONDON, Oct. 5.—The British Government has declined to permit dealings in the Allies' American loan on the London Stock Exchange.

ATHENS, Oct 5.—Bulgaria has evaded Russia's ultimatum and it is stated the Black Sea ports of Bulgaria were bombarded by the Russian fleet this afternoon.

LONDON, Oct. 5.—War Office denies German reports that French lost 130 thousand men, and the British sixty thousand men in recent attacks on the wesern front.

Greeks Will Not Prevent the Landing of Anglo-French Troops

ATHENS, Oct. 5.—The Greek government will take no steps to prevent the landing of Anglo-French troops on Greek soil or to check their march toward Serbia, Premier Venizelos declared to-day in his response to a question put to him in the Chamber of Deputies.

He further emphasiezd the seriousness of the Balkan situation by stating that the Allies have withdrawn the proposals for territorial concessions to Bulgaria, several months ago. There will be no further negotiations with the Bulgars, Venizelos intimated, unless Czar Ferdinand makes satisfactory reply to the Russian ultimatum.

The Prime Minister's statement with reference to Allied troops landing was elicited by a member of the Opposition, who said alarm was felt in some quarters over the arrival of Anglo-French troops since Greece has not abandoned her neutrality.

Germany Fails To Satisfy The United States Demands

WASHINGTON, Oct. 5.—Germany has failed to satisfy the request of the United States that the sinking of the Arabic with a loss of American lives be disavowed and liability for the act assumed by the Imperial Government. This became known after a conference to-night between President Wilson and Secretary of State Lansing, at which the latter submitted a note given him Saturday in New York by Count von Bernstorff, the German Ambassador.

No announcement was made after the White House conference. Secretary Lansing said merely that it was inadvisable to comment on the situation while the negotiations were still confidential.

While the situation has improved to the extent that there is no danger of an immediate break in diplomatic relations, as the note affords an opportunity for further negotiation, it was stated reliably that the refusal by Germany to meet the American viewpoint on the Arabic case might bring about the threatened rupture.

Just what the details are on which the two Governments are in conflict was not definitely known to-night. In general it was learned that Germany, after examining the evidence submitted by the United States, came to the conclusion that her submarine commander erred in assuming that the Arabic was intent on ramming the German submarine when steering to rescue the passengers on the British steamer Dunsley. This admission of a mistake would amount to a disavowal of the act, but the United States has insisted that disavowal must be accompanied by an assumption of responsibility and liability, while Germany in her first note was willing to submit the question to an arbitral tribunal to decide what liability, if any, was thereby incurred.

President Wilson has taken the position that the United States cannot arbitrate questions involving the loss of American lives.

ULTIMATUM TO ROUMANIA IS DOUBTED

LONDON, Oct. 5.—The Roumanian Legation here has received no information regarding the report that an Austro-Hungarian ultimatum has been delivered to Roumania demanding permission to transport munitions across Roumanian territory to Turkey.

Bulgaria is threatening none of her neighbours and still hopes for a peaceful settlement which "will take her interests into account," says a semi-official statement issued on Friday at Sofia and sent to Reuter's Telegram Company. The statement was issued because of the attitude taken by the French and Russian press. It declares Bulgaria mobilized in order to find a new situation and secure her national existence as well as her future.

War Notes

PARIS, Oct. 5.—The Allies have repulsed several driving counter attacks. There is no further change in the positions.

PETROGRAD, Oct. 5.—The Germans are not active on the Eastern front. The pressure is apparently lifted and the Russians are on the offensive.

AMSTERDAM, Oct. 5. — British submarines are seriously interfering with German commerce in the Baltic Sea.

Vicious German Attacks From Givenchy Woods Are Repulsed By the French

France-British Armies Hold Ground Gained and Prepare for Another Thrust in Force---Enemy is Driven Back at All Points.

LONDON, Oct. 5.—The Franco-British forces—the tenth day of activity in the west—apparently elected to stand on the defensive and conserve the territory they won early last week, while continuing their preparations for renewing their offensive. This is indicated by the brief reports from the front reaching London. The only real work during the day was undertaken by the British to retake a lost trench north of Loos and by the Germans to decrease the pressure on their salient at Lens and straighten out their lines in eastern Champagne. The Germans not only failed in their efforts in both areas, but they lost a little additional ground to the French at Le Mesnil, when the latter took advantage of a repulsed counter-attack to make a spirited dash into a line of German trenches.

The precarious hold the Germans have on Lens obviously is responsible for their desperate efforts to expand the wedge their lines now form in the allied front. Moreover, it is particularly necessary for them, if they hope to retain Lens, which is their principal point of support between Lille and the Oise, to make Hill No. 140 untenable for the French. This was the object they had in view yesterday when they launched a vicious infantry attack from the woods between Souchez and Givenchy-en-Gobelle. The way for the attack had been paved by four assaults by grenadiers on the French positions just east of Souchez. The French consolidated their defences so effectually, however, that not only were the grenade bombardments ineffectual but the German infantry was repulsed with heavy losses.

The Givenchy woods skirts Hill No. 140 on the north and north-west and extends to within two-thirds of a mile of Souchez. The French advance on last Tuesday reached the outlying fringe of the wooded area, but under the protection of the forest growth and the trees felled by the French artillery the Germans stood firm, and they since have used the cover for the organization of many of their counter attacks in the vicinity. Its importance to them is magnified by the fact that it affords a screen for operations against Hill No. 140, against which they are continually flinging large bodies of infantry, supported by artillery bombardments.

Almost incessant rain or fog since the middle of last week has interfered greatly with the artillery of both armies. The ground has been cut up by the transport and now is in such a condition that even the comparatively light field guns have been deprived of much of their mobility. Fog has prevented accurate air reconnaisance and fire control, so that the artillery activity is confined almost exclusively to those areas over which the ranges are fixed and charted.

British war ships and the big French guns near the mouth of the Yser co-operated again in another bombardment of the Belgian coast. The regularity of the attacks by the naval forces along the sea front has aroused much speculation in London and is generally interpreted as heralding the approach of another thrust in force. How soon this will come is problematic, but it is certain to follow as soon as the weather permits the regrouping of artillery from Champagne and Artois.

The air raid in Champagne by sixty five French aeroplanes is the largest enterprise of the kind ever undertaken. The French, according to the German report, have lost the airship Alsace, which was mentioned a few days ago in the official communication as doing valuable work.

Outside Entries May Compete in Ploughing Match This Year

Good Prizes Are Being Offered and the Match Promises to Be One of the Best in the History of the Province ---The Rules and Regulations.

As announced yesterday the plowing match for the championship of Peterboro county will be held this fall on the farm of Squire Breckenridge at Westwood on October 26. It promises to be one of the greatest maches in the history of the county.

Last year entries were restricted to the county of Peterboro. At the meeting of the direcors held Saturday afternoon in the chamber it was decided this year to make the First Class for men in sod open to plowmen from outside the county. It will be the only open class. As some of the most successful plowmen in the province live in counties adjoining Peterboro, it is expected that a number of these men will take part and hereby add greater interest to the match. It was decided however, that the Burnham cup would not be competed for by any outsider, but would be given to the competitor from Peterboro county who stood the highest in the class whether he took first honors, or not. The first prize in this class will be $25 or $30. Should a Peterboro man win first prize he will obtain this prize and will be entitled to hold the Burnham cup for one year as well as a bronze medal which will become his permanent property.

The other classes will be the same as last year; there will be a class in stubble open to anyone from the county of Peterboro, a class in sod for boys under twenty-one and a class in stubble for boys under eighteen.

Donars of Prizes.

Much of the success of last year's match, which was largely attended, was due to the handsome prizes donated by people interested in encouraging good plowing and in farmers' movements generally. Last year Mr. R. R. Hall, ex M. P. gave a $20 prize and Saturday afternoon he intimated his willingness to repeat his subscription which will be given as the second prize for the open class in sod for men. Mr. G. A. Gillespie, M. L. A., last year gave $16 as the first prize in the open class in stubble. On Saturday he intimated his willingness to again contribute this prize. Mr. G. Walter Green on Saturday also agreed to give a $10 prize which has not been allocated. These liberal donations are greatly appreciated by the management and all who are interested in the Match. Other prominent contributers are yet to be heard from.

The rules governing the match are that competitors must plow one third of an acre, that the average depth of the furrow must be six inches, that no assistance shall be given to any plowman except in setting and removing stakes, that all starts shall be on the level in sod, that after the first scratch up and down the field no handling of the land will be allowed, that no person shall be allowed to interfere with the judges in the discharge of their duties and the decision of the judges shall be final, that all land shall be drawn by ballot, that no wheel plow shall be used and that all entries must be made to the Secretary, Mr. Fred Campbell, R. R. No 3 Peterboro or Mr. H. E. Cowan Farm and Dairy Peterboro, by Saturday, October 23.

So you think Katherine made a very suitable match?

Yes indeed; you know what a virtuous, excitable girl she was. Well, she married a composer.

THE DUEL OF DEATH BETWEEN THE BIG GUNS

A corporal of King Edward's Horse, now in France as infantry, writes to The Star the following vivid description of one of the terrible artillery duels that preceded the Allies' offensive movement:

"The whole battlefield is swept by an avalache of shells of every description, bursting with grinding crashes and ear splitting roars. Clouds of vari-colored smoke roll upward obscuring the delicate blue of heaven's canopy, the trenches are obliterated and have no longer definite shape. The whole area seems to be eaten up by that awful devastating fire. Yet the duel goes on with unabated diabolical fury. The air is filled with flying death! Invisible shells tear through space, screaming and shrieking on their errand of mutilation and destruction. How can man live in such an inferno? Dante, with all his imagination, could not have invented anything like this, otherwise a place would have been reserved for it in the Divina Comedia. Surely Hell has been let loose, and revels in the fiendish ravages!

"On and on goes the roar and the din, ever increasing in volume and ferocity, until it seems as if guns and gunners have gone mad. Perpetual, deafening, nerve-racking! Even mother earth trembles violently at the outrage of mere mortals, and threatens to open up to swallow the offenders in her cavernous abyss. But still the sun shines brilliantly and gazes with seeming indifference on the ghastly carnage.

"So the infernal concert goes on, conducted by the Devil's capable baton. High up in the ethereal regions the wasps of war observe the results of the fight. Is there any one left to carry it on? It is possible for the human frame to withstand such terrible punishment?

"At last, after a seeming interminable period, silence comes, broken only by a few desultory shots.

"The toll will be heavy, but not until darkness descends and night envelopes the scene in the ample folds of her sombre mantle, then will the stretcher bearer get to work and the awful results be made manifest."

A WORD OF GRATITUDE.

"In justice to humanity I want to tell you that I was a great sufferer from itching piles and have found Dr. Chase's Ointment the best treatment obtainable," writes Mr. Fred Ring, Brodhagen, Ont. "It gives instant relief and I can recommend it to any sufferer from this dread fiil disease."

AGED MAN SUICIDES.

Was Discouraged Because He Could Not Go to War

GUELPH, Oct. 5.—Albert Dean, keeper of the local option hotel at Orton, Wellington County, and also caretaker of the Merchants' Bank at that village, ended his life on Saturday afternoon by shooting himself through the head.

Dean had been talking of going to the war, but his son, who lives at Marsville, had told him he was too old. Deceased had since informed his son that if he ever got a furnished call to Orton to be on hand at once.

Dean was in good financial circumstances, and apart from his strange conversations with his son, no motive is known for the suicide.

THE SWISS SEND TROOPS TO THE GERMAN BORDER

GENEVA, via Paris, Oct. 5. — The Swiss Federal Council has ordered several squadrons of cavalry to assemble at Schaffhausen, Zurich and Frauenfeld. This unexpected step has aroused much discussion, as the troops will be stationed along the German frontier.

HE WON'T MARRY; MOTHERS-IN-LAW TALK TIRES HIM

DENVER, Oct. 5.—Too many stories about too much mother-in-law have made John Fine, deputy district attorney, decide to be a bachelor for life. For six months Fine has heard hardly anything else than long plaints from sons-in-law.

One youth told him of how when his wife was ill he asked her mother to assist in nursing her, and at the end of a week she handed him a bill for $30 for professional services.

Now a second man has told the same story, only his mother-in-law charged $15 for the care she gave her daughter. That decided Fine.

MRS. BEIDEL TELLS WOMEN

How Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Kept Her in Health for 14 Years.

Shippensburg, Pa.—"It was several years ago that I started taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I then suffered terribly every month. My husband bought me a bottle of it and it helped me right away. Then after my second child was born I had a female trouble very badly and I used Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and in a short time was cured and have been in excellent health since. I always praise the Compound whenever I have an opportunity as I know it helped me and will help others. Lately I have given the Compound to my daughter and I wish all suffering women would take it and be convinced of its worth."—Mrs. JAMES A. BEIDEL, 113 N. Penn Street, Shippensburg, Pa.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from native roots and herbs, contains no narcotic or harmful drugs, and to-day holds the record of being the most successful remedy for female ills we know of, and thousands of voluntary testimonials on file in the Pinkham laboratory at Lynn, Mass., seem to prove this fact.

If you have the slightest doubt that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will help you, write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential) Lynn, Mass., for advice. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman, and held in strict confidence.

"I shall have to sew one on right there for poor Mr. Poopendyke," she said, poking her finger into the empty buttonhole. "You dear bachelors!"

Then she turned swiftly away from me and glided over to the big armchair, from the depths of which she fished a small velvet bag. Looking over her shoulder, she smiled at me.

"Please look the other way," she said. Without waiting for me to do so she took out a little gold box, a powder puff and a stick of lip rouge. Crossing to the small Florentine mirror that hung near my desk, she proceeded before my startled eyes to repair the slight—and to me unnoticeable—damage that had been done to her complexion before the sun came up.

"Woman works in a mysterious way, my friend, her wonders to perform," she paraphrased calmly.

"No matter how transcendently beautiful woman may be, she always does that sort of thing to herself, I take it," said I.

"She does," said the countess with conviction. She surveyed herself critically. "There! And now I am ready to accept an invitation to breakfast. I am disgustingly hungry."

"And so am I!" I cried with enthusiasm. "Hurray! You shall eat Poopendyke's breakfast just to penalize him for failing in his duties as host during my unavoidable"—

"Quite impossible," she said. "He has already eaten it."

"He has?"

"At half past 6, I believe. He announced at that ungodly hour that if he couldn't have his coffee the first thing in the morning he would be in for a headache all day. He suggested that I take a little nap and have breakfast with you—if you succeed in surviving the night."

"Oh, I see," said I slowly. "He knew all the time that you were napping in that chair, eh?"

"You shall not scold him!"

"I shall do even worse than that. I shall pension him for life."

She appeared thoughtful. A little frown of annoyance clouded her brow.

"He promised faithfully to arouse me the instant you were sighted on the opposite side of the river. I made him stand in the window with a field-glass. No, on second thought, I shall scold him. If he had come to the door and shouted you wouldn't have caught me in this odious dressing gown. Helene"—

"It is most fascinating," I cried. "Adorable! I love flimsy, pink things. They're so intimate. And Poopendyke knows it, bless his ingenuous old soul."

I surprised a queer little gleam of inquiry in her eyes. It flickered for a second and died out.

"Do you really consider him an ingenuous old soul?" she asked. And I thought there was something rather metallic in her voice. I might have replied with intelligence if she had given me a chance, but for some reason she chose to drop the subject. "You must be famished, and I am dying to hear about your experiences. You must not omit a single detail. I"—

There came a gentle, discreet knocking on the half open door. I started.

"Come!" I said.

Blatchford gravely swung the door wide open.

"Breakfast is served, sir—your ladyship. I beg pardon."

I have never seen him stand so faultlessly rigid. As we passed him on the way out a mean desire came over me to tread on his toes just as an experiment. Somehow I felt that he would say, "Thank you, sir," and there would be no satisfaction in knowing that he had had all his pains for nothing.

I shall never forget that enchanted breakfast—never! Not that I can recall even vaguely what we had to eat, or who served it, or how much of the naked truth I related to her in describing the events of the night; I can only declare that it was a singularly light hearted affair.

At half past 1 o'clock I was received by Mrs. Titus in my own study. The countess came down from her eerie abode to officiate at the ceremonious function—if it may be so styled—and I was agreeably surprised to find my new guest in a most amiable frame of mind. True, she looked me over with what seemed to me an unnecessarily and perfectly frank stare of curiosity, but, on sober reflection, I did not hold it against her. I was still draped in Poopendyke's garments.

At first sight I suppose she couldn't quite help putting me down as one of those literary freaks who typify intellect without intelligence.

As for her two sons, they made no effort to disguise their contempt. (I have a shocking [illegible] and "u" might be substituted for the "a" in that word without loss of integrity.)

The elder of the two young men, Collingraft Titus, who being in the business with his father in New York was permitted to travel most of the time so that he couldn't interfere with it, was taller than I, and an extremely handsome chap to boot. He was twenty-six. The younger, Jasper junior, was nineteen, short and slight of build, with the merriest eyes I've ever seen. I didn't in the least mind the grin he bestowed upon me and preserved with staunch fidelity throughout the whole interview but I resented the supercilious, lordly scorn of his elder brother.

Jasper I learned was enduring a pro[illegible] of absence from the

The hiatus between his freshman and sophomore years already covered a period of sixteen months, and he had a tutor who appreciated the buttery side of his crust.

Mrs. Titus after thanking me warmly and, I think, sincerely for all that I had done for Aline, apologized in a perfunctory sort of way for having kept me out of my bed all night and hoped that I would not catch cold or have an attack of rheumatism.

I soon awoke to the fact that she was in the habit of centralizing attention. The usually volatile countess became subdued and repressed in her presence; the big son and the little one were respectfully quiescent; I confess to a certain embarrassment myself.

She was a handsome woman with a young figure, a good complexion, clear eyes, wavy brown hair and a rich, low voice, perfectly modulated. No doubt she was nearing fifty, but thirty-five might have been your guess, provided you were a bachelor. A bachelor learns something about women every day of his life, but not so much that he cannot be surprised the day after.

I endeavored to set her mind at rest by politely reminding her that I could not have slept in the bed anyway, having been out all night, and she smilingly assured me that it was a relief to find a literary man who wasn't forever saying flat, stupid things.

CHAPTER XX.

I Indulge in Plain Language.

I TOOK them over the castle—that is, a part of the castle. Mrs. Titus would not climb stairs. She confessed to panting, but drew the line at anything more exhausting. I fear I was too palpably relieved when she declined to go higher than the second story.

"It isn't necessary, Mr. Smart," she said sweetly, "to go into the history of the wretched Rothhoefens, as a Cook's interpreter might do. You see, I know the castle quite well, and I have had all the late news from my daughter."

"Of course," I agreed. "Stupid of me not to remember that you are descended from"—

"Mother isn't half as stuck up about it as you might think, Mr. Smart," interrupted Jasper junior glibly. "She prefers to let people think her ancestors were Dutch instead of merely German. Dutch ancestors are the proper thing in Jew York."

"Jappie," said his mother severely, "how often must I caution you not to speak of New York as Jew York? Some day you will say it to a Jew. One can't be too careful. Heaven alone knows when one is in the presence of a Jew in these days."

"Oh, I'm not Hebraic!" said I quick[illegible]. "My ancestors were Dutch. They came over with [illegible] skin grafts."

She looked puzzled for a moment. The countess laughed. Then Jasper saw the point. Collingraft was the last to see it, and then it was too late for him to smile.

We had tea in the loggia, and I dined with the family in the countess' apartment at 8 that night. I think Mrs. Titus was rather favorably impressed when she beheld me in my own raiment. Britton had smoothed out my evening clothes until they almost shone, and I managed to carry myself with unusual buoyancy.

Everything went very well that evening. We were all in fine humor, and the dinner was an excellent one. I perpetrated but one unhappy blunder. I asked Mrs. Titus if she knew the Riley-Werkheimers and the Rocksworths in New York.

"Visually," she said succinctly, and I made haste to change the subject. The countess looked amused, and Collingraft said something about it being more than likely that we did not have mutual acquaintances in New York. His sister came to my rescue with a very amusing and exaggerated account of my experience with the Riley-Werkheimers and Rocksworths. Jasper was enthusiastic. Something told me that I was going to like him.

My troubles began the next day, and at the rather unseemly hour of 8 o'clock in the morning. Collingraft came down the hall in a bath gown and slippers, banged on my bedroom door and wanted to know why he couldn't have hot water for his bath. He was too full blooded and all that sort of thing, he said, to take a cold plunge. Moreover, he wasn't used to taking his tub in a tin cup. (That was his sarcastic way of referring to my portable, handy bathtub.) I asked him why he didn't ring for Britton, and he said he did, but that Britton was assisting Jasper in a wild chase for a bat which had got into the lad's room during the night.

"Thank your lucky stars it didn't get into mother's room," he said surlily. I silently thanked them.

He made such a row about his tub that I had to give him the pail of hot water Britton had placed in my bedroom preparatory to my own bath.

At breakfast Jasper complained about the bats. He couldn't for the life of him see why I didn't have screens in the windows.

Later on Mrs. Titus, who had coffee and toast in her room, joined us in the loggia and announced that the coffee was stone cold. Moreover, she did not like the guest chamber into which she had been moved by order of the countess. It was too huge for a bedchamber, and the iron window shutters creaked all night long.

"But you love the view you have of the Danube?" I inquired rather mournfully.

"I don't sit in the window all night, Mr. Smart," she said tartly.

I at once insisted on her resuming possession of my bedroom and promptly had all of my things moved into the one she had occupied during the night. When the countess heard of this arrangement she was most indignant. She got me off in a corner and cruelly informed me that I hadn't the vestige of a backbone. She must have said something to her mother, too, for when evening came around I had to move back into my own room. Mrs. Titus sweetly assuring me that under no consideration would she consent to impose upon my good nature and hospitality to such an extent, etc.

During the day at odd times Collingraft made lofty suggestions in regard to what could be done with the place to make it more or less inhabitable, and Jasper—who, by the way, I was beginning to fear I should not like after all—said he'd just like to have a whack at the thing himself. First thing he'd do would be to turn some of those old, unused rooms into squash and racket courts, and he'd also put in a swimming pool and a hot water [illegible]

There is a man in town who is a bit absent-minded, but his politeness never fails him. He went to church last Sunday, and when the minister said,—"Let us pray," responded in tones audible throughout the building, "Certainly, by all means."

LAST THING ON EARTH.

An explosion had occurred in a powder mill and the proprietor, who was away on a pleasure trip, hurried home to make an investigation.

"How in the world did it happen?" he asked the foreman of the mill, as he viewed the wreck. "Who was to blame?"

"Well, you see, sir," replied the foreman, "it was this way. Bill went into the mixing room, probably thinking of something else, struck a match in mistake. He"

"Struck a match!" exclaimed the proprietor in amazement. "I should have thought that was the last thing on earth he'd do."

It was sir," was the calm rejoinder of the foreman.

Guess Work.

Things may come out all right if you trust to guess work, but there is an uncertainty about it and in many cases the results are distinctly unsatisfactory. The household run on guesswork is not managed as it should be. PIE AND ETIQUETTE.

Story of a Soldier Who Had Not Quite Learned His Business.

Captain Roald Amundsen, Norway's famous explorer, tells this story about a national guard encampment last summer:

"A new volunteer, who had not quite learned his business, was on sentry duty one night when a friend brought a pie from the canteen.

"As he sat on the grass eating the pie the major sauntered up in undress uniform. The sentry, not recognizing him, did not salute, and the major stopped and said:

"'What's that you have there?'

"'Pie,' said the sentry good naturedly—'apple pie. Have a bite?'

"The major frowned.

"'Do you know who I am?' he asked.

"'No,' said the sentry, 'unless you're the major's groom.'

"The major shook his head.

"'Guess again,' he growled.

"'The barber from the village.'

"'No.'

"'Maybe'—here the sentry laughed—'maybe you're the major himself.'

"'That's right; I am the major,' was the stern reply.

"The sentry scrambled to his feet.

"'Good gracious!' he exclaimed. 'Hold the pie, will you, while I present arms!'"—Harper's Weekly.

PENNED IN

By WILLIAM CHANDLER

There is an infinite number of islands in the Pacific ocean, and there is a diversity of condition among the inhabitants of the different islands. Fifty years ago I knew more about them than I do now. When I was a boy of eighteen I shipped on a small steam vessel running from San Francisco among these islands, trading by the way. The captain, Simpson, was then quite an old man and had sailed among them for a number of years. He knew the character of the people of the different islands and told us that, while most of them were approachable, there were a few at which he would not care to touch unless with a numerous crew and with plenty of arms and ammunition.

During one of our voyages we had had luck from the start. Our crew was a small one when we left San Francisco. Two men were taken ill within a week after we left, and both died. Another fell down an open hatchway, and still another was washed overboard and lost.

We had passed the Hawaiians and crossed the equator not far from the international date line when we struck a northeaster that drove us on to a point directly north of the Fijis. During the storm we shipped a sea that drove one man headforemost against the bulwarks and washed another one overboard. This left us the captain, the mate and three seamen. Hardly had the storm blown itself out when something about the firebox gave out and we were obliged to let the fires go down in order to find out what it was. We had sail enough to keep steerage way, but no more.

Just before the captain gave the order to put out the fires I noticed him looking intently at an island lying off our port bow and heard him tell the mate that he believed it to be one from which on a previous voyage he had narrowly escaped with his life. Having found the natives bent on plunder and ready to strike any weak crew that came within their reach, he did not relish the idea of putting out the fires in that locality.

However, there was no choice in the matter, and when the firebox had cooled down one of our number went into it for an examination. Unfortunately the wind was blowing straight toward the island. Presently we saw a number of canoes coming out from the shore. The captain looked grave. Under sail we couldn't make four knots, and we were too few to defend ourselves against the swarm of dusky men who were coming for us. The mate suggested that they were only coming out for trade or to beg and wouldn't harm us. The captain said he knew better; they would murder us, take what they wanted and either get the ship to the shore or sink her.

The only chance there seemed to be for us was to hide. We all went down and got into the firebox, where a man was working, and closed the door. The latch fell and could be opened only from the outside. But this didn't trouble us, for the man who had been at work had his tools, and when we wanted to get out it would be possible for him to bore a hole near the latch so that it could be lifted.

The furnace room was pretty dark, and since we all packed ourselves in the far end of the firebox we were not likely to be seen except by a pair of first rate eyes. We waited in suspense till we heard men tramping about above. They must have been surprised to find the vessel deserted, but delighted as well, considering that there was much plunder for them. We heard them everywhere, evidently collecting what they wanted. The door of the firebox was opened twice, but whoever opened it shut it again without taking the trouble to make an examination.

The visitors remained on board till we began to feel the vessel rolling considerably; then the sounds suddenly ceased. It was evident that the sea was getting rough, and they did not dare stay longer. Then Captain Simmons directed the man who had been repairing the firebox to drill a hole so that the latch could be lifted.

Boring a hole in wood and iron are two different things. The one can be done in seconds; the other may take hours. The man had been drilling some time when we began to feel water on the firebox floor. Bringing the light the workman had with him, and by which he was drilling, to bear on the floor, we saw water trickling in at several points.

Every man of us paled. The ship had been scuttled, and we were penned in to be carried to the bottom.

The man who was drilling had splendid nerve. He did not lose his head, but kept steadily on, conscious of the fact that he must make an opening before the ship sank and not knowing how soon she would sink. When he was nearly through, removing his drill and putting in a steel implement, he hammered it through. In a few minutes he inserted his fingers and lifted the latch.

The water had made considerable headway, but not so much but that it could be seen pouring through an auger hole in the side. We plugged it and, rushing on deck, saw that we had been blown past the island and were drifting away from it. Then we manned the pumps for awhile, completed the work in the firebox and in due time were once more steaming safely on.

Proud Father—"I believe, my dear, that the baby knows as much as I do." Mother (gazing at the infant)—"Yes, poor little fellow."

Answer This!

When you have indigestion you never take a lung medicine. Why, then, when you have a cough, a cold or bronchitis (lung troubles) do you swallow things down into your stomach? It is a mistake, and the Pepe treatment for colds, bronchitis and asthma, etc., corrects this mistake. Pepe are tablets made up of Pine extracts and medicinal essences, which when put into the mouth turn into healing vapors. These are breathed down direct to the lungs, throat and bronchial tubes—not swallowed down to the stomach, which is not ailing.

On the face of it, is not this treatment of coughs and colds more rational than the old-fashioned way? Pepe are recommended by doctors, by nurses, by people in authority everywhere, who once having tried this new treatment will never go back to the old form. We could send you books of testimonials, if you would like to read them, but one trial of Pepe will give you more personal satisfaction than lots of reading about what others say. 50c. box, at druggists and stores. BUYING HOLY KISMA.

British Advertise for Raw Silk for All Important Veil.

The British Government has just advertised for bids of silk for the Holy Veil. This annual gift has done more than anything else to keep Egypt loyal to England and deaf to Turkey.

When Turkey sent fanatics throughout Egypt to stir up a "holy war" the natives of Egypt pointed to the Holy Veil as evidence of England's understanding and sympathy with Mohammedanism. Again the time for the making of the veil has come, and an order has been placed for raw silk of which 1,193 pounds are needed.

The Holy Veil is used for the covering in Mecca, Arabia, of the Ka'aba, a building almost forty feet cube, into the south-west corner of which is built a small black meteoric stone, a little larger than the size of a man's hand, reported to have been given to Abraham by the Archangel Gabriel. The Ka'aba is supposed to be erected on the spot where Abraham offered up Isaac in sacrifice. It is the very central point of Mohammedan faith.

The Ka'aba, except for about fifteen days in the year, is covered from sight by a veil. In Mohammed's life, and for some years afterward, this veil was made of a striped Yemen cloth. But when the Mohammedan caliphs rose to power and wealth—such as that of Haroun-al-Raschid, of "Arabian Nights" fame—it became the custom of the caliph to present each year a marvellously beautiful brocaded silk veil to cover the entire structure.

When the caliphate dynasties fell it became more and more difficult for the Mohammedans to secure this costly veil each year, and wealthy men secured paradise for themselves by making a present of such a veil when the old one became worn.

When England secured control of Egypt, English diplomats showed a wise understanding of native customs by making the Mohammedans feel that the old days of the glories of Egypt has returned. They promised to give annually to Mecca a brocaded veil to cover the entire building, as has been done by caliphs of a thousand years before.

Now, every year, there is specially woven a heavy veil of black brocaded silk, covering nearly 8,000 square feet of material. The lower edges are bordered with verses from the Koran, worked in gold bullion thread.

This Kisma or Holy Veil is removed from the Ka'abe on the 25th day preceding the annual feast and the building is left bare until the 10th of the month succeeding. On the third day of the feast the old Kisma is cut into small pieces and these are sold to the faithful.

As there are 221,000,000 Mohammedans, and each is expected to make a pilgrimage to Mecca once in his life often nearly a million people gather for the feast. Large though the veil is, the poor pilgrims can sometimes only secure a few threads of it.

The British Government follows the tradition of the Mohammedans, and the entire veil is made by native Egyptians who are hajji, or believers who have made the pilgrimage to Mecca. An official of the Government accompanies the veil till it is nearly to its destination.

The Rest Cure.

Little Paul, having disobeyed his mother, was sent to bed in the middle of the day to think over his faults and keep out of further mischief. An hour or so after he was given permission to get up and dress, and soon he appeared rosy cheeked and happy.

No Trouble to Remove Superfluous Hair

(Toilet Tips)

It is an easy matter to rid the skin of objectionable hair or fuzz, if you proceed as follows: Mix a paste with some water and a little powdered delatone, apply to hairy surface and in 2 or 3 minutes rub off, wash the skin and the hairs are gone. This method of banishing hairy growths is painless and does not mar the skin, but to avoid disappointment, be certain to get real delatone.

The Purchase of Two "Tin Whales"

VICTORIA, B. C. Oct. 5.—J. V. Paterson, President of the Seattle Construction & Dry Dock Company, the firm which constructed the two submarines the purchase of which by the British Columbia Government is now the subjects of inquiry, by Sir Charles Davidson, Royal Commissioner occupied the witness box for the greater part of the afternoon at the court, which is sitting in the Parliament Buildings here.

The witness told of the sale of the undersea boats, originally intended for the Chilean navy, to the representatives of the Canadian authorities, declaring most emphatically, and with considerable show of heat, that there was not a suggestion of any irregularity on the part of Sir Richard McBride and hose associated with him in the transaction.

He came over to Victoria, and in the Union Club met Mr. Thompson, Capt. Logan, Mr. Barnard now Lieut.-Governor of British Columbia, and two members of tParliamen. He told them that the submarines could be secured, but mentioned no price. He returned to Seattle and was called up over the telephone by Capt. W. H. Logan in regard to the boats. Several conversations followed and the price was stated, $1,150,000.

"I fixed the price myself," the witness volunteered. "The Electric Boat Company of Newberry, the contractors of the Chilean Government, wanted more than $800,000."

Later Captain Logan and a naval lieutenant, who was disguised as a hobo, had come to Seattle and, said Paterson: "I told them I would expect the cheque or whatever I was to be paid, on the border line. I would not cross the border until I was paid."

The Salvor, bearing Lieut. Jones and Capt. Logan and another man, arrived and an examination was made of the boats, and the money was paid over, and upon Lieut. Jones insisting upon a receipt one was written on the back of an envelope.

Chilean Govt. Broke.

On arriving at Victoria he met Premier McBride, who asked him if the price paid was a fair one for the boats, and he repled that it was very fair.

Questioned regarding the refusal of the Chilean Government to accept the vessels, he said that the Chilean Government "was broke," and as an excuse for refusing to accept them overloaded them on the trial trip, and as a consequence the boats did not "function quickly."

Richard Ryan, janitor of the Parliament Buildings, declared that he represented the Prime Minister in the final negotations for the purchase of the ships. He had been sent with the cheque to Lieut. Pilcher, and had accompanied the naval party on board the Salvor.

"You examined the submarines?"

"Yes."

"Are you an expert?"

"Yes, I was in the painting and decorating work for the naval authorities, and, while my work was painting, I could tell pretty quick whether any plates had been doctored."

Feared German Raid.

Bank Manager Crawford told of a panic which existed in Victoria at the outbreak of the war, because of the supposition that the Leipzig, a German cruiser, would attack the port. All the gold and securities in the banks were shipped east, he said, and automobiles were held in readiness to transport the citizens away. The arrivals of the submarines allayed the general alarm.

No Commission.

At the morning's session of the submarine enquiry being conducted by Sir Charles Davidson, four witnesses were examined. Each was asked if he had heard of the payment, directly or indirectly, of any commission, or had any knowledge or promise of future payment of any commission or gift of a private nature or to party funds and each replied in the negative.

Lieut. Bertram E. Jones, R. N., who inspected the submarines prior to the final purchase and who passed over the stipulated amount, was the most important witness called on the morning session of the court.

Not Inefficient

Questioned regarding reports about the alleged inefficiency of the submarines, Lieut. Jones declared that they were as seaworthy and as easy to handle and as efficient as any boats of the same tonnage in the British navy, that he knew about. He had five years' experience in submarine work, prior to taking the command of the two vessels here.

He repeated his assurance that the submarines were efficient fighting craft. They had been amply tested in diving and firing torpedoes.

GERMANY'S NEED OF RUBBER.

During the hearing of a case at the Mansion House, London, it was stated that agents of Germany in Holland were employing men on board Dutch vessels trading between Great Britain and Holland to buy up old motor car and cycle tyres, in order that the rubber may be melted down and used again. The British Government is doing its best to prevent the export of rubber to Germany.

Successful Trap Shooting.

Aim your gun a little above the sled protecting the traps. Give the call "Pull." Do not get rattled. Get your bird as it is going up or at its maximum height and then fire, aiming about six or eight inches ahead and a trifle below it. The tendency is always to shoot too high, not allowing for the speed of the descent. Above all things fire, even if you know you are going to miss. There is nothing so disconcerting or fatal to the poise as to allow a fairly thrown target to get altogether away without shooting at it at all. When calling "Pull" put some ginger into it. "Bark it," an old trap shot used to say. Don't falter it, as though apologizing for being alive. It hurts your confidence and rattles the trap pullers. If you stand with your gun ready and mumble "Pull" three or four times before the target is thrown the chances are overwhelming that you will miss.—O. Q. Peters in Outing.

Justice at All Hours.

Despite their preference for a republican form of government, the French are in some respects a conservative nation. A Paris contemporary discovered that one of the doors of the palais de justice is left ajar throughout the night. This door has never been shut since March 4, 1618, when Louis XIII. ordained that it should remain perpetually open "so that my subjects may be able to seek justice at all hours of the day and night." However, an enterprising journalist who presented himself at the door in the small hours of the morning was promptly ejected by a watchman. And when he quoted the ordinance of 1618 the reply was, "If you don't clear off you'll find yourself coming in by the prisoners' door tomorrow."

A Financial Deadlock.

"Who is that man who has been sitting behind the bar day after day?" inquired the stranger in Crimson Gulch.

"That's Stagecoach Charley. He's in a peculiar predicament. He went to town last week an' got his teeth fixed. Then he come here an', bein' broke, ran up a bill on the strength of his $7 worth of gold fillin's. Charley won't submit to havin' the nuggets pried out, an' the proprietor won't let him git away with the collateral, an' there you are."—Washington Star.

The Trouble.

"Have you explained the germ system to your children? Everything should be on a practical basis these days."

"No," replied the old fashioned citizen. "It seems inconsistent to tell 'em not to believe in fairies and then try to get 'em to believe in microbes."—Pittsburg Post.

RATTLED THE ENEMY.

An Uncanny Scotch Ruse That Sent Them Flying in Terror.

Many a fighting Percy shared in English battles by land and sea and rarely did one of them come to grief. But in "Highways and Byways in the Border," by the late Andrew Lang and his brother John, the honored name is linked with a story of defeat. In 1372 the Lord Percy of that day, the English warden of the marches, at the head of 7,000 men lay encamped not far from the river Tweed.

"To scare away from their poor little crops the deer and wild cattle that were wont, when night fell, to ravage them, the Scotch country folk of that district used to sound at frequent intervals a primitive kind of drum. To the ends of long poles they fixed what may best be termed huge rattles, made of dried skins tightly stretched over semicircular ribs of wood. Inside each skin they put a few round pebbles. When shaken vigorously these rattles would give out a noise quite terrifying to any four footed animal, especially when heard in the stillness of the night."

The clever Scotchmen planned a stampede, and in the pitchy blackness of midnight sent a number of picked men carrying their rattles carefully poised and muffled, who stole unperceived from bush to bush and from stone to stone until they were close upon the enemy's camp on the heights at either side. Then they sounded the rattles with a sudden din truly infernal.

Picketed horses, mad with terror, broke loose, rushed through the camp and trampled over the sleeping soldiers. Those who sprang awake, deafened and bewildered by the unholy uproar which but a few comprehended, were seized with a panic scarcely less abject than that of their horses. Many fled. The rest found themselves, as dawn broke, without either mounts, transport animals or baggage, all of which had been captured by the wily Scots. On foot, in wrath and humiliation, Percy and his 7,000 fell back across the Tweed.

Seldom in sober fact and modern slang has a formidable force been so easily and completely rattled!

A MESSAGE TO MOTHER.

It Came With the Passing of Her Dearly Beloved Babe.

It is time for me to go, mother; I am going. When in the paling darkness of the lonely dawn you stretch out your arm for your baby in the bed I shall say, "Baby is not there"—mother, I am going.

I shall become a delicate draft of air and caress you, and I shall be ripples in the water when you bathe and kiss you and kiss you again.

In the gusty night when the rain patters on the leaves you will hear my whisper in your bed, and my laughter will flash with the lightning through the open window into your room.

If you lie awake, thinking of your baby until late in the night, I shall sing to you from the stars, "Sleep, mother, sleep."

On the straying moonbeams I shall steal over your bed and lie upon your bosom while you sleep.

I shall become a dream, and through the little opening of your eyelids I shall slip into the depths of your sleep, and when you wake up and look round, startled like a twinkling firefly, I shall flit out into the darkness.

When on the great festival of puja the neighbors' children come and play about the house I shall melt into the music of the flute and throb in your heart all day.

Dear auntie will come with puja presents and will ask, "Where is our baby, sister?" Mother, you will tell her softly, "He is in the pupils of my eyes; he is in my body and in my soul."—From "The Crescent Moon," by Rabindranath Tagore.

Business and Army Recruits.

Army officers are apt to smile at the very time that business men wear grave faces. When trade and industry fall off the applicants for enlistment are also of no superior quality as to make glad the hearts of recruiting officers. Young men thrown out of work, especially those who are not expert, but "fit in" to trades and callings, are inclined to think that Uncle Sam's service presents the attraction of steady pay to the steady, even if the monthly wage is not more than $15. The army halt leaf is better than the civilian no bread.—Boston Transcript.

"Knocked Into a Cocked Hat."

The meaning of this expression is not generally known. "Cocked hat" was a variety of the game of tenpins, in which only three pins were used, set up at the angles of a triangle. When in bowling at tenpins all were knocked down except the three at the corners the set was said to be "knocked into a cocked hat," whence the popular expression for depriving anything of its main body, character or purpose.—London Express.

Rubber Erasers.

India rubber was used for the first time as an eraser in 1770, when a very small piece was sold for 3 marks. It was, however, many years later before it was put into general use. Prior to this the crumb of bread was used for erasing purposes.—London Mail.

A Cynical View.

"Married life is somewhat like a pack of cards," says a lady novelist. "Hearts figure but little any more, but if the husband has diamonds enough clubs become popular, and sooner or later a spade is his last trump."—Glasgow Herald.

"I'd rather play golf than eat." "But what does your wife say to that?" "Oh, she doesn't care; she'd rather play bridge than cook."—Detroit "Free Press."

JUST SUITED EACH OTHER.

R. L. S. and His Wife Were a Care Free Happy Go Lucky Couple.

In his autobiography in McClure's Magazine, S. S. McClure pays a tribute to the character of Mrs. Robert Louis Stevenson. He says:

"The more I saw of the Stevensons the more I became convinced that Mrs. Stevenson was the unique woman in the world to be Stevenson's wife. • • •

"Mrs. Stevenson had many of the fine qualities that we usually attribute to men rather than to women: a fair mindedness, a large judgment, a robust inconsequential philosophy of life, without which she could not have borne, much less shared with a relish equal to his own, his wandering, unsettled life, his vagrancies, his gypsy passion for freedom. She had a really creative imagination, which she expressed in living. She always lived with great intensity, had come more into contact with the real world than Stevenson had done at the time when they met, had tried more kinds of life, known more kinds of people. When he married her he married a woman rich in knowledge of life and the world. Mrs. Stevenson's autobiography would be one of the most interesting books in the world.

"A woman who was rigid in small matters of domestic economy, who insisted upon a planned and ordered life, would have worried Stevenson terribly. In his youthful tramps he liked to start out with no luggage, buying a collar here and a shirt there as he needed them. In managing his affairs he had, as he often said, no money sense. I remember hearing him tell how he and Mrs. Stevenson once went to Paris for a pleasure trip. They had a $500 check and some odd money, and they meant to have a thoroughly good time and stay as long as their money held out. After a few days they found their funds running short; they couldn't imagine what they had done with it all, but there seemed to be very little money left, so they decided they had better get home while it lasted. When they got home they found the $500 check among their papers. They hadn't cashed it at all and didn't even know they hadn't."

WEATHER FORECASTS.

Method of Tracing the Direction and Speed of Storms.

Most of the severe storms do not originate in the United States. They come to us from the Philippines, Japan, Siberia, Alaska, Canada or the gulf of Mexico. Our weather bureau gets cable, telegraphic or wireless notice of a foreign storm. Station after station of the weather bureau and vessel after vessel in the path of the storm report its arrival, so that the general direction and the speed with which it travels can be very nearly determined. Some storms can be foretold as much as ten days in advance of their arrival at a given point.

When a storm from Siberia drifts eastward around the north pole and reappears in Alaska the speed with which it has covered that section of its course is made the basis of the calculation of the time when it should appear in Washington and Oregon, when it should get to the great lakes and finally to the Atlantic coast, and each section is warned in advance. Unexpected conditions may delay the storms or divert them from the course. Take are kept on the cold waves in much the same manner. The weather reports from Canada, Iceland, Europe, Russia and Siberia are studied and predictions made as to when the cold waves from these countries will reach the United States.

To predict floods information is recorded as to the amount of rainfall at headwaters of streams. As the rain reaches the main channel the height of the water is recorded from gaugings. Records show what a height of twenty feet at Dubuque, Ia., will produce at Davenport, eighty miles down the Mississippi. This plan is followed on all the large rivers, and at each station full allowance is made for the effects of water from tributaries and from additional and local rainfall.—Leslie's.

The First Revolver.

The credit or discredit of the invention of the revolver belongs to a Swiss of Vallorbe, Jean Francois Grobet, who in 1814 fashioned, with the collaboration of his son, the first "six shooter" which as a matter of fact attracted the attention of the then minister of Russia at Zurich, Count Capo d'Istria, who sent a specimen revolver to Czar Alexander I. The royal recipient rewarded the inventor with a valuable ring, which it is to be presumed Grobet pawned, for he died a few years later in poverty.—London Telegraph.

LIFE IS ALWAYS DYING.

And Just as Soon as We Cease Dying We Cease to Live.

Living is a continuous process of dying. When we cease to die we cease to live. One can readily understand this by means of a very concrete example. Suppose you arise some cold morning and find the fire in your furnace has "gone out." It will do no good to utter malicious invectives against the poor furnace. Just philosophize as follows: "My furnace has ceased to die. In other words, it has ceased to consume that very expensive article called coal. The continual consumption of coal is fire or life in the furnace. When the consumption or dying ceased the fire or life ceased." Accordingly you proceed to make the furnace "die" some more.

What is true of the furnace is true of ourselves. All organic life exists in a state of continuous decomposition and rebuilding or a continuous state of dying and living. As soon as decomposition ceases reconstruction ceases, or, in common terms, as soon as we cease dying we cease living. Certain poisons, if swallowed by a human being, destroy life by annihilating the decomposing or dying process which is necessary for life. When they enter the system a chemical compound is formed which resists decomposition. Upon examination of the dead body it will be found that putrefaction does not take place. With these poisons in the body there is no process of dying; hence there is no life.

The same truth holds in regard to our mental and moral existence. If we cease to struggle or think and are content to live a purely animal life the activity of our brain powers quickly ceases and we are mentally dead. Struggle, action, aspiration, is dying, but it means living. Introduce the poison of vice and there is a cessation of mental life as fatal as that caused to the body by arsenic.—New York American.

A Humble Hero.

Every student of history remembers Captain Perry's dispatch after the battle of Lake Erie, a sentence terse and yet glowing, "We have met the enemy, and they are ours."

Every one remembers the great and significant result of that battle, but few perhaps have heard of and remember the worker who served the country truly there as if he had been on deck amid shot and shell, earning glory as well as the reward of a good conscience.

Just as the ships were going into action the mate of the Lawrence said to Wilson Mays, who was 10 and ready for service:

"Go below, Mays; you are too young to be here."

"I can do something, sir," was the stout reply.

"What can you do?"

"I can mend the pump, sir, and be a strong man to the guns."

When he sat down by the pump and then volunteer for active service a man who had more muscle, and when the fight was over there he was found with a bullet through his heart.

Saved the Rat Meals.

Once sailors used to say that they were going "to study a part for pantomimes," now the saying is that one "gets up in a part," which may be one of the reasons why there were once more studied performances than there are now. As an example of how much can be safely left to the intelligence of even tried actors is the case of the Napoleonic play that Charles Frohman was once rehearsing. In the midst of the dress rehearsal an actress of supposed all around experience, cast for one of the Paris street denizens, one of the mob of revolutionists, was discovered gayly decked out to patent leather shoes with jolly red heels. "No, my child," said Mr. Frohman, "not red heels and a revolutionist too." "But they look over so much prettier and give color to the scene," protested the actress. "That may be," exclaimed Mr. Frohman, "but the mob did not wear red heeled shoes; get your color with a red handkerchief or from your costume, but not with red heels."

Why Are Fish So Near-Sighted?

In the effort to discover why fishes are so near-sighted, scientists have been making some remarkable experimental studies of their eyes. One of the many interesting facts which these studies revealed was that fishes' eyes compared with human eyes are relatively large. The length of the eye of a fish is ordinarily about one-twentieth of its length, while the length of he eyeball of a man is from a sixtieth to a seventieth of his height.

The eyes of fish are in constant use except when they are asleep. Most fish have no eyelids, their eye being protected from injury by a shiny material or by a thick transparent skin. The puffer, or swellfish, which habitually burrows in sand at the bottom of the water, has eye lids which cover the eyeballs when closed, the lower eyelid being larger than the upper.

In the experimental work the eyes of normal fishes were first examined with the retinoscope, then by electrical stimulation the focus was changed from distant to near objects.

It was found that, contrary to statements sometimes made, the eyes of fishes when swimming were focused for distant vision. Fishes are able to focus their eyes on near objects—as close as four inches—by the action of the superior and inferior oblique muscles; they have no ciliary muscles. It was found possible by operation on the oblique muscles to make the fish near-sighted, far-sighted, or astigmatic.

NOTHING LIKE IT FOR COLDS

Mrs Holland Ferguson, Sheffield, N. S., writes: "Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine has cured my children and myself of severe colds. We are never without it in the house. There is nothing like it for colds and throat troubles and it is so soothing and pleasant to take, my children would drink a whole bottle if they were permitted."

INDIA TRULY LOYAL.

Only Fanatical Tribesmen on Frontier Have Shown Hostility.

LONDON, Oct. 5.—A special despatch from Simla, India, says:

"Lord Hardinge, the Viceroy, made an important speech at the conclusion of the autumn session of the Council. The Viceroy affirmed that in India tranquility prevailed, the Defence of India Act having succeeded in restoring order in the Punjab, which had been disturbed by emigrants returning from Canada and the United States imbued with revolutionary ideas.

"Frontier posts of India had often been attacked by ignorant and fanatical tribesmen, but these attacks had always been repulsed with considerable losses to the attacking parties. Our own tribesmen were absolutely staunch and loyal. The Ameer of Afghanistan had throughout observed the strictest neutrality, which he would continue rigidly to maintain but the situation in Persia was disturbed by roving bands armed with Austrian and German rifles, who wandered about endeavouring to make trouble."

GERMANS HATE THE MOMENTO

The commander of the German dirigible which visited the outlying districts of London left as a memento of his visit a large bone, apparently the blade-bone of an ox or a horse, on which are several sketches and diagrams. On the flat wide end is a sketch of a man intended to represent Sir Edward Grey, and above it is a design of a Zeppelin with a bomb dropping from it on Sir Edward's head. At the narrow end of the bone a representation of the German flag with streamers flowing from it bearing the words:—"A present to Sir Edward Grey, with the compliments of the commander and officers at——"

The bone, which was attached to a parachute, came safely to earth in a large open space and was ultimately taken possesion of by the authorities.

EAT LESS MEAT IF BACK HURTS

Take a Glass of Salts to Flush Kidneys if Bladder Bothers You

Eating meat regularly eventually produces kidney trouble in some form or other, says a well known authority, because the uric acid in meat excites the kidneys, they become overworked, get sluggish; clog up and cause all sorts of distress, particularly backache and misery in the kidney region; rheumatic twinges, severe headaches, acid stomach, constipation, torpid liver, sleeplessness, bladder and urinary irritation.

The moment your back hurts or kidneys aren't acting right, or if bladder bothers you, get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any good pharmacy; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will soon act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush clogged kidneys and stimulate them to normal activity; also to neutralize the acids in the urine so it is no longer irritated, thus ending bladder disorders.

Jad Salts cannot injure anyone; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which millions of men and women take now and then to keep the kidneys and urinary organs clean, thus avoiding serious kidney disease.

FORTUNES MADE IN "WAR STOCKS"

NEW YORK, Oct. 5—This story, which deals with sudden fortunes which are being made by speculation in the "war market" in Wall Street, might be called by any of the following titles:

"From Piker to Millionaire," or "From Shoestring to Federal Reserve Bank Roll," or "From Pork and Beans to Lobster."

"Never before have there been so many millionaire clerks in the financial district," said a banker to-day, in discussing the frenzy of speculation in "war stocks" and other securities which have been inflated by heavy European purchases of supplies in this country.

One of the notable cases is that of J. Robinson Duff, who, about a year ago managed to scrape together $650 with which he bought 13 shares of Electric Boat. To-day Mr. Duff is worth more than half a million and has an office of his own. Women as well as men have benefitted by the rise in stocks. School teachers have been able to turn from the channels of education to those of idleness and luxury. Stenographers discuss limousines with the same knowledge with which they formerly spoke of Remingtons and Underwoods.

Before the war broke out Bethlehem Steel sold around 10. Now it is selling around 399.

The Wall Street bookkeeper who bought 10 shares of General Motors at $950 for his baby before the war now has the satisfaction of knowing that he has an infant worth $31,500.

Studebaker has gone from 15 1-8 to 140 3-4; Crucible Steel has risen from 90 to 105; American Locomotive has leaped from 10 to 69 1-4, and these are only a few.

In the early spring a gentleman was out motoring with a friend, and noticed that the owner of the machine crawled slowly along a thoroughfare where previously he had run at high speed. Accordingly, he asked why they were going so slowly.

"Well," explained the owner with just a touch of impatience, "everybody's carrying home garden tools now, and you can't run over a man without getting a puncture."

FACTS FOR THE CURIOUS.

A common needle passes through eighty operations in its manufacture.

Probably the longest and most luxuriant beard in the world is that of Zachary T. Wilcox, of Carson City, Nev., a veteran of the Civil War. He has not shaved or had it cut for 33 years, and his hirsute adornment is now 8½ feet long. Ordinarily it is worn wrapped around a piece of cardboard and thrust under the owner's vest.

The strength of an egg shell is not generally fully realized, declares the Indianapolis News. Recently eight ordinary hens' eggs were submitted to pressure applied externally all over the surface of the shell, and the breaking pressure varied between 400 and 675 pounds a square inch. With the stresses applied internally to 12 eggs these gave way at pressures varying between 34 and 65 pounds a square inch. The pressure required to crush the eggs varied between 40 and 75 pounds. The average thickness of the shells was 13-1,000 of an inch.

Rats destroy every year at least a twentieth part of the sugar cane in Jamaica, amounting in value to little short of $1,000,000.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

BOWSER'S FIRE ESCAPE

Test of Device a Success, but Caused Too Much Trouble.

BURNING RAG THE BLAZE.

It Was Sufficient, However, For the Head of the Household to Pose as a Hero—Wifey Gives Hubby Credit at Last.

[Copyright, 1909, by S. C. McClure.]

When a boy brought a rather curious looking bundle to the door the other afternoon and said that Mr. Bowser had sent it, I knew that there was to be another experiment of some sort. A dozen times before Mr. Bowser's arrival at 6 o'clock I was tempted to cut the strings and solve the mystery, but each time I was restrained by the cook, who said:

"For heaven's sake, don't meddle with it, ma'am. It may be another of Queen Elizabeth's dresses he has bought at auction for you or it may be some infernal machine that will go off with a bang and blow us over the roof."

Mr. Bowser smiled as he came home and found the package in the hall. He expected me to ask the contents, but I didn't. He threw out various hints during dinner, and when he had finished he took a paper from his pocket and said:

"Mrs. Bowser, I have gathered a few statistics that may be of some interest to you. I wish to state at the outset, however, that they do not relate to bargain sales."

"Do they relate to how many snipe you shot when you went hunting in September and was lost in a marsh for twenty-four hours?" I queried.

He took out a memorandum book and made an entry. I have seen that entry since, and it reads, "Mrs. Bowser has sassed me, and I will lay for her and get even." When he had written the words, he said:

"In regard to these statistics, let me say that the number of people burned in their beds in America during the last year was 4,920. These people lost their lives in fires occurring at night. They were cut off from stairways and did not dare jump from the windows."

"And do you propose to open jumping schools?" I asked.

He flushed up and was ready to make a retort, when he thought better of it and took out the book and wrote: "More sass from Mrs. Bowser. I will make her heart ache for it." Then he swallowed his feelings and said:

"All these lives were needlessly sacrificed. Had the houses been properly equipped with fire escapes every man, woman and child could have got safely down. We have been married nineteen years, Mrs. Bowser. That is 13,935 days and nights. On at least 13,530 nights I have gone to bed in fear of fire—of being roasted before morning."

"And that's why you have lain on your back and snored like a locomotive blowing off steam and why I have sometimes had to almost drag you out on the floor to wake you up."

Made Another Note.

Out came the little book, and the third entry read: "Mrs. Bowser's impudence continues. It will be a terrible reckoning when I get around to it." Then he said to me:

"I admit that I have bought fire escapes that wouldn't escape and that you have a right to be cynical, but don't carry the thing too far. The inventor of the latest thing in that line was in the office this morning to see me. He wants to call it the Bowser Sure Shot Fire Escape, and he has sent one here for me to try. If it works all right I will let him use my name and perhaps purchase a half interest."

"And probably break your neck fooling around with the thing, Mr. Bowser, I object. This house is perfectly safe from fire. If the whole lower part was in flames we could get out on the roof. If you go to dawdling around with that thing you will at least draw a crowd of idlers, and some one will turn in a fire alarm and call out the engines and police. You can come home some afternoon and experiment from one of the back windows. You will be picked up with at least fourteen broken bones, and you may linger along for two or three weeks, but I shall nurse and console you the best I can."

Out came the book, and the fourth entry reads: "Mrs. Bowser defiant and obstinate. Hasn't called me an ass yet, but has come very near it. Just wait until I get around to her case! Being it's a cold, dark night, I'll abandon the proposed experiment to a more favorable time. I want it understood, however, that I don't abandon it on account of anything Mrs. Bowser has said. She must be taught that I alone am boss of this roost."

Nothing further was said about the escape until time to go to bed. Mr. Bowser sat down and read and smoked, and I was hugging the hope that the invention would be called for next day when he shouldered the package and took it upstairs and attached it to one of the front windows. It was simply a board with ropes and pulleys, but neither of us had anything more to say about it. I was asleep almost as soon as in bed, but it appeared that Mr. Bowser remained awake thinking of what a rescue he could make in case the house should be obliging enough to take fire. He was at length falling asleep when the opportunity of his life came.

He smelled smoke!

The cook had left a dishcloth hanging where it finally smoldered into flame. It fell on top of the range and could have done no harm, but the rank smoke filtered through the house, and Mr. Bowser was equal to the occasion. Another man might have run downstairs to see where the fire was and put it out.

Thought House on Fire.

Mr. Bowser didn't. He felt that the house was doomed. He jumped out of bed, gave me a cuff on the ear, and I sat up as he said:

"Sarah, the house is a roaring furnace, but have no fear. I can save us both!"

"But where's the fire?" I asked.

"Everything below stairs is burning, but don't get excited. Take it cool and dress while I'm swinging the escape from the window."

"I can hear no crackling flames. Why don't you run down and see if you can't save the house?"

"Be calm, Sarah; be calm. Don't get rattled in the least. I will now take my seat on the escape, and you come to me. That's it. Put your arms around me while I lower away. Stop your yelling. Can't you see that we are all right? Here we are, safe and sound."

So we were. Mr. Bowser's escape had worked without a hitch.

Mr. Bowser had been calm and cool. He had proved that a baldheaded man can be a hero.

We had just reached the ground when a policeman and three pedestrians came running up. They had been standing on the corner and had seen us making our descent.

"What is it? What's the matter here?" they shouted.

"The matter is that the house is a burning volcano inside," replied Mr. Bowser so calmly and matter of fact that I adored him.

The four men ran up the steps together and burst the doors open with a crash, and a little smoke came out. It was smoke that smelled of a burning rag. Then about ten men and boys arrived in a bunch and entered after the others.

Mr. Bowser stood there like a hero. It was a cold night, but he didn't even shiver. He reminded me of the rock of Gibraltar. We might have been standing there yet, he with his arm around me and saying that he would shed his last drop of blood for me, had not the crowd in the house reappeared, with the policeman at their head.

"Say, do you know what it was?" asked the officer in disgusted tones.

"I think the furnace blew up," replied Mr. Bowser.

"I don't. I think it was an old dishcloth burning away. If you'd gone downstairs instead of playing the fool you could have saved all this nonsense!"

Then the crowd went away laughing, and Mr. Bowser and I went into the house and propped up the broken doors and picked up the overturned chairs and the pulled down portieres and curtains, and when I saw that he looked a bit disappointed and put out I just put my arms around him and said:

"Never mind, dear. You are a real hero, and it won't take over $5 worth of cough medicine to make us all right again." M. QUAD.

Doctor Said Sciatica--- Rheumatism--Lumbago

But He Could Not Help Me, and Endorsed the Use of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills

Mr. Wm. Parker, 105 Cayuga street, Brantford, Ont., tells in the following letter of his remarkable experience with Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills: "My doctor treated me for some time for Sciatica, Rheumatism, Lumbago, but to no purpose, for I had to lay off work. The visiting officer of Sick Benefit called to see me and advised the use of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, stating that he had been cured of the same trouble by their use. I asked the druggist about them and he recommended them highly. Not being satisfied with this, I went back to my doctor, and when he said they were good I began their use. The promptness with which they enlivened the action of the kidneys and bowels was wonderful, and it was not long before I was rid of all my trouble.

"I was so bad that I could only walk by hanging on to a chair or the wall. My wife had to lace my shoes. Only those who have had this ailment can realize the way I suffered. I am writing this letter to let people who have my trouble know of these pills. You are at liberty to use this letter, and if anyone interested will call or write to me I will give every detail."

Write to Mr. Parker, enclosing stamp for reply, and he will verify this statement. He will do this out of the gratitude he feels for his cure and because he realizes how difficult it is to obtain the cure of these dreadfully painful ailments.

There are so many treatments recommended for rheumatism that you naturally doubt them all. Here is an opportunity for you to verify the cure and put this great medicine to the test. It will only cost you a quarter to try Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. They get at the very foundation of rheumatism, and by removing the poisons from the system take away the cause of pains and aches.

A FARMER'S MISHAP

Farmer Edward Crane, of Kinbura, Ont., writes:—"I was driving three horses on a disc-harrow when the harness broke, and while fixing it, one of the horses kicked me against the sharp edges of the harrow. I sustained a nasty cut on my elbow and wrist, and as I could not leave work to get the wounds dressed, dirt got into them and my arm became very painful. It looked for some time as if I were going to have some very bad sores, but I was advised to try Zam-Buk. I did, and in a few days my arm was much better—less painful, and the stiffness less troublesome. I continued using Zam-Buk freely and in a short time the wounds were entirely healed. I believe Zam-Buk to be the best ointment obtainable. It should always be at hand ready for emergencies."

Mothers and fathers should bear this in mind. In the home, on the playground, at school, or in the workshop accidents will happen, and Zam-Buk is the best "first aid." It is strongly antiseptic—kills the germs which cause inflammation, festering and blood poison. The rich herbal essences of which Zam-Buk is composed, soothe pain and quickly heal any injury. Zam-Buk is also a sure cure for eczema, ulcers, abscesses, piles, blood poisoning and all skin diseases. 50c. box, all druggists and stores or post free from Zam-Buk Co., Toronto, for price. KINGS AND THEIR INCOMES.

The Kaiser Has Suffered a Serious Cut in His "Salary."

According to reliable reports, the war has brought about a decided diminution in the income of the Kaiser. The tearing up of the little "scrap of paper" has already cost him personally £5,000,000. Wilhelm, however, has still a respectable fortune left, if a recent calculation by Herr Martin, an authority on German rich people, is correct. Wilhelm was supposed to be worth £7,000,000, but Herr Martin has pointed out that a trifle of, roughly, £13,000,000, the valuation of the Kaiser's forest lands and farms, had been overlooked. This brings up the Royal estate to a total of £20,000,000.

The Kaiser, however, has never been the richest monarch in the world. This honor belongs to the Czar, who on his accession came into the Romanoff private estate, yielding about £3,000,000 a year. Beyond that, his salary amounts to another two millions, besides many profitable investments abroad. There are small expenses to be deducted, such as some £500,000 a year to Grand Dukes and Duchesses, but when everything is taken into account the Czar's income is far ahead of that of the Turkish Sultan with his million and a half, or our own King, who is the poorest in pelf and palaces of all the Old-World potentates. A State grant of £1,500,000, added to his other revenues, brings the Czar's income up to £8,000,000 a year. Out of this he has at least £5,000,000 a year for his private use.

King George receives £470,000 per annum from the State, [illegible] more than a fourth of this goes into the privy purse. It would be naturally impossible for our King to live in a manner befitting his rank on an income of £120,000 or so, but there are miscellaneous revenues from invested funds and other private sources which help to swell the privy purse.

The Emperor of Austria, who is also King of Hungary, draws two salaries amounting to £562,500 each. The King of Italy receives £750,000 a year, but has to make allowances to several members of the Royal Family out of it. King Alfonso has an allowance of £387,500, a sum which is his own to spend as he pleases. Belgium's King receives about £175,000.

The Garden Feud.

"Don't forget that 'chickens always come home to roost,'" snapped the angry suburbanite as he shook his finger over the garden fence.

Or by the pencils in your hair,
They'll have you fired!

Earth Along the Battle Front is a Maze of Passages Holding the Front Line

Life at the Front as Seen Through the Eyes of a Civilian—Keeping Under Cover Necessary—The Guns of Both Armies Exchange Their Own Peculiar Compliments in the Near Distance.

LONDON, Oct. 5.—"It will be all right to take the car on a bit further. Have you both got gas helmets? Very well, let's get in."

The car's progress out of Brigade Headquarters gave the occupants the same sort of treatment as the dice get inside the box. It was only a short journey, though, a matter of a mile or so. In the fields on the way up the peasant was gathering in his crops, his children assisting him. They took no notice of us, no more notice than they took of the noise of the artillery in the rear and the purr of a shell passing over them. The troops we passed in the lane did show some slight curiosity about us. It was evidently a spectacle a little out of the common for a couple of civilians to be motoring in the direction we were taking.

Not Cowardly to Run.

"Now, don't hesitate to run for cover if a shell should come our way," said the staff officer who was with us. He had dismissed the car, with orders to the chauffeur to take it close under the trees some way back. "It won't look foolish. It will merely be proper caution. Things have been quiet here lately, but one never knows. You did bring a helmet apiece, did you not? Sling them over your shoulder like this. They certainly are things one cannot possibly share with another."

We struck off the lane on to a bare patch, and came to a stretch of excavation, with the soil thrown up on one side only. It reminded one of the works of the speculative builder in Britain, whose manner it is everlastingly to be "opening up" new stretches in suburban districts. The works here were deserted, and you almost expected to find a gang of navvies taking their dinner under the lee of a waggon. But we were in France—or perhaps Belgium—I dare not be more precise—and this ordinary-looking excavation was the beginning of a tangle of passages two feet or a little more in breadth, and eight, ten, twelve, or in places perhaps fourteen feet in depth. Passages cut in the common clay soil for miles on end, but never for more than a score of yards in a straight line. Passages where the Canadian soldier eats and sleeps, writes letters and plays chess. Passages where quite comfortable seats have been placed by the wayside. Passages in which puppies are taught tricks, and in which tiny frogs native to this district, are gently impressed into displaying their agility. Passages in which a man often passes his waking hours with those foolish little devices which come to the mind of anyone glued to one spot for a prolonged spell, and forced to all but complete idleness. Passages in which a man does pretty well everything except relieve the monotony by mounting the parapet and taking a view of the country. Passages which the newcomer enters full of lusty life, and maybe an hour later is quietly laid aside by his fellows for burial after dark.

In the Trenches.

Passages which we civilians glibly refer to as "the trenches."

We scramble with our leader into the communicating trench. Ten yards of progress and we follow him sharply to the right, or else to the left. We pass along Currie Avenue, and afterwards into McHarg Place, and later into Leckie Avenue. We walk for two whole hours behind our guide, and he never fails to disappear continually round the corner on the route. Except for this, it is easy walking. There has been no rain for many days, and the double wall of clay (a couple of inches only, at times, from both shoulders), is perfectly dry. Under foot is a well-made wooden pathway, the little cross-pieces arranged in the hit-and-miss fashion, a couple of spaces between each cross-piece. Underneath this pathway is a tiny ditch. In fine weather this little culvert does its duty well. When it rains hard its good offices break down through sheer overwork. In such cases the man in the trenches does the tramp with water about him to his hips.

Holding the Front Line.

When you find sandbags above your head on one side you know you have arrived at the trench proper. The men you meet, too, are dawdling about, not, as in the communication trench, just stolidly tramping along. I had a notion, before I saw for myself, that men "holding the trenches" did so by standing at regular intervals, rifle in hand, on the alert for what might happen at any moment. Nothing like it in reality. As we kept making the everlasting turn to the right or to the left we would come up with a man sitting on one of the wayside benches, idly reading a page of a Canadian newspaper of the fortnight but one before last. "Good morning," says the staff officer, as the man stands up on the instant. The staff officer must have wished a couple of hundred good mornings in his progress. "You find it pretty quiet this morning, don't you?" he would add on occasion. "Very quiet, sir," would be the answer.

The Life They Live.

A good deal has been written, and prominent men have enlarged in speeches upon the "splendid spirit" of the men in the trenches. It may be that this insistence upon the "splendid spirit" will lead some folks to picture our soldiers as of the ever-singing, ever-laughing type. Pity if this is so, for it would be a poor idea of the splendid spirit of reality shown by our fellows. Take some trifling incidents of our two-hour tramp as in example. I paused for a moment to pass a word with a chap from Calgary who was cooking bits of steak in a brazier. "It looks all right," I remarked, by way of opening the conversation. "Sure," he replied. "We get first-rate meat just now." Another man came round the corner. "Let's have a bit of your kindling, Jim," said the newcomer. A yard or so away a third trench resident was shaving. Like all the other soldiers we met, these three were vastly interested in seeing a civilian in the trenches. The stranger could tell them something, for instance, about the Zeppelin raids upon London. The whole world might have been living in the trenches for all the talk they made about it. In their view we in London—going to bed in four-posters and getting bombed—were leading the extraordinary life! Our guide spoke to one man about a shell having destroyed a portion of the trench. "The working party made it all right again last night, sir," was the reply. The speaker might have been referring to the wind having lifted off the roof of his chicken house!

Of course, you have heard about the dug-outs. You imagine them as so many holes in the ground. So they are, in a manner of speaking. You come at intervals to a space cut out of the clay, in much the same style as a space is sometimes left in the wall of a church, and in which there reposed the recumbent effigy of some valiant knight or holy man of old. In such a place in the trenches the temporary occupant deposits his greatcoat, his blanket, and the smaller articles of his kit. Often enough the occupant is there himself snoring. At another point you notice a pair of boots sticking out of a hole in the ground. They would never stick at such an angle unless there was something supporting them. You are forced to the conclusion that the owner's feet are supporting them, and that his body is farther up the hole.

V.C. and D.S.O. as Neighbours.

We arrived at a whole row of quite the latest thing in dugouts. I suppose I must not mention names, but a Montreal V.C. and a Montreal D.S.O. were next-door neighbours here. The residences were quite classy. They were made of stout planks, with a few tons of earth on top, and the tenants were positive that at least two shells could drop on any one of these residences before change of quarters would become imperative. Trench hospitality was pressed upon us. "I do wish you'd stay for dinner," urged the V.C. Not a month before, by the way, I had met him at the Savoy Hotel, along with the D.S.O., both on six days' leave. We hadn't time to stop. "Well, then, let's make you a cup of tea." We really could not resist this, for the morning walk in the sun had been warm work.

The D.S.O. scuttled along the trenches, and returned in a few minutes with a tin of hot water. He mentioned he had been sure he could find some of the men with water on the boil if he looked along the trenches.

Noise of Guns and Bullets.

All through the two-hour journey, we heard the guns of both armies exchanging their own peculiar compliments in the near distance. More than once our guide bade us bend as we walked. "It's a nasty bit just here," he explained. In going through one "nasty bit" we heard the whistle of a bullet. Our guide was not sure, but he thought a sniper had been after us. Once or twice when we looked towards the parapet we saw a small wooden cross marking the place where some brave fellow was buried. The memorial, in a few cases, would not be more than a foot from the trench. The man must have fallen long before this particular trench was dug, or before it was thought of taking a trench in this direction.

"The Germans are not a hundred yards from this spot. Take a look through my periscope." Sure enough, at about the distance indicated, was a line of excavated earth with barbed wire in front. It seemed grotesque to think this low mound of earth could have any sinister associations. "Better take it down," remarked our guide as he lowered the periscope. "They'll spot it if we're not careful, and it's an easy matter to get a broken jaw, or something worse, from a periscope smashed by rifle fire."

Such things go to the trivial round and the common task of trench life. Nothing glorious about it, nothing even novel about it for those who follow the life. For all they know, it may last for months more. Whatever happens, they will be ready.

DON'T SCOLD, MOTHER! THE CROSS CHILD IS BILIOUS, FEVERISH

Don't scold your fretful, peevish child. See if tongue is coated; this is a sure sign its little stomach, liver and bowels are clogged with sour waste.

When listless, pale, feverish full of cold, bad breath, throat sore doesn't eat, sleep or act naturally, has stomachache, indigestion, diarrhoea give a tablespoonful of "California Syrup of Figs," and in a few hours all the foul waste, the sour bile and fermenting food passes out of the bowels and you have a well and playful child again. Children love this harmless "fruit laxative," and mothers can rest easy after giving it, because it never fails to make their little "insides" clean and sweet.

Keep it handy, Mother! A little given today saves a sick child tomorrow, but get the genuine. Ask your druggist for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which has directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups plainly on the bottle. Remember there are counterfeits sold here, so surely look and see that yours is made by the "California Fig Syrup Company." Hand back with contempt any other fig syrup.

ANIMAL SPIRITS.

Our Vital Functions as They Were Known in Galen's Time.

"Few persons even stop to consider when they speak of 'a man of spirit' that they are unwittingly employing the language of the days of Galen," says the Journal of the American Medical Association. "Yet this is evidently the survival of the old doctrine of spirits. We may believe that Galen had a conception of the nerve trunks as conductors of something—he called it spirits—to and from the brain and spinal cord.

"The natural spirits were that undefined property which gave to blood the capacity of nourishing the tissues of the body. The vital spirits were acquired in the heart, and when at last the blood with its vital spirits went to the brain and experienced a sort of refinement for the last time the animal spirits were separated from it and carried to the body by the nerve trunks."

Such was the idea of the vital functions in the second century. Today, after 1,800 years, we know that there are no "spirits" in our blood or nerves, but we still speak of being in "high spirits" or "low spirits," of being full of "animal spirits," of a "spirited answer" or a "spirited horse."

The Frame.

He sent to her his photograph.
'Twas in a frame of gold
With butterflies and ivy leaves
And starry lilies scrolled.
He went without cigars a week
And lunched on apple pie
And to and from his office walked,
The costly thing to buy.

She thanked him in a charming note
That filled his soul with bliss.
And then she took his picture out—
Oh sly, deceitful miss!
She put her own (in regal pose,
With opera cloak and fan,
In that expensive frame and sent
It to another man.

CLOTHESPIN MACHINES.

What Happens When a Log of Wood Starts Through Them.

Making clothespins is an industry that nets handsome returns to many American factories. At Martinsville, Ind., there is a factory which has a capacity of more than 200,000 clothespins a day.

A rough log started through the mill comes out as hundreds of the shapely little wooden pins familiar to the back yard. The logs are cut into blocks about sixteen inches long, which a headlong saw cuts into boards about five-eighths of an inch thick. A gang of saws cuts these boards into strips five-eighths of an inch square and each long enough to make four pins. These strips are placed on an automatic trimmer and cut to the required length. They are then conveyed to the automatic lathes, seven in number, each with a capacity of four dozen a minute. From the lathes the pins drop to the slotting machines and from these to the dryroom, where all moisture is removed. Next they go to the polishing cylinders, which are filled about half full of pins, chips and sawdust. The cylinders revolve slowly for four hours, after which the pins drop into chutes to be conveyed to the packing room. Each lathe has a capacity of 2,400 dozen pins a day.—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

THE BALKAN SITUATION—The map shows clearly the situation in the Balkans, and the immediate effect of the entrance of Bulgaria into the war with the Germanic allies can be conjectured. The surrounding countries favourable to the Entente are shown in white.

Australian Story of the Fighting on Dardanelles

LONDON, Oct. 5.—As illustrating the difficult and desperate character of the fighting in the Dardanelles, at the same time paying tribute to the fighting qualities and heroism of both Australian and Turk, Captain C. E. W. Bean, official press representative with the Australian forces, sends a belated description of the "glorious charge" of two Australian light horse brigades at Anzac.

The attack of these two brigades occurred at a spot where natural obstacles made success impossible, but the movement was regarded as necessary in order to draw Turkish troops away from points where real advances could be made successfully. Only one man in six of the Australians who left the trenches came back safely.

"This charge differed from that of the Light Brigade," says Capt. Bean, "in that it was made by horsemen who had volunteered to fight on foot or in any other way provided they could get to the Gallipoli Peninsula and help the other Australians there. The two scaling ladders they carried with them are lying out there in the scrub about half way to the enemy trenches, and there are a number of tumbled little heaps of that dull, pea-soup-coloured Australian khaki which is the hall-mark of unrecorded heroism on the battlefield on this peninsula.

"You can piece together a simple deduction as to the details. There are no Victoria Crosses, there are no birthday honours, but I know this—that for sheer, self-sacrificing heroism there never was a deed of history that surpassed the charge which two Australian light horse brigades made in the first light of Saturday, 7th August, in order to help their comrades in a critical moment of a great battle.

After describing the preliminary bombardment of Turkish trenches by artillery, which lasted a half-hour, Capt. Bean tells of the actual infantry advance, which really consisted of three separate charges on three sides of irregular-shaped ridges, abreast of which the Turks had planted infantry defence works. In the first of these movements the second line men were ordered to advance two minutes after the first line, the third line coming along after another ten minutes. The orders were obeyed as if by a machine, although every man knew death almost certainly awaited him at the top of his own parapet from the machine guns of the Turks.

Describing the Turkish fire at this point, Capt. Bean says: "One knew nobody could live in it. Many fell back wounded before they had even cleared the parapet. Others, wounded just outside, managed to crawl back before being hit a second or third time. Col. White had run only ten yards before he was killed. The Turkish machine guns drew a line which none could pass, and often as a man fell wounded he was hit six or eight times more as he dropped through the stream of bullets.

"It was all over within a quarter of an hour, but in the extreme south eastern corner of the Turkish trench there did appear for just two minutes a small flag, indicating the presence there of a group of our men. Nobody saw them get there; nobody ever will know who they were or how they did it. For two minutes the flag fluttered and then an unseen hand tore it down."

After a description of similar unsuccessful charges on other sides of the ridges, Capt. Bean concludes his story by stating that the only man who returned from the Turkish parapet reported that the Turks there had their packs on and were in full marching order, probably being ready to hurry off to reinforce further north when this attack in the centre delayed them.

"The Australians had in the richest and fullest measure, achieved the object for which their help had been needed at a critical point," declares the chronicler of the charge. "This place always will be sacred as the scene of two very brave deeds. The first—let us never forget it—was the desperate attack made by the Turks across this same neck at dawn on 30th June, and the second was this deed of self-sacrificing bravery which never has been surpassed in military history—the charge of Australian light horse into certain death at the call of their comrades need during the crisis in the greatest battle ever fought on Turkish soil."

EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

GIRL'S DRESS.

By Anabel Worthington.

Something a little out of the ordinary run of dresses is shown in the one selected for our illustration. This has a plain, long waisted blouse, with the centre of the front occupied by a straight vest, and over this revers which have the narrow end at the top and widen a little as they meet just above the waistline.

At the neck is an ornamental collar, and the sleeves, if short, have a cuff to correspond, but if long are finished with a plain, straight band.

The one piece skirt is gathered at the top and joined to the waist beneath a belt or sash. Half way down the skirt is a wide tuck which gives the appearance of a tunic. Indeed, it is possible to add a second material under this tuck, and this will be found of great help when alterations are in hand.

These dresses are made of the more simple woollen fabrics such as serge and cashmere. There is now a beautiful silk cashmere and there are numerous fancy finish fabrics which are suitable. Velveteen or corduroy can be used, and both are pretty and durable.

The dress pattern, No. 7,338, is cut in sizes 8, 10, 12 and 14 years. Medium size requires 2¾ yards of 44 inch striped material, ⅝ yard of 27 inch plain goods and 2¼ yards of ribbon.

This pattern can be obtained by sending 10 cents to the office of this paper.

When ordering remember to give your name and address as well as the number and size of pattern required, and age of a child.

Price 15 cents, or 2 for 25c.

Bulgaria's Answer Is Expected To-Day

The Allies Prepare For A New Offensive

THE RUSSIAN ULTIMATUM WAS NOT DELIVERED TILL YESTERDAY

Illness of Russian Minister Prevented Its Deliverance So That Bulgaria Has Until To-day to Explain Her Attitude --German Paper States That Ultimatum Will Be Answered By An Attack on Serbia.

LITTLE CHANGE ON WESTERN FRONT

LONDON, Oct. 5.—It has been announced that owing to the illness of the Russian Minister to Bulgaria, Russia's ultimatum was not delivered to the Bulgarian Government till four o'clock yesterday afternoon, so that Bulgaria has till four o'clock to-day to explain her menacing attitude.

The German Lokal Anzeiger to-day editorially states that Russia's ultimatum to Bulgaria will be answered by the German-Austrian guns across the Danube.

ON THE WESTERN FRONT.

PARIS, France, Oct. 5.—(French Official Communique). — The French artillery exploded a German train north of Verdun, near Ornes, according to this afternoon's official communique, which claimed no further progress for the Allies either in the Artois or Champagne regions.

In both regions the French and German artillery increased their activity throughout the night, but no important infantry actions occurred.

A French air squadron dropped fifty bombs on the station of Biaches, near Peronne.

"In the Artois region a violent bombardment occurred last night," said the communique. "There was bomb and torpedo fighting in the region of Quennieverres, south of Arras, Vic Sur Aisne and the plateau of Nouvron.

"In the Champagne region an artillery exchange continued througout the night near Vede Grande, the Navarin Farm and Souain Hill.

"In the Argonne there was trench fighting with grenades and petards near Courtes Chasses and La Fille Morte."

ATHENS, Oct. 5.—Large barges on which are placed powerful long range guns are now being used by the Allies in bombarding the Dardanelles fores. Mytilene despatches to-day said several of these barges were towed inside the strait yesterday and shelled the Turkish works on both sides for several hours with great effect.

ATHENS, Oct. 5.—Three Greek sailing vessels were pursued and shelled by Bulgarian Revenue cutters in the Aegian Sea, according to reports received here to-day. The vessels escaped undamaged, but the incident caused much excitement here.

BERLIN, Oct. 5.—The War Office to-day made public the copy of an order said to have been issued by the commander of an English division on the eve of the great offensive, declaring "that on the coming battle depends the fate of future British generations."

NEW YORK CITY, Oct. 5.—Advices received by private cables to-day say that under cover of a heavy bombardment, the Austrians and Germans attempted to cross the Danube River to-day, but the Serbians were well entrenched, and with their improved artillery, and aided by British naval guns, administered a crushing repulse to the vanguard of the Teutonic forces. According to the despatches, the British and Serbian gunners totally annihilated the invaders, who attempted to make the crossing on barges. A bombardment at long range is continuing, and some shells are falling on Belgrade, but inflicting only slight damage. The Serbians are confident that, with the help of the Allies, they can prevent the Germans joining hands with Bulgaria through Serbian territory.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 5.—Authenticated stories reaching here to-day say that Turkish Kurds shot down the United States flags which were raised over schools in Armenia for the protection of Armenian women and children. Missionaries ask that the United States take a hand and secure them the necessary protection.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 5.—"Progress has been made," Secretary Lansing. "The Arabic problem is settled," Ambassador Bernstorff.

That is the status, variously interpreted, of the negotiations between Secretary Lansing and Ambassador Von Bernstorff regarding the sinking of the Arabic, as expressed by the two diplomats following a twenty-minute conference at the State Department to-day.

That the German agent presented a practically satisfactory form of disavowal of the sinking of the vessel, is the general belief, though Secretary Lansing declined to say whether any document had been submitted.

Secretary Lansing went to the White House shortly after noon today to confer with President Wilson.

It is understood he laid before the President for his approval the form of disavowal which Bernstorff indicated Germany would agree to make.

TORONTO, Oct. 5.—The over-subscription of the Anglo-French bond issue of half a million dollars is indeed a most gratifying thing. Further, it shows that the Allies can look to the United States for a considerably larger accommodation, should the need arise, said Sir Edmund Walker, president of the Canada Bank of Commerce. This may be taken as representing the views of leading Canadian financiers in regard to this important matter. Sir Edmund also points out that the popularity of the issue on the American market bears out what has already been said by himself and others concerning the advisability of Canadian financiers abstaining from participation in the present loan and conserving their resources to assist in raising a larger sum of money in Canada when the time is ripe for such a project.

KEEP THE BAND FUND IN MIND

The Examiner acknowledges with pleasure to-day the receipt of $30 from Mr. W. M. Blewitt, of Buckhorn, the first contribution from outside the city for the Overseas Band Fund. Subscriptions are coming in well for the Fund, the citizens regarding the organization as one worthy in every way of the support of the people of Peterborough. Much more is needed, however, to pay for the instruments that have been ordered, and the money is needed as soon as possible. Send in your donations through The Examiner or through the committee.

LIEUT. HAULTAIN WAS AT THE FRONT WITH THE R.F.A.

Will Speak at the Patriotic Concert in Brock Street Rink on Friday Night—Big Programme Prepared for Occasion

THE NEW INSTRUMENTS

Lieut. Arnold Haultain, of Port Hope, invalided home from the front, who will speak at the concert in Brock St. Rink on Friday night, is a son of Mrs. (Dr.) Haultain, formerly of Peterborough, and a nephew of Lt.-Col. R. M. Dennistoun, formerly of the 57th Regiment. His address on Friday night should be full of interest. Lieut. Haultain is a graduate of R.M.C., Kingston, and when war broke out was with a surveying party in the far north. He endeavoured to reach civilization in time to go to the front with the First Contingent, but was too late for that. Instead of waiting for the Second Contingent, he crossed over to England and enlisted in the King Edward Horse as a private. Soon after he was given a commission in the British army as subaltern in the Royal Field Artillery and went to the front with his unit. He was invalided home some weeks ago.

The concert on Friday night to which all citizens are cordially invited, promises to be a great success. The physical drill squad of the local battalion will take part and music will be furnished by the Overseas Band, who will be presented with the new instruments, and also the drums which are the gifts of the members of the battalion.

W. O. W. Have Social Evening

An open meeting of the Woodmen of the World was held last evening, when a large number of the members and their friends gathered for a social time. The Chairman was Mr. C. E. Hicks and a splendid programme of music was given. Interspersing the musical numbers dancing was enjoyed, Tucker's Orchestra supplying the music. High Council Commander Dr Harrison of Toronto was present and gave an address. During the evening dainty refreshments were served.

Will Say Farewell To Boys of Battery

Big Parade and Farewell Meeting To-night--All Peterboro's Overseas Soldiers Who Are in Town Will Parade--Eighteen Recruits Passed Yesterday, a Banner Enlistment Day--To-day's Military News.

Everybody in town will be out to-night to honour the Peterborough boys who have been chosen to go overseas in the draft from the 33rd Battery, C.E.F. The sturdy lads from the artillery who have been home on their final leave before sailing, will be escorted in a parade through the down town streets by the band and company of the Peterborough overseas battalion. The parade will leave the armouries at 7.30 o'clock and after a procession down town will return to the armouries, where a farewell meeting will be held. Addresses will be given by Mayor Huller, Judge Huycke, J. H. Burnham, M.P. and Rev. Canon Davidson, and it is hoped that the citizens will turn out in numbers to show their appreciation of the spirit shown by Peterborough's artillerymen.

The draft will leave for Kingston on the morning G.T.R. train to-morrow and will be accompanied to the station by the band and the Peterborough battalion.

Acting Corp. W. Lemay of the local battalion has been promoted provisional sergeant and has been placed in charge of No. 3 platoon. Sergt. Lemay comes from Lakefield. The platoon commands are as follows:

No. 1 platoon—Sergt. Calladine.
No. 2 platoon—Sergt. Oxley.
No. 3 platoon—Sergt. Lemay.
No. 4 platoon—Sergt. Hartshorn.

Stanley Hagerman of Peterborough leaves to-morrow for Barriefield camp to join the overseas draft of the 33rd Battery. He is a brother of Bombardier Alf. Hagerman of the same battery and is the fourth son of Mr. Alf. Hagerman, Sr., 161 Hunter street east to join the Canadian forces. Pte. Victor Hagerman enlisted here with the 57th detachment, 2nd contingent, and is now at the front with the 21st Battalion. The other brother enlisted in Montreal and is with the Princess Pats. They were all born in Canada.

Norman Laing of Peterborough, also leaves to-morrow to join the 33rd Battery draft. He is a son of Mr. Geo. Laing and has a brother Stewart now at the front with the Canadian Engineers.

The 33rd Battery cleaned up the "soft ball" baseball league at Barriefield camp, winning the final game from the Engineers by a one-sided score. The whole team was composed of Peterborough boys, as follows: Sergt. Cavanah c., Gunner Hardill p., Gunner Clancy 1b., Bombardier A. Hagerman 2b., Lieut. Huycke s.s., Gunner Butcher 3b., Gunner Taylor, Lieut. Hamilton and Sergt. Knapman outfield.

Two members of the local overseas company were arrested by the police last night at the request of the military authorities and spent the night in the police station. This morning they were remanded for a week, and their case will be dealt with by the military authorities. Out of the whole company there two men, both of whom come from outside points, are the only ones who have caused any trouble. They were both under the influence of liquor last night and one had taken off his uniform and left it in a hotel, donning civilian garb. These men are not to be allowed to spoil the splendid record set up by the local company.

Fifteen members of the Peterborough company had to drill in civilian garb this morning. The supply of uniforms is exhausted, but a new stock is expected at once.

The band and physical drill squad of the local battalion leave for Keene on the 8.10 train to-morrow morning.

The company and band will parade at the armouries to-night at 7.15 in honour of the overseas draft of the 33rd Battery.

Innoculation was the order of the day for the new recruits this morning. Practically the entire company with the exception of a few of the bandsmen have now received the first innoculation and some will soon get the second dose of the serum.

The Peterborough Overseas Band has now a strength of 26 men and several other musicians are expected to join this week.

Peterborough citizens generally will be interested in learning that some of the members of the 39th Battalion are already in the trenches. Lance Corp. Clayton Martin and Pte. Albert V. Cutt of Peterborough, and Pte. Wilfrid Hull of Lakefield, were among the draft from the signallers of the 39th Battalion chosen to go to the front to join the 13th Montreal Battalion of the 1st contingent. The 13th is a kilted regiment and Mr. Frank Wise of Peterborough has received a post card from his son with the 39th, showing a picture of the draft clad in Highland costume.

Lieut.-Col. Walker is taking steps to have Peterborough recognized as a military centre by the railways, so that soldiers leaving Peterborough may receive the reduced rate that is given on tickets from Kingston and othr military centres.

A Red Letter Day.

Yesterday was the banner day for some time in recruiting at the local armouries, eighteen recruits passing the medical examination. Of these all but one was for the Peterborough battalion, the other, H. J. Sparro, 464 Bonacord street, going to the 2nd Canadian Pioneer Battalion, which is being organized in Toronto. Of the eighteen successful recruits, ten belonged to Peterborough and the balance were contributed by Port Hope and Campbellford. Five recruits from Port Hope, most of them well known in hockey circles, came up yesterday afternoon and all five were successful in passing the doctor. Fourteen of the squad are Canadian born and of the other four, Bandsman Miller has been a resident of Peterborough for many years, while Geo. East, who enlisted yesterday, has been a member of the 57th Bugle Band for the past nine years. Yesterday's list was as follows:

Dugald Campbell, Campbellford.
A. T. Post, Oak Lake, Ont.
Elmer Brown, 577 Weller street.
Jos. Foley, 197 Rink street.
Wm. Simmons, North Monaghan.
Geo. East, 230 Rubidge street (Bugle Band.)
H. Wood, 477 Bolivar street (Band.)
Reg. McCulloch, Campbellford.
Leo. Burt, Port Hope.
Jack Tutton, Port Hope.
Stanley J. Stabler, Port Hope.
Harold V. Fox, Port Hope.
Clarence R. Clark, Port Hope.
Albert Parbery, 69 Hunter street.
John Miller, 548 Harvey street.
John W. Simmons, 184 Dublin street.
Earl Francis, 495 Bolivar street.
Harry James Spargo, 464 Bonacord street (Pioneer Battalion.)

The record for the last two recruiting days at the armouries has been twenty-seven men. Of these thirteen were from the city and fourteen from outend points.

The percentage of Canadian born in the local battalion is steadily on the increase. Two thirds of the recruits in the past couple of weeks were born in Canada. Of the twenty-seven accepted Saturday and yesterday eighteen were born in Canada and nine in the British Isles.

In addition to the new recruits passed yesterday, a number who had been examined some days ago reported for duty.

Capt. Watt, acting adjutant, and Bandmaster Hughes, are in Toronto to-day purchasing the drums for the Peterborough Overseas Band.

The number of pairs of brothers in the Peterborough battalion has increased to nine. Pte. Ken and Elmer Brown and Ptes. Wm. and John W. Simmons are the latest family groups. The latter, both of whom joined yesterday, are brothers of Gunner E. Simmons of the 4th Battery, 1st Canadian contingent.

Sergt. Jack Knowles had charge of No. 1 platoon yesterday in the absence on leave of Sergt. Sam Calladine.

The Overseas Band and physical drill squad of the Peterborough battalion will visit the Keene Fair tomorrow and take part in the programme. They will also go to the Norwood Fair next week. The presence of the band and drill squad is regarded as one of the best possible recruiting mediums.

Several well known Y.M.C.A. boys have enlisted in the last couple of days in the persons of Ken and Elmer Brown and Arthur Horsfield, all

Getting Ready For New Western Drive

Latest Despatches From the Front Say the Allied Artillery Is Directing a Thunderous Fire on German Positions.

MUCH BOMB FIGHTING

PARIS, Oct. 5.—A thunderous fire of artillery, evidently in preparation for a new infantry onslaught, is reported from the Champagne region in the latest despatches received here to-day.

The cannonading is particularly heavy on the Allied wings where the strongest attacks against the German lines have been directed since the Allied offensive began.

From the La Bassee Canal south to Arras bloody trench fighting with bombs and bayonets has been going on without cessation for three days. The Germans are apparently hammering with the greatest fury against the British positions northwest of Lens, where they have made some slight progress.

On the French front north of Arras, minor works are changing hands with the greatest frequency. Attacks and counter-attacks occur hourly. German detachments, swept out of a trench portion, return to attack with reinforcements and fresh bomb supplies, and win back the lost ground only to lose it again in a new French attack.

The air casualties have been unusually heavy both in the Artois and Champagne regions in the past few days.

$500,000,000 LOAN CLOSED

NEW YORK, Oct. 5.—Without any formal fuss or flurry the syndicate books for the half-billion-dollar Anglo-French loan was closed at ten o'clock to-day. That the loan is heavily oversubscribed was stated at the offices of J. P. Morgan and Co., but just how much over subscription will amount to is not estimated. There was a wild rush of late applications just before the books closed.

LOCAL TEMPERANCE PEOPLE FAVOUR THE 7 O'CLOCK CLOSING

At a Meeting Held Last Night a Resolution Was Passed Endorsing Recommendation of Ontario License Commissioners

WANT MORE RESTRICTIONS

The temperance workers of Peterborough are strongly in favour of the reported recommendations of the Ontario Board of License Commissioners to close all bars in the Province at 7 o'clock during the continuance of the war. A representative meeting of temperance workers was held last evening in the Sunday School hall of the Murray Street Baptist Church. It was considered that this proposal was of great importance and that as efforts would undoubtedly be made to prevent the government endorsing such a measure that action should be taken immediately to show the approval of the general public of the reported suggestions. It was decided therefore, to write not only to the Board of License Commissioners, but to Premier Hearst, as well. The following resolution was carried unanimously:

"Whereas it has been reported to the public press that the Ontario Board of License Commissioners have recommended to the government that all bars in the Province shall be closed at 7 o'clock during the continuance of the war.

"And whereas it is believed that such action would be in the best interests of the citizens of the Province at large by conserving the manhood and resources of the Province in this period of the country's peril.

"And whereas the effects of total prohibition have already proved wonderfully efficacious in improving the general condition of the people of Russia as well as beneficial in France and in those portions of Great Britain where restrictions have been enforced.

"And whereas prohibition is already being attended with great success in Saskatchewan.

"And whereas the citizens of Peterborough on two occasions have voted by large majorities in favour of the entire abolition of the retail sale of spiritual liquors.

"Be it resolved that this meeting of representative citizens of the City of Peterborough do heartily ap

Have Your Papers Ready Thursday

Citizens of Peterborough are asked to assemble all their old papers and magazines, to be collected on Thursday and Friday of this week by the Ashburnham Patriotic League for the purpose of raising money for Red Cross work. This league, which has done splendidly on behalf of the sick and wounded soldiers, deserves the hearty cooperation of every citizen in their effort to increase their funds. The city has been divided into sections, and people will greatly facilitate matters by having their papers and magazines tied in bundles with strong twine. The entire city will be covered in the two days. The business men of Ashburnham are giving their waggons and automobiles to assist the ladies in the collection. Everyone has his or her share in this great conflict, and here is an opportunity where all can do something to help the wounded soldiers. Get your old papers together and have them ready when the collector calls.

IS INVITED TO WORCESTER

William Sylvester Wilson, Peterborough's well-known violinist, has been asked to go to Worcester, Mass., U.S.A., to join the Worcester Symphony as a violin player and soloist. He will also be one of the String Quartette which is being augurated in connection with the Symphony.

It speaks very highly of his qualification as a violinist being called to fill such a high position as solist in the Worcester Symphony. He leaves the Hamboorg Conservatory of Toronto, where he has been engaged as a violin teacher for the past year.

His friends, both teachers and boys, of the P.C.I., will be pleased to hear of the progress he has made in the musical profession since leaving school.

DON'T FORGET THURSDAY'S BENEFIT FOR THE BAND

The citizens of Peterborough are reminded of the splendid benefit matinee at the Empire Theatre on Thursday afternoon in aid of the band fund of the Peterborough Battalion. Dr Robinson has turned the theatre over to the band, and in addition to a number of fine reels of moving pictures, the Overseas Band will contribute a number of selections, and there will be vocal numbers as well rounding up a first-class programme. All the proceeds will go to the band fund. The admission will be 15c, and the programme will commence at 2.30 o'clock. The Empire should be packed on Thursday afternoon for it is a splendid opportunity to help the band as well as to pass an enjoyable afternoon. The band will parade from the Armouries to the theatre.

"Peterborough Presents Possibilities Unsurpassed."

TUESDAY, OCT. 5, 1915

HON. ARTHUR MEIGHEN.

The promotion of Hon. Mr. Meighen to full cabinet rank as a Privy Councillor, is much more creditable to Sir Robert Borden than some cabinet appointments he has made. Hon. Mr. Meighen is a young man of great ability and effective political industry; and above all he is loyal to British connection and Imperial interests. He will be a cabinet minister Sir Kobert and the country can be proud of, instead of having to apologize for.

IN OPPORTUNE ZEAL.

The Scripture saying, "the zeal of thy house hath eaten me up" is possibly illustrated in our own time. The Bishop of Huron, highly esteemed by Anglicans and all other classes, is obsessed with the idea of a German invasion of Canada. With phophetic zeal, he has foretold the destruction of Nineveh—the invasion of Canada; and now he seems to be inviting the hyphenated element in the United States to gobble Canada up. The good bishop's zeal has not eaten anything else, but his zeal threatens to lead to what he fears. He has been publishing in Buffalo newspapers the fears he recently expressed in Canada. His zeal may bring about what he really dreads. His harping upon the subject in United States papers will suggest and foster ideas of the invasion he fears, that might not have been otherwise suggested. If his writings show that Canada is in a blue funk over the danger of a German invasion, those who might undertake it will be encouraged by the prospects of success to make it. This is a good time to let sleeping dogs lie. German conspiracy against British atd Canadian interests is active enough now among the Hun element of the United States, without inviting new forms, and fostering the idea of its possibilities of success. The censorship is established and maintained in order to keep from the enemy information that may encourage him to attack, and help him in succeeding. The censor should have a heart-to-heart tald with the bishop, who, of course, like the good man he is, means well; but is hardly combining with the harmlessness of the dove, the wisdom of the serpent.

MILITARISM.

A great deal has been said from time to time, in criticism of Great Britain's and Canada's unpreparedness for war. In Britain's case, she was fully and amply prepared for war on the naval side. Events have shown that Britain took the true course in concentrating the most of her energies on the navy, whose splendid preparedness has saved the situation and placed her in a much more advantageous position than if she had divided her energies, and made her army and its equipment greater at the expense of her navy—if she had made her navy only as effective as the Germany navy. In that event Britain would have been lost, for her preeminent navy has counted for more than Germany's great, but inferior navy, and her immense military establishment. Germany's great armies, and the accumulated military strength of forty years of preparation have been neutralized by Britain's navy. Great Britain has "banked" upon her sea power, and has done well. She has by years and years of commercial exploitation of her sea power, accumulated inexhaustible sources of wealth, that stand her in better stead than immense military preparation that would have exhausted her financial resources and weakened her financial capacity by the withdrawal of her people from the arts of productive peace. As regards Canada, we were unlike Great Britain unprepared in naval preparation; but we had been preparing for what we are doing now by developing our national and industrial resources, and spending our national means to lay the foundations of a nation. We are fighting the curse of militarism, and we could not have done so consistently if we had for, say, forty years past been committing the same crime. Money spent on militarism is doubly wasted. It becomes useless to attain its ends and realize the mad mankind - hurting ambitions that create it, and paralyzes industrial effort, results of production and national development. Hon. W. T. White, Finance Minister of Canada, is to address the Toronto Board of Trade on Thursday. In reference to this address he sent the following telegram:

> I have an important message to convey to the business and manufacturing interests of Canada.

This forecasts that his address will tell of what the manufacturing industries of Canada are doing towards helping the Allied forces in the war against German militarism. We have spent many years building our industrial organization, that comes into effective play now that it is needed. The call upon its resources now will be sharp and short, and will with other things involve great sacrifices and great burdens, but nothing comparable to the productive industrial paralysis and loss in true and profitable development, we should have suffered, if we had devoted our resources to the demands of military preparation and the call of the militaristic spirit.

BRITAIN'S POLICY JUSTIFIABLE.

Britain's commercial policy, under the compulsion of self-preservation and in the interests of the cause in which she is so extensively allied, does not meet the approval of some commercially-minded citizens of the United States. These persons see only the side of Britain's efforts to keep American manufactures from countries with which Britain is at war. There are larger considerations, and these the Chicago Tribune, uses as justification for Britain's policy. It says:

> Reasonable Americans, not inflamed by foreign partisanship, will recognize that England in her present situation must do all that she can, not only to embarrass her present foes, but to retard her future rivals. Her statesmanship is quite capable of considering the difficulties she is now involved in without forgetting those which lie far ahead, and her policy is not only to fight a military warfare, but also an economic warfare. Her statesmen have made no concealment of their intention to preserve and, if possible, enlarge her place in the world markets. British industries even now are straining their energies, and British commerce, except for necessary losses, like that of the German and Austrian trade, has grown during the war. We hear reports of a customs union among the Entente Allies, and the more thorough and compresensive our observation becomes the more we shall be struck by the acumen and foresight of British Imperial commercial policy.
> If the United States critics of Britain's necessary trade restriction policy will only think ahead a little, they will not only see that Britain's Imperial commercial policy is amply justified, but that it will really ultimately redound to their own advantage. Britain is not only fighting for the world enjoyment of human liberty, but for all the incidental conditions that make for the good of the social and commercial intercourse of the civilized nations of the world. To reach these ends she is not sparing herself, and if her policy incidentally affects the interests of others to temporary disadvantage, they in the long run stand to benefit, as Britain will do from the tremendous sacrifices she is making.

Voice of The People

To the Editor of The Examiner.

Dear Sir, I notice a few inaccuracies in the brief report which you published last night of the service in St. Paul's Church Sabbath morning which I should like to correct. There are times when a minister may have some plain things to say to his people and last Sunday was one of those occasions in St. Paul's. I would not object, nor would the congregation, to the publication of anything I said if it had been given correctly. I was making an earnest plea for increased giving towards the cause of Home and Foreign Missions. I quoted some statistics as to what the Presbyterian Church in Canada was proposing to do for 1916, what she is now doing, and what, in view of the need, she might well attempt. In your report figures are quoted as applying to St. Paul's, which I quoted as applying to the Presbyterian Church as a whole. Your report says that the average missionary contribution of St. Paul's Church is 5 cents per week.

As a matter of fact we give 13 cents per week per member. Through our Missionary envelopes we contributed $5,062.00, last year. In addition to this our Women's Missionary Societies and Sunday School subscribed $1,963.00 or a grand total of $7,025.00.

When I quoted the amount given for stipend I did so to show that we had all the more to give to Missions, and thus make up for such congregations as Springville and other country charges where they had to contribute to stipend. Springville giving $7.00 per member as against St. Paul's $2.50.

The reference to the overdraft was not in my sermon at all. It was a notice from the Board of Managers, which I was asked to read.

I may say that last year St. Paul's gave far hey nd any other congregation in the Presbytery per member for Missionary purposes. The reason why I urged increased liberality was because the Presbytery, knowing our willingness and ability, are asking us to raise for 1916 the sum of $7,500.00, or $2,500.00 in advance of last year. The vast majority of our people are giving to the point of sacrifice. The plain speaking in which I indulged was intended for those who are not doing their fair share in the Church's work. But there are many such in all our Churches.

ROBERT POGUE.

To the Editor of The Examiner.

Sir,—Having seen the cartoons in our evening paper on Saturday nights I really think it is time some of us out-of-town dealers just had a word to say. Now let me say if we can get goods here at the same price as we do out of town, with the freight on top of that, we sure would be pleased to patronize our own town, and as for getting the mail order habit, well, that's a habit that pays a working man when we have to face high prices. Why, if a person can send out of town for about five dollars' worth of goods and save just on 75 cents, after paying 38 cents for freight, is it not justice for a working man to study those cents, and I cannot see it is any more disgrace than to have to walk our town streets and see the out-of-town contractors' sign-boards displayed outside our newly-erected stores and houses, when local contractors could be patronized.

Now at our local tradespeople wish to do away with the mail order habit which has got such root here, why don't they set a good example and study their own labouring classes.

Thanking you, Mr. Editor, for this valuable little space, I remain

Yours truly,
A-Bon-Droit.

To the Editor of The Examiner.

Dear Sir,—We hear the question asked every day what will happen when the war is over. There will be the making of a new nation in Canada. When foreigners flock into our country, what impression will the stranger get coming into this country? As a newcomer to this city of a couple years' standing, I give my impression. I find that the phrase "cleanliness is next to godliness" is reversed. The housewife, who is unable, through weakness, to go to Church Sunday morning, I find, is always able to have her washing out bright and early Monday morning, and that quality that charms us in the story of Southern life. Courteousness and hospitality are unknown quantities; even the district nurse who comes on "Friday" might before bath night, urged on by some spinster maid, insists on the poor mother being so particular to keep her children washed or better clad—"Maidens' bairns are always well cared for"—neglects this charitable duty of consideration for her neighbour. When I see the coarseness with which American literature is read in our library I wonder some of their virtues are not copied. We always read of the graciousness of the Southern Nation; here meet one of ours on the street they look at your feet first and eye you up to see if you are clean or well dressed; if not up to their standard you are not worthy of notice. Cleanliness is a very laudable virtue, but it should proceed from an inate desire for a high ideal in everything, and with such educational advantages as this city affords there should be a higher standard of character in our rising generation than the mere ornament of outward show.

Yours truly,
"CITIZEN."

EFFECT OF BALKAN SITUATION UPON GERMANY'S PROSPECTS

While all that has happened since the present war began contributes to discourage forecast and silence prophecy, there are still patent signs that the third great crisis of the world war is at hand, if it has not already been reached.

The first crisis came with a suddenness that can hardly have been equal since the Waterloo campaign. Out of the silence of two weeks in Allied bulletins the vast German horde suddenly emerged almost within sight of the walls of Paris. German triumph, Teutonic "world empire" as Bernhardi had outlined it, suddenly seemed inevitable and immediate. The imagination, if not the spirit, of the civilized world, was suddenly captured by German might.

The first crisis ended with the battle of the Marne. After that tremendous conflict the world began to readjust itself to a war, not a triumphal Teutonic avalanche. And after the German failure it was the Russian campaign that held the world audience. Day by day this campaign mounted until after the fall of Przemysl the huge Slav host climbed to the crests of the Carpathians and the collapse of Austria seemed within sight. The German victory of the Dunajec ended the second crisis. Neither France nor Austria was destined to collapse under a first assault.

Now, from April to the end of September we have been witnessing one more stupendous campaign. Upon Russia blow after blow has been rained. Her armies that stood at the Carpathians are now behind the Dwina and approaching the Beresina and the Dnieper. For weeks Germany has asserted, Allied capitals have denied with obvious misgivings, the approach of Russian collapse. Russia, Berlin told us, after the Dunajec, after the evacuation of Warsaw, in the retreat from Vilna, was nearing the end of her resources.

Russia, out, a victorious promenade of the Central Powers to the Golden Horn, the reduction of Serbia to the estate of a second Belgium, the enlistment of Bulgaria, the relief of the Turks at Gallipoli, new threats to Suez and even India, these were possibilities, Germany proclaimed. But all predicted upon the elimination of Russia.

Yet reading the bulletins that now come from the east there is sound reason to believe that Russia is far from out. From Riva to Rumania she is on the offensive. Once more Austrian armies have gone down before her. The redoubtable Mackensen has been baffled. The rains are beginning and the decision, despite the marvellous victories, the enormous conquests, is still beyond the grasps of the Teuton.

By contrast there is breaking out in the west a stupendous new battle. For six months the western campaign, save for a single operation about Arras, has been at a standstill. But in those six months every factory in France and in England has been making ammunition. Half a million British troops have been equipped and sent to the firing line; another half a million are ready to go. Three million troops, after a summer of rest and training, are pounding at the German line in Flanders and France.

What is Germany to do? She has spent a million, perhaps a million and a half, of Austrian and German lives in the eastern drive. To recall corps from the east now is to insure safety in the west, but it is to give Russia months to reorganize. Napoleon found the same difficulty fighting on two fronts. He could crush the Anglo-Spanish forces, but before the conquest was complete marshals and armies must be hurried to the east, from the Ebro to the Oder.

A respite for Russia now means a new Russian offensive in the spring. But to turn east again in the spring means to invite new western offensives. The whole progress of the war has proved that Germany can attack only one front. But so large have been her losses that there are many military observers who believe that by spring she will lack numbers for a grand offensive in the east.

At the full tide of her success, at a time when the Kaiser's eminence may well recall that of Napoleon in 1810, there is denied to the German Emperor all hope of the one prime essential, and that is peace. He set out to crush France and failed. He was forced to turn against Russia, and while he was fighting Russia France recovered. Britain began to come up and Italy enlisted. His victories have been magnificent, but utterly indecisive. He has advanced, not conquered; his foes are driven but not crushed, and new armies come with each month.

What will this mean to the German people? The European population of the states now fighting them is 360,000,000 to their 120,000,000, and behind the colonies are coming up with new forces of every colour. The seas remain closed. Germany is killing Russians, French and British, but Russians, French and British are killing Germans. One nation is bearing the brunt of a battle with three, and after fourteen months there is no sign of a break in the ranks of the enemies.

It is idle to venture to predict that the new allied operation in the west is more than a local operation. Its maximum of success may have been attained. But at the close of a summer hardly equaled in the history of any nation, after victories of enduring grandeur, Germany is now being attacked on all fronts and her stupendous losses have brought her no nearer ultimate victory.

The moral effect upon Germany of the new crisis can hardly be exaggerated. The Kaiser promised her victory and peace last October. Peace and the conquest of Russia were assured this autumn. But there is no peace. This much French, British and Russian attacks made plain today inside as well as outside Germany.

Will the time come, is it coming now, when the German people will perceive that victory is impossible?

Will the time come, is it coming military chiefs do that conquests without peace, campaigns without decision, sacrifices without complete attainment, are all that can result from more months and years of war? Perceiving this, the French people abandoned Napoleon at last and he fell. His empire was buried in Russia; his sceptre was lost in the first great defeat at Leipsic.

Germany has had no Moscow and no Leipsic. Perhaps these lie far in the future; but who can fail to perceive that the present is one of the gravest crises in the history of this war? Once more Germany has staked all on a turn, and the turn has not come. She has men, military and economic resources, great generals and magnificent armies, but in the face of incalculable losses and indecisive results she faces the old question—is decisive victory possible.—New York Tribune.

Death of Robertson Macaulay

Mr. Robertson Macaulay, president of the Sun Life Assurance Company, well known as the dean of life assurance in Canada, died at his residence, 4010 Avenue Road, Westmount, on Monday.

The late Mr. Macaulay was born at Fraserburgh, Buchan, Scotland, January, 1833. He came to Canada in 1854. For sixteen years he was accountant to the Canada Life Assurance Company, and then secretary of the Mutual Life Assurance Company at Hamilton, Ont. He became secretary of the Sun Life Assurance Company in Montreal in 1874, manager in 1876, managing director 1897, and president in 1880. He was succeeded as manager by his son, Mr. T. B. Macaulay in 1906. When Mr. Macaulay became associated with the Sun Life Company it was in its fourth year and its agency staff comprised but four members, and its assets were $130,000. Under his guidance the company had rapid development in the Dominion, where it now has assets totalling over $70,000,000. Mr. Macaulay also reached outside of Canada for business, being the first Canadian life assurance man to do this, starting in 1878. In the foreign field he achieved splendid success, extending the operations of the company to many distant parts of the globe, and making it an important factor in the life assurance world. A writer recently said of Mr. Macaulay: "His career has been distinguished by earnestness of purpose, full realization of responsibility." —Monetary Times.

Weighing Words.

An Advertising Expert says, "The man who weighs his words, says what he means and no more, is the one who gets a reputation for solidity in his community. Advertisers should remember this. Exaggeration is futile—it does not convince. Aside from the morality of the matter, it does not pay to insult the intelligence or stretch the credulity of your public. Get a reputation for truthful advertising, and people will go a long way out of their road to do business with you."

Annual Road Races of Collegiate Institute Held Yesterday

The annual senior and junior road races of the Peterborough Collegiate Institute were held yesterday afternoon, with a good field of starters in each event and a new record set up in the junior contest.

The senior race was won by W. Read, with H. Copp second and H. Austin third, the winner covering the distance in 21 minutes and 35 seconds. The course was from the Collegiate Institute along McDonnel Street, as far as the Bonner-Worth Company, then across the fields to Jackson Park, through the Park to Smith Street and then return via Smith, Water and McDonnel Streets to the Collegiate. The runners covered the distance in good style.

The juniors started at Jackson Park and the course was through the Park around by the artificial lake to Smith Street, east on Smith Street to Water street, south on Water Street to McDonnel Street and then west to the Collegiate. S. Flowers was first home doing the distance in 14.10, and finishing well. A. McLeod was second, and K. Kirn finished third.

The annual field day of the Collegiate Institute will be held on Friday afternoon at Riverside Park, when the usual interesting programme of sports will be run off. The jumping contests will take place to-morrow afternoon.

COLIN BELL AND GUNBOAT SMITH

Will Come Together on Wednesday Night—Willard Is Ready For Another Bout

MONTREAL, Oct. 5.—Colin Bell, Australia's heavyweight champion, who many fight critics proclaim to be the best white heavyweight now in the boxing game, while all the scribes of Australia hail him as the greatest white heavy who ever wore a boxing glove, is here to wind up training for his scheduled bout with Gunboat Smith, the conqueror of Jess Willard on Wednesday night at Sohmer Park.

Bell's one ambition is to meet Willard in a match for the world's championship, and the New York representative of the New Orlean Athletic Club, of which Tommy Burns, the former champion, is manager and matchmaker has already promised Bell that if he defeats Smith, who is the only white man to shade Willard, he will give him the first match Willard fights in the defence of the title.

Bell, who was the champion all-around athlete of Australia, as well as the boxing champion of that country, did what no other white man ever attempted to do, and that was to take on all the great coloured fighters as well as the white men of his own country. He has been an ideal champion in Australia, and the two great fights in which he defeated Joe Jeannette and Sam Langford, still stand in the mind of the fight fans of Australia.

Willard is Ready.

Oklahoma City, October 4.—Jess Willard, last night announced that his first fight to defend the title of world's champion heavyweight pugilist which he won from Jack Johnston, probably will take place in New Orleans in March, the challenger to be the "logical contender" for the title, selected by the sporting writers of the country. He said he would accept the offer of the New Orleans promoters for a 20-round math there during Mardi Gras.

Portraits of Hon. Senator Cox and Sir Sam Hughes Hung in Prominent Positions—Other Council Items

Mayor Butler drew the attention of the Council last night to a portrait of the late Senator Hon. Geo. A. Cox, presented by his son, Mr. Herbert C. Cox. His Worship stated that the late Senator was one of the city's ex-Mayors, and had been one of Peterborough's foremost citizens. It was the intention of Mr. W. H. Moore, of the city trust commission, to secure pictures of the past Mayors of Peterborough, beginning with the first Mayor, Thomas Benson. Mayor Butler also pointed out a new framed photograph of Sir Sam Hughes, presented by Mr. Fred Roy. A vote of thanks to Mr. Cox and Mr. Roy was moved by Ald. Duffus, seconded by Ald. Green.

Red Cross Appeal.

The Mayor read a telegram from Sir John S. Hendrie, Lieutenant-Governor, presenting an appeal from Lord Lansdowne for assistance to the Red Cross. It is intended to make a general collection throughout the country on October 21. This first request from the Motherland is necessitated by the increasing demands on the Red Cross Society.

Mayor Butler and Ald. Green expressed the opinion that local societies have been doing their full share of work. Mayor Butler suggested a public meeting to consider plans to raise money for the Red Cross, and, as an alternative, a contribution from the Council.

Ald. Edgar moved, seconded by Ald. Green, that the matter be taken up in the meantime by the Finance Committee.

Using Market Square.

Ald. Duffus moved, seconded by Ald. Dobbin, that Mayor Butler and Ald. McIntyre interview the City Trust Commission requesting them to build a cement walk on the Market Square. This is proposed to provide accommodation for farmers' waggons, thereby removing the necessity of using Charlotte Street. When the horses and waggons are backed against the outside of the Charlotte Street walk they impede traffic to the G.T.R. yards and to the Empress Hotel.

Want to Get Together.

Ald. Duffus told the Council that the city buildings had been placed on the new Hydro oasis of lighting, now costing $20 a month, instead of $10. The Utilities Commission had advised that if 40 Watt Tungsten lamps were used and fewer lamps, where they could be dispensed with, the monthly bill could be reduced to $10.

Mayor Butler—"I don't think we should pay that much. The Commission should have a "trouble man" to advise ratepayers when they have lighting difficulties or doubts. The whole question of light and power should be taken up with the Commission.

Ald. Green was specifically practical in his proposal that the Mayor call a meeting of the whole Council and asked the Utilities Commission to attend.

"We want to get acquainted with volts, watts, and all those things the ordinary mortal can't figure out."

Mayor Butler said he would act on this suggestion.

Amend Tree By-law.

Ald. Duffus moved, seconded by Ald. Dobbin, that the "tree by-law" be amended, giving the City Engineer the sanction for trimming now held by the Council. In its original form the by-law promised red-tape trouble for the fire alarm system.

Light Into Parnell Street.

Moved by Ald. Edgar, seconded by Ald. Saunders, that the residents on Parnell Street be given ten days' notice for the removal and trimming of trees sufficient to let the sunlight into the street.—Carried.

Over at the Theatre.

A little girl was once taken to the theatre for the first time by her mother. As they were going in the mother asked the man at the pay-box what the price of admission was. He replied: "A shilling in the pit, sixpence in the gallery. Programmes one penny each." The little girl, hearing this, exclaimed: "Oh, ma, we'll sit in the programmes!"

class leaders in the Y.M.C.A. gymnasium.

The local company practised company drill for the first time yesterday afternoon in charge of Capt. J. R. Munro, and with three platoons in line. The recruits class drilled inside the armouries.

A fatigue squad from the local battalion will be detailed off to prepare Brock street rink for Friday night's big concert, when the new instruments will be presented to the Peterborough Band.

The band added two members to its strength yesterday, Bandsman H. Wood of the 57th, joining yesterday morning, while Bandsman John Miller passed last night. The latter, who is an uncle of Sergt. Major Miller, is a veteran bandsman and a splendid cornet payer.

Pte. Tom Smith was transferred today from No. 1 platoon into the band.

The Peterborough battalion will have a first-class orchestra as well as a splendid band. There is some fine orchestral talent among the bandsmen, and it will be utilized by the formation of a battalion orchestra, which will be heard at some of the entertainments during the winter.

Three Peterborough men have passed the medical examination here and will go to Toronto in a day or two to join the 2nd Pioneer Battalion. They are A. Guerin, 101 Simcoe street, H. J. Spargo, Bonacord street, and M. Cook of the Public Utilities Commission staff.

Invalided Home.

Major Eastwood, A.M.C., has received word from the A.D.M.S., Kingston, that Pte. Wm. E. Morgan, a Peterborough member of the 2nd Battalion, who was wounded at St. Julien, has been invalided home, and the letter speaks as if he were already here. Pte. Morgan was at the time of enlistment employed at the Peterborough Lock Works and had been a corporal in No. 5 Company of the 57th Regiment. He had been a resident of Peterborough for four or five years before war broke out, coming here from Newport, Wales, where his parents reside. So far as is known to the military authorities here, Pte. Morgan has not yet reached Peterborough. He boarded at 212 Aylmer street. Pte. Arthur Phippa of Peterborough, also wounded at St. Julien, is expected home shortly.

To-night's farewell parade to the boys of the 33rd Battery will be the biggest assembly of khaki clad men that has been seen together in Peterborough since the war broke out. There will be 200 infantrymen in line with the battery men.

Present indications point to a complete company being enrolled in Peterborough before the end of the week, an achievement that is entirely satisfactory. To raise a compelte infantry company, practically a complete brass band the nucleus of a bugle band, two-thirds of a brass band for the 59th Battalion, over half a battery of artillery, a platoon of infantry for the 59th Battalion, more than a troop of Mounted men for the 8th C.M.R., and detachments for the Mechanical Transport Section, and the Pioneer Battalion, all in nine weeks is, to use the vernacular, "going some." Over 400 men have enlisted in Peterborough since August 1st. We are not going to follow Cobourg's example and claim all these as Peterborough men, but by far the greater part of them are, and nearly all the others came from the districts close by. Peterborough has set the pace for the third division during the past two months. And the Patriotic League say, "We are only starting. Wait until we get steam up."

The big mass meeting on Tuesday night of next week promises to be a rousing session. Hon. Geo. P. Graham will be the chief speaker and his message will be a stirring one.

Mr. Percy Stock has presented the Peterborough boys of the 33rd Battery draft with a fine mascot, in the shape of a splendid Airedale terrior. "Paddy" is a beauty and the battery boys were so proud of their pet that they took up a collection yesterday and bought him a classy blanket inscribed "Overseas Draft 33rd Battery." "Paddy" will be in the parade to-night.

Two paragraphs about Lieut. Lundy in yesterday's Examiner were conflicting and only one of course should have appeared. Lieut. Lundy has been appointed provisional lieutenan in the 3rd Prince of Wales Drazoons, and is taking a qualifying course at Stanley Barracks. He intends to offer his services for overseas service.

Corp. L. McIntosh is in charge of to-day's guard at the armouries.

The men of the local battalion were issued puttees this morning and the "rookies" had their first experience of trying to wind a few yards of khaki cloth around their nether limbs.

Gunner Chas Cook who left here with the 24th Field Battery detachment in the 33rd Battery, is back from Barriefield Camp.

Kerut.-Major Harry Wilford of the 84th Battalion, C. E. F., returned to Niagara Camp this morning after a few days at his home here.

The local overseas company is thoroughly representative of the district. In addition to the Peterborough men there are boys from Lakefield, Apsley, Buckhorn, Millbrook, Norwood, Keene, Campbellford, Port Hope and other places in the ranks.

"Sphlohoshushet" is the name of a private in the 59th Battalion at Barriefield. He had better keep away from the sentries on a dark night or he will be shot before he has time to unravel his name. Imagine how long it would take to call the roll if there was a platoon with names like that.

If there is a good pianist in the ranks of the local battalion he can find a position with the battalion orchestra. Band Corporal Leader can handle the ivories, but his services are required as a violinist.

The Examiner has received a very interesting photograph from Major A. G. Carruthers of Peterborough, who is quartermaster of the 38th Battalion, C.E.F. at Cæsar Hill Camp, Shornclife, England. Major Carruthers says the photograph is sent "just as a reminder from a friend doing his bit." We are all well, fit and strong. I get your papers right along and you cannot imagine how good they are to us here. After I get through them they are devoured by many others. Kind regards to all my friends."

Stock Markets

Market Opinions of New York Houses.

Post and Flagg.—The improvement in general business continues to broaden and is really making itself felt in new lines. Apparently the only logical reason therefore to expect a reaction in the market is the natural desire on the part of a great many operators to take profits after a big rise and the weak technical position which a tremendous expansion in speculative commitments always involves.

Laidlaw & Co.—The furious speculation in the stock market during the past week has exerted a sobering influence in many quarters, especially among the more experienced of Wall Street operators, but it can hardly be said that this deflection from the bull ranks has affected sentiment at large. The great public is in the market—how far observers widely differ.

Jenks, Gwynne & Co.—Believing a two-sided stock market will continue for the present, we think purchases on the dips and taking down of profits on the strong spots seem advisable.

NEW HAVEN EARNINGS.

In its report of earnings for August the New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad Company shows an increase of $507,144 in gross revenues while its net corporate income increased $291,278. For the first two months of the fiscal year the gain in gross was $999,170 and the increase in net corporate income $680,138.

What the New York Papers are Saying.

Wall Street Journal: It is conceded that in the general list realising sales have been absorbed without overtaxing the buying demand and that the market's technical position is improved.

Financial Chronicle: A curb on the stock market ought to be sharply applied now. Banks have it within their power to apply the brakes.

Journal of Commerce: A trend toward the railroad stocks in the stock market operations is noticeable. These have not participated in the same measure as the industrials in the rise that has taken place in the market of late.

Copper exports from Atlantic ports in the week ended September 30, amounted to 5,504 tons, making a total for the month of 14,337 tons, as compared with 19,402 tons in the corresponding period a year ago.

Interest due October 1 on the Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific refunding 4 per cent. bonds and on certain minor issues and equipment coupons was paid Friday.

Time for the deposit of securities of the International Mercantile Marine Company under the reorganization arrangement has been extended until October 11.

GREAT WESTERN REPORT.

Samuel M. Felton Discusses Railroad Rate Situation.

In the annual pamphlet report of the Chicago Great Western Railroad Samuel M. Felton, president of the company, discusses the effect of present railroad rates and the need for advances. In his general remarks to stockholders he says:

"The average net income for the last six years has amounted to $2,248,295. The decisions of the courts have indicated 7 per cent. as a reasonable return on railroad property. If this amount is capitalized at 7 per cent it would mean the value of the road, and its equipment is but $22,728 a mile. A physical valuation of the property, when compiled by the Inter-state Commerce Commission, in accordance with the present law, in all probability will disclose a value of at least double that amount. The forty-one railroads in the Western rate case showed a return at 7 per cent. on but $22,948 per mile in 1914.

"It would seem, therefore, that the efforts of the officers of this company and others in the Western territory to secure increased rates were fully warranted. This situation has been placed before the various commissions and taxing bodies, and yet no substantial relief has been secured."

HEAVY PURCHASES OF STEEL BY RAILROADS.

Heavy orders for railroad equipment last week temporarily diverted attention from war contracts in the steel industry. Rail mills received orders for 234,000 tons of standard and light sections for 1916 shipment, including about 60,000 tons for the Chicago and Northwestern, 130,000 for the New York Central, 10,000 for the Philadelphia and Reading, 10,000 for the Pere Marquette, 4,500 for the Erie and 3,500 for industrial roads.

Car shops took additional orders for 1,200 cars, placed contracts for about 60,000 tons of bars, plates and shapes and are still negotiating for bout 70,000 tons of steel. Locomotive builders took orders for fourteen more engines, including ten for the Atlantic Coast Line. September rail contracts were the largest since January, 1912. Railroad car shortage is acute and 30,000 more cars are under negotiation, including 10,000, it was stated, for the Pennsylvania Railroad system.

Manufacturers of war munitions for Great Britain and France placed orders for about 75,000 tons of steel bars and billets, including 40,000 tons for Eastern delivery and 25,000 tons the Central West. Huge tonnages of steel for projectiles are still under negotiation for 1916 shipment. One contract for two million 3-20 inch shells for Great Britain, calling for 25,000 tons of steel, was closed.

The Steel Corporation interests obtained additional contracts for 25,000 tons of barbed wire and an independent interest took an order for 6,000 tons of 1916 shipment. September steel export sales were the heaviest on record, including 230,000 tons of Bessemer pig iron during the week. Italy is still negotiating for pig iron, as are France, Holland and Russia. Ocean freight rates on all metals were advanced enormously.

Contracts were placed for two lake and two ocean vessels, calling for 14,000 tons of steel. Steel building work called for 15,000 tons of fabricated steel. The Brooklyn Rapid Transit will take bids on October 9 on 63,000 tons of steel for extensions and third tracking of elevated lines.

When additional war orders are placed with the Canadian Car and Foundry Company, following the flotation of the $500,000,000 Anglo French loan, war business on that company's books, it is estimated, will total some $250,000,000.

Much of the business being obtained by the Canadian company is being distributed among American concerns, chief among which are the American Car and Foundry Company and the Safety Car Heating and Lighting Company.

The latest contract to be sublet calls for some 3,000,000 shrapnel and high explosive shells, valued at $55,000,000, it is reported.

Canada is to get all the war orders she can handle, the New York American learns on the highest authority.

RICHARD HALL & SON

YOUNG MAN TOLD HE MUST TAKE OUT LICENSE TO SELL BIBLES IN CITY

Requested That He Be Permitted to Work in the City Without Paying the Stipulated Fee For Peddlers —Ald. Stratton Held That It Would Be Unfair to Booksellers

Mayor Buller had on "the wedding garment" at last night's regular meeting of the Council, either to harmonize with the new furnishings of the Chamber or in anticipation of crowded benches. The word had gone around that temperance workers were considering a request for a Local Option by-law, and His Worship donned his reception frock.

But only the hotelmen appeared, and they were largely represented. There was not, however, one word mention about local option, although the phrase may have been mentioned once or twice. Otherwise, the Mayor's formal appearance added a new note of dignity to the proceedings, which flared up here and there with a few interesting passages.

The only deputation was Mr. K. J. Harrison, a young man of earnest mein and self-possession who, working for the Upper Canada Tract Society, requested that the Transient Traders' By-law be suspended to permit him to work in the city without paying the customary pedlar's license. Mr. Harrison said he had worked for the past six years in the Muskoka and Parry Sound districts, which were poor localities, and as a result had earned practically no money. Recently he had been disposed to Eastern Ontario, with the exception of three counties.

Distributed and Sold.

Mr. Harrison explained that he distributed tracts, Bibles, and religious literature of undenominational character. He had New Testaments which sold as low as four cents, and also distributed tracts free of charge. He was provided with a team and waggon in order that he could call at every home. His work had the endorsation of clergymen, and he said that he intended to call at homes which might otherwise be unprovided with Bibles and religious literature.

Ald. Stratton opposed this requested exception to the by-law. He claimed that the Upper Canada Tract Society received donations intended for the free distribution of Bibles and religious literature. He would not object to Mr. Harrison working in the city on this basis, but to sell Bibles in the city, he claimed, would be unfair to the booksellers, who had complete stocks of them. He believed Mr. Harrison would distribute some literature for nothing, but he would also sell dollar Bibles and would try to sell Family Bibles, which would bring as much as five or six dollars.

Ald. Stratton moved that the request be not granted.

To Ald. Green, Mr. Harrison stated that in the past two years he had worked in Sturgeon Falls, North Bay, Gravenhurst, Orillia, Barrie, Port Hope, Whitby, and other towns.

Mayor Buller stated that he felt with Ald. Stratton that the merchants should be protected. All agreed, he said, that the literature would not do the city any harm.

Ald. Duffus seconded Ald. Stratton's motion.

Ald. McIntyre moved an amendment that the request be left with the Finance Committee. Ald. Langford seconded it.

Mr. Harrison further stated that he received a commission on what he sold, but primarily he was not working for financial profit. If that were his motive, he could have accepted work that gave larger returns. In his first year he did not make expenses, nor had he done so far a number of years. He had both the Protestant Bible and Douay Bible, and his work was entirely undenominational.

Ald. Green favoured request.

Ald. Green moved an amendment to the amendment that Mr. Harrison's request be granted. He was not asking anything unreasonable, nor would he eat into the profits of the booksellers. Mr. Harrison would place Bibles in homes, the members of which might not go to the booksellers to buy them.

Ald Dobbin seconded this amendment.

Ald. Stratton's motion was carried. Those supporting it were Aldermen Stratton, Duffus, Weir, Evans, Edgar and Saunders; those opposing were Aldermen Green, McIntyre, Dobbin, Langford, and Mayor Buller.

Mayor Buller told Mr. Harrison that his request might be taken up later on. The latter said he had not intended to work in Peterborough until three weeks from the present.

WESTERN CROP IS TREMENDOUS

OTTAWA, Oct. 5—With an optimistic view of the labour outlook in the West, Hon. T. W. Crothers has returned from a trip to the Pacific Coast. He attended the Dominion Trades and Labour Congress in Vancouver and inquired into the industrial situation in the principal centres. The harvest, Mr. Crothers pointed out, is a tremendous one and the threshing operations being over a much more lengthy period than usual will do much towards aiding unemployment. The building tradesmen alone are likely to be adversely affected.

The extensive manufacture of shells in the west is greatly benefiting industrial conditions there. Five factories are working at them in Vancouver and others are located at Moose Jaw, Medicine Hat and Winnipeg.

The British commission which has come out here with the object of securing miners for the Old Country mines is expected to enlist a large number in the west, where operations in the coal mining districts are not very active.

The Minister of Labour is greatly impressed with the potentialities of the west and the tremendous crop. In the districts of Southern Alberta and Saskatchewan where there was a complete failure last year, and the Government had to extend aid to the extent of twelve millions, the crop this year goes as high as fifty bushels to the acre.

HARVEST FESTIVAL AT ST. GEORGE'S CHURCH

Fine Sermon by Ven. Archdeacon Warren.—The Church Very Tastefully Decorated

Once more the revolution of years brings around Harvest Thanksgiving services, and the latest one was the service of praise and thanksgiving held last evening at the little Anglican church dedicated to England's Patron Saint, in South Peterborough.

After a lovely October day it was really a pleasant trip down to Braidwood avenue, on which—or rather off which—is located the little church.

On arrival there, one could but notice the prettiness of the appropriate decorations, nor fail to appreciate the great taste displayed. Wheat, oats and barley all had their place; flowers, such as geraniums, dahlias, China asters, morning glory, etc., were to be seen at every turn, while pumpkins, fruit, asparagus-fern and mountain ash berries made an effective enmax; the reredos being supplied with vases of choice flowers.

At eight o'clock the service commenced, consisting of the office of Evensong, according to the Anglican liturgy, and a sermon. The Rev. Jas. Price, the rector of the parish of St. George, intoned the first part of the office, in which the Confession (harmonised) was sung to the Oxford setting, the responses being Tallis' Festal. The proper psalms, were the 65th (sung to Dr. Garret's double chant), and the 150th sung to Purcell's Grand Chant. The special lessons were read by Mr. Claude Spence, who is in charge of the St. Alban's Mission at Browntown, which is an offshoot of St. George's. The second part of the service was intoned by Canon Davidson, Rector of Peterborough.

The choir had been strengthened by willing helpers from St. John's and St. Luke's choirs. At the anthem, Rubric, Simper's Harvest anthem, "While the Earth Remaineth" was well rendered, the bass solo being taken by Mr. Woodrow.

The sermon was preached by the Venerable Archdeacon Warren, of the Diocese of Toronto, who took his text from the first Epistle of St. Paul to the Corinthians, chapter 15:vi and 2. The keynote of the sermon, which was an able, and at the same time simple, exposition of the text, was the declaration of the Gospel which he preached. Archdeacon Warren has a convincing way with him and his words cannot fail to be understood by the most simple minded.

In effect the preacher said that on such an occasion as the present when we were gathered together for a Harvest Thanksgiving service we should use our utmost endeavours to raise both heart and mind in praise and thanks for the many benefits we are constantly receiving. Such Harvest Thanksgiving services were commanded in God's word where special instructions, regarding the Feast of Weeks, were laid down. It is from God's hand we receive all our blessings, notwithstanding our own labour and effort; therefore we should remind ourselves of this fact and enter into thanksgiving.

It is a proper thing to do on a day like this and go a step further by declaring the Gospel he was preaching and remind them of what has been, for it is so easy to forget what religion is, to allow these things to slip from one's mind, therefore is it fitting and proper to be reminded as St. Paul did in his text, taken from a most important chapter, which being so beautiful and comforting had been largely adapted for use in the burial service of the Church of England. We must not forget the religion of Christ is a Gospel of good tidings, for it is a blessing to those who have no other comfort. Only think what would life be without the comfort of the Gospel.

What simple blessings St. Paul thought to be so full of comfort. The first Gospel he speaks of is that Christ died for our sins. Think of the hundreds of thousands of men who have gone forth to die for their country—to die for us! Do not think they have gone for fun or just to be soldiers. Under a light hearted manner is serious thought. Most of them know that they are going to offer up their lives for their nation and liberty. How this must uplift us and enable us to become better; we cannot be content to do mean things when men are dying for us; we cannot be content to be such sinners when so much is being done for us. Hence Christ died for our sins, for since God sent His Son, there is hope for all of us and therefore an incentive to live clean, Godly lives.

The other part of the message is that Christ was buried and rose again. This affects us to this extent, that so far as we can see — apart from the Christian religion —that we are only alive for a short time with no hope—as an animal dies so should we. It is only for a few years we live, why worry how one lives so long as we get the best out of it. But Christ rose from the dead and has revealed to us the immortality we desire and crave for. He was the first fruits of them that slept. And since we have immortal life, so must we be good and pure and unselfish and so be worthy of that immortal life. If we keep this in memory we are saved, but we must keep it well in our memory. It is the power of God unto salvation.

Prior to the collection of the Offertory, Mrs. Ryerson Ritchie, whose talented singing is so well known to many of my readers, sang, as a solo, "Come Unto Me, Ye Weary." Mrs. Ritchie was in fine voice and her work was very much appreciated, since it was a real musical treat.

The following is the list of hymns selected for the occasion: 346, 348, 344, 324, 357.

The service was marked by much enthusiasm, the choir sang well, as did also the congregation. In fact it is difficult to say which showed the greatest zeal, the congregation, evidently, showing, that as laity, they intended to do their full share.

These Festal services will be repeated next Sunday evening at 7 p.m.

ONCE AGAIN THE COUNCIL STRUGGLED WITH THE BY-LAW TO CHANGE STREET NAMES

The Council made another futile attempt last night to pass the thumbworn by-law authorizing the changing of the names of Elm, part of Reid and Park streets, and Princess and Gladstone avenue.

It received the same treatment as on former occasions and after last night's refusal, the R.I.P. stamp will likely be applied to it with its interment. The Elm, Park and Reid street changes were accepted, but the deadlock developed over the proposed change of Princess and Gladstone to Stratton avenue.

Ald. Edgar and Ald. Saunders held out that since Princess was an extension of Gladstone avenue, any change should simply be to call both streets Gladstone avenue. Ald. Edgar pointed out that a largely signed petition to this effect had been received.

Ald. Green stated that the Overend family which had given property for these streets in that city was desirous of having the name Stratton avenue.

Ald. Edgar—They were well paid for the land they gave by the increased value of their land resulting from the opening of the streets.

No Personal Question.

Ald. Saunders asserted that there was nothing personal in his attitude. If a new street were being opened up he would gladly support the name Stratton.

Ald. Langford supported the amendment to the by-law moved by Ald. Edgar and Ald. Saunders, that the name of Princess and Gladstone streets be simply Gladstone avenue.

The amendment was defeated by 8 to 3.

Ald. Langford stated that the only logical thing was to call them Gladstone avenue, since Princess street was but the extension of Gladstone avenue. Both the names Gladstone and Stratton represented Liberals, hence there was no politics in it.

All Or None.

Moved by Mayor Buller, seconded by Ald. Edgar, that the other changes be passed without Princess and Gladstone. Ald. Saunders, Langford and Green supported this. The other six members opposed, and it was defeated.

The entire by-law was then defeated and back it went to nowhere.

Ald. Dobbin made a plea for the name Stratton, saying that Hon. Mr. Stratton had done a service for the city and was worthy of having a street called his name.

Mayor Buller said a few things about business action, laughing stock of the people and that kind of thing, and some one remarked, "next order of business."

prove of the reported recommendations of the Provincial Board of License Commissioners; that we urge the Government to approve of same, and to carry such restrictions into effect at the earliest possible moment, and that we would favour the placing of still further restrictions on the liquor traffic, with the least possible delay, it being the belief of this gathering that Lloyd George was fully justified in declaring it to be one of the greatest enemies of our nation."

The Local Option Situation.

Consideration was given to the proposal to hold a local option campaign next January. It was felt that the world-wide conditions were unusually favourable to the holding of such a campaign, but that it would be well to have a more representative attendance before taking final action. It was decided, therefore, to call another meeting, to be held in the same place next Monday evening (Thanksgiving night) this meeting to be attended by representatives of all the churches and of the polling sub-division workers in the last local option campaign. Members of the Executive urged that new blood should be added to the Executive in order that it might be strengthened in every possible way. The whole situation will be dealt with fully next Monday evening.

Incinerator Ashes Used For Fertilizer "Supposed" To Be Exchanged For Shavings

Would you believe it—the Council dallied again last night with the incinerator question. After toying with it all year and more or less amusing themselves with its management, or probably, mismanagement, it is likely to be passed over to the 1916 Council.

Ald. Duffus asked Ald. McIntyre if any wood was being bought for the fires.

Ald. McIntyre —"We are burning shavings; they cost 35c. a load."

Ald. Duffus—"I don't approve of buying wood. If there is any profit out of the garbage the city should get it and the money turned into the City Treasury. He moved, seconded by Ald. Dobbin, that if the rags and junk refuse cannot be taken from the garbage before being mixed with the other stuff collected, the whole mass should be burned.

Ald. Dobbin—"That's what we have the incinerator for."

Ald. Duffus—"The Sanitary Inspector should be given full authority at the incinerator."

Ald. Edgar—"All you could get out of the refuse at the incinerator would not pay for picking it over."

Ald. McIntyre took exception with this saying he had presented a report showing he could get $30 a week for it.

It must be understood that junk refuse can be picked out more easily by the collectors making their rounds than from the jumbled mass when it is deposited at the memerator. In the latter case most of the stuff of any value has already disappeared.

Ald. Duffus' motion was an amendment to Ald. McIntyre's report from the Property Committee to the particular clause That the chairman and Sanitary Inspector Spence go into the matter of the value of any refuse collected by the garbage collectors and report to the Committee. It was intended that the present mode of collection and disposal be continued until the present contract expires.

The vote on the amendment was a tie and Mayor Buller voted against it saying that he had voted that way in committee, and did not intend to change now.

Ald. Weir asked how the refuse could be valued when the collectors would first pick over the best of it.

Ald. Evans—"What is done with the ashes from the incinerator?"

Ald McIntyre—"It is sold to Mr. Geo. Stevens for fertilizer. It is supposed to give a load of shavings for each load of ashes."

Several aldermen caught at the word "supposed" and wanted to know why the shavings had not been delivered.

Ald. Evans—"That would represent 35c a load. Mr Doyle is willing to pay 50c a load."

On motion of Ald Green, seconded by Ald Saunders, the sale of the ashes was left with the Chairman to sell to the best advantage.

The Committee's report then carried and a report is expected on the value of the refuse at the next meeting.

Ald Duffus remarked that there was practically no system at the incinerator and that the Council was still dallying.

ALD. GREEN OFFERED TO PAY COST OF BONACCORD ST. BRIDGE

If City Would Give Him a Fixed Assessment on His Property in That Vicinity—Waited Until Other Ratepayers Introduced Petition for New Bridge.

ALD. LANGFORD'S POSITION

If the Council would give him a fixed assessment on his property in that neighbourhood, Ald. Green offered the Council last night to build the Bonacord street bridge out of his personal funds.

The debenture by-law for $3,250 was receiving its readings. Ald. Duffus said that he had supported the bridge scheme before on the understanding that the approaches would be filled in without cost to the city. Since then $250.00 had been tacked on as an estimate for this work. It was also proposed to begin the work right away, he continued, and yet the Council had given permission recently for the importation of fifteen workmen. Ald. Duffus included a remark that he did not want to "prevent any ratepayer's property from coming along."

Ald. Green stated that when all the members had spoken he would have something to say.

Mayor Butler explained that the work would not be undertaken until the present operations on the streets were completed.

Ald. Green remarked significantly and with a very deep sheru that he thought he saw the drift of some of his colleagues. "I am interested as a property owner in the building of the Bonacord street bridge. In the past I have not lifted a finger to get it, and not until it had come before the Council in the ordinary way. Citizens in that neighbourhood have been clamoring for it for years. I own property on the west side of the bridge and if the Council would give a fixed assessment at the present valuation for the debenture period of twenty years I would willingly build the bridge myself. The increased value of the property at the end of twenty years would more than pay for the bridge. I have offered land on both side of the bridge for factory sites and my offer is open to-day. In fact to-morrow a man who is looking for a business site intends inspecting my property. I don't want anyone to feel that Green is trying to get the bridge there for his own accommodation. I am willing to pay for it if the Council will give a fixed assessment on what is now a pasture field. But I am not the only person interested. This bridge question has been made a football by Councils for years. The residents up there have petitioned for it, and they have been promised the bridge. I am interested as one of the larger property owners. But I repeat my offer, and if any one opposing it believes he can make capital out of it they are free to make all the capital they see fit.

Ald. Langford's Caution.

The north ward member made a typical reference along the go easy line. "I was opposed to the bridge for reasons outside of the necessity of it. I think we should go carefully in the matter of spending money. The debenture debt is $1,600,000, and that seems to be climbing too high. It is too often said that $3,000 means only a few cents from each taxpayer. But every mickle makes a muckle.

On With Progress.

Mayor Butler intimated that "mickles and muckles" were not being overlooked. The new bridge would provide work for city labourers. The people in that end of the city had waited a long time for the bride. With further delay nothing would be done. His Worship got under way when he advised away with this blue ruin talk. Peterborough had a year of progress in spite of the black clouds overhead. This city is regarded as one of the banner towns of the country, and you here, and every effort toward progress The blue ruin business is played out here, and every egort toward progress should be encouraged. I am proud to live in a progressive city like Peterborough."

The Mayor grew visionary as he expressed the possibility of factories locating in the west end, and concluded with the statement that the bridge should be built now.

Ald. Weir seconded Ald. Duffus' motion. They alone supported it and the bylaw carried.

Ald. Langford did not vote.

Ald. Weir— I opposed that bridge consistently and I want to know what Ald Green means when he talks of others making capital. There is no capital out of it for me.

Case Against Walter Stocker Was Dismissed

Was Charged With Illegally Removing a Number of Signs From Various Locations—A Definition of a "Snipers" Sign

THE EVIDENCE

A case of more than usual interest was heard in this morning's police court when Walter Stocker was charged with having destroyed a number of "snipers" signs. After considerable evidence had been heard the case was dismissed by Magistrate Dumble, who found that the prosecution had failed to show that they had the right to post signs throughout the city, and they had not shown that Mr. Stocker had removed signs other than those which were posted on his own territory. The case was instituted by the E. W. Gillett Company of Toronto, manufacturers of household products. Crown Attorney Hatton appeared for the prosecution and Mr. G. N. Gordon acted for Mr. Stocker. The proceedings were enlivened by a few legal tilts. Mr. Gordon remonstrated with Chief Thompson for permitting one of the witnesses to wander around at his own free will. The Chief resented the insinuation and asked Mr. Gordon if he was suspicious of the actions of the police. Mr. Gordon replied in the affirmative. While this encounter was progressing, Mr. Hatton ceased examining a witness and sat down. Mr. Gordon asked him if he were through and Mr. Hatton replied that he was merely waiting till the fracas was over.

Ancient History.

The first brush was with George Morton, assistant sales manager of the Gillett Company, who attempted to narrate a number of incidents that occurred several years ago. "That may be a nice piece of ancient history for a sales manager to relate, but we are dealing with present day events," observed Mr. Gordon.

Witness said that signs belonging to the Company were nailed on fences, barns, and buildings of various kinds and in various locations. Witness visited the yard of the defendant on Saturday last and found a number of the company's signs that showed signs of having been forcibly removed. He then obtained a search warrant and yesterday afternoon visited the premises of the defendant at 344 Weller street in company with Mr. F. W. Brooker and a couple of constables. A number of metal signs were found, which witness asserted were the property of the E. W. Gillett Company. The signs were recently put up in the city by the Company's advertising representative. Witness said there was a fair sized waggon load of metal signs in Mr. Stocker's yard. Some belonged to the E. W. Gillett Company and some bore the advertising of other companies. Witness knew of two signs that were removed last Saturday from the old mill property on Hunter street at the east bank of the river. Signs were removed in September from a building on Hunter street which is occupied by Condon and Ruth. Witness said that none of the signs were on Mr. Stocker's billboards. According to the witness the E. W. Gillett Company had endeavoured for the past four years to have defendant look after the company's property in Peterborough, but had so far failed.

"Was it a matter of money?" inquired Magistrate Dumble.

"No; Mr. Stocked claims he does not handle "snipers" signs, as he calls them," replied witness.

Cross-examined.

At this juncture Mr. Gordon took the witness in hand and proceeded to interrogate him as to the signs that were placed on the old McAllister mill on Hunter street. Witness did not know whether their representative had secured permission from the Quaker Oats Company to place signs on the old mill property. Witness was also unaware that defendant had exclusive privileges to the advertising space on the said property.

"When were your men in the city putting up signs?" asked Mr. Gordon.

"In the months of July, August and September of this year."

"Do you know of any single instance where your representatives obtained permission to place signs from the owners of the realty?"

"No, not to my absolute knowledge."

Witness said the cartload of signs found in Stocker's yard included expensive signs, some of which were valued as high as six dollars each.

A "Snipers" Sign.

"What is a "sniper's" sign? I must plead ignorance of the word," said Mr. Gordon.

"I never heard of it until I came to Peterborough," replied Mr. Morton.

"A good many people come to Peterborough to learn things," countered counsel for defence.

"I have learned a good many things since I came to Peterborough," replied witness, who added that he understood that the term "sniper" was applied to signs that were placed through some outside firm and by some outside firm and Stocker.

"A sniper's sign is put up by a man who steals space," volunteered the defendant.

Witness would not deny that his men had not placed signs on Mr. Stocker's concessions.

Mr. Hatton asserted it was not a question of defendant removing signs from his own billboards or concessions, but a case of Mr. Stocker taking the signs to his own yard and assuming ownership of them.

Sometimes Obtained Permission.

The next witness called was F. W. Brooker, who confessed to placing signs on a fence belonging to the English Canoe Company and who subsequently removed the signs at the request of Mr. English. Witness said that in a number of cases he had first secured the consent of the owners of the property where the signs were placed. None of these signs had been removed.

Witness inspected a number of defendant's signboards and found that some of the metal signs were used to close up cracks and knotholes on the board. Witness admitted placing the signs on a fence near the McAllister mill within thirty or fifty feet of Mr. Stocker's billboard. Asked as to the probable cost of the Company's advertising, witness said that the cost would probably run one hundred thousand dollars a year. Witness had never experienced difficulty in any other city.

"There is only one Stocker," interposed the Magistrate.

A Brief Apprenticeship.

To Mr. Gordon witness said he had only been engaged in the business since the fifteenth of April last. The first sign that was placed on the building belonging to Ruth and Condon was done so without permission and was subsequently removed. A second sign that was placed with Mr. Condon's permission was allowed to remain. Witness did not know that the old McAllister mill was the property of the Quaker Oats Company and that the advertising privileges were vested in the defendant. He frequently placed signs without permission. He did not know who placed four signs on the fence of the Nicholls Hospital. Ruth and Condon were the only owners that had given witness permission to place signs.

R. J. Bicknell called himself "advertising man" of E. W. Gillett Company. To Mr. Hatton witness said he spent July, August and September decorating the city with metal and fibre signs. Witness could not remember the names of anybody who had given him permission to erect signs outside of the Rapid Tool Company. They always made it a point to obtain permission when they thought it was necessary.

Men Watched Themselves.

Mr. Gordon—"Who put the signs on the fences of Nicholls Hospital and St. Andrew's church, also six on the fence opposite the McAllister mill, which is a concession controlled by Stocker?"

Witness—"I don't know."

"Who watches the men?"

"They watch themselves."

Witness could not say that Stocker had removed any signs other than those placed on his own property. He could not say how many signs were placed in Peterborough.

Mr. John Condon was the next witness called. He testified to having given one of the witnesses permission to place a sign on his building.

A Former Employee.

George E. Foy had a stormy session. Two years ago witness was employed by Stocker, and according to his own testimony, helped defendant to remove a number of signs from various parts of the city. To Mr. Gordon witness said he knew of 9 instances where Mr. Stocker had removed signs from fences over which he had no control.

Asked by Mr. Gordon if he had ever been in trouble, witness replied in the affirmative. He also admitted having tendered an apology for some of his past actions.

"What's that's got to do with the case?" inquired His Worship.

"I merely want to show that this man is a common, ordinary liar," replied Mr. Gordon.

The court declined to allow the examination to continue along the lines taken by Mr. Gordon, who refused to further examine witness.

A number of other witnesses were called, after which Mr. Gordon moved for a dismissal, which was granted.

GERMAN PEEVED AT U.S. BANKERS

BERLIN, Oct. 5.—(Via London.)—George Berhard, the political writer, in the Vossische Zeitung, makes an attack on American banks with German connections which are participating in the Anglo-French war loan.

"It is natural that we will not do business with those firms during this war," he writes. "It is urgently to be wished, however, that after the conclusion of peace these houses with German sounding names shall not be allowed to go crawling around Germany.

"We cannot endure any half-way measures in the future. He who is not for us is against us, and he who in his heart is against us must do business elsewhere than in Germany.

"From these cases we should learn finally that any indications of yielding are regarded as weakness, and only harm us.

THANKSGIVING DAY AT "THE GRAND"

Tom Marks Coming Here With His Kilties

Everybody knows Tom Marks. Nearly everybody knows also that he is one of the best Irish Comedians on the stage to-day. Tom however, has not visited peterboro' for some time, as he has been playing through the Western States and the Canadian North-West for some years and his drawing powers throughout that territory compare only to the proverbial "mustard plaster". This season Mr. Marks and his company are playing nearer home and consequently he is booked to appear at The Grand here on Thanksgiving Day, Monday Oct. 11th, for two performances. For the matinee that roaring comedy, in which Mr. Marks takes the part of "Jerry," will be presented and the evening bill will be the romantic patriotic comedy drama "The Man from Canada". This season Mr. Marks is confining his efforts to these two plays only and is playing only one night stands. Six vaudeville acts are introduced between acts at each performance, so that a continuous performance is assured. In addition to this for an outside feature a Kiltie Band has been added which parades in uniform at noon.

Large Receipts of Fruit in Peterboro'

Mr. W. J. Oke, wholesale fruit dealer, states that about eighteen cars of fruit were shipped into Peterborough during the last two weeks of September. At present, between 8 x and seven cars per week are still being received.

ANNUAL MEETING OF WOMEN'S ART ASSOCIATION YEAR'S REPORT GIVEN

The annual meeting of the Peterborough Branch of the Women's Art Association was held in the Studio at the Public Library on Monday, Oct. 4 at 8 p.m. The officers for the year are as follows:

Hon. Pres.—Mrs. Digman, Toronto.
President—Mrs. V. Eastwood.
1st Vice Pres—Mrs. A. Mowat.
2nd Vice President—Mrs. J. A. Aylmer.
Cor. Secretary—Mrs. Sherwood.
Secretary—Miss A. Bennett.
Treasurer—Miss Hatton.
Archivist—Miss Rush.
Librarian—Miss Jean Harstone.
Hon. Members, representatives—Mrs. Palmer, Mrs. W. R. Morris, Mrs. Magie.

Convenors of Committees: Lecture, Mrs. Aylmer; Exhibition, Miss Hattin; Social, Mrs. McDermid; Musical, Mrs. Gliddon; P. S. medals, Mrs. H. Rush.

The annual report was presented, as follows:

The Women's Art Association, in common with many other organisations, has been passing through a most trying time, owing to the terrible struggle in which our Empire is engaged. Interest in the Association has not been as great as it otherwise would have been; at the same time we feel that the results obtained are in every way satisfactory. Funds to the extent of $82 have been donated to patriotic purposes, and although we are not a patriotic organization in the strict sense of the word we feel that to some extent at least we have assisted the cause.

The Executive Committee have held four meetings with an average attendance of ten members.

The hearty thanks of the Association are extended to Prof. Squair for his most interesting and instructive lecture on "Cathedral Architecture." The slides were particularly interesting, in view of the terrible destruction to some of these wonderful edifices by high explosive shells.

Our thanks are due to Mr. Kenner who gave us a most interesting illustrated talk on Modern Art, on March 15th. The slides were very beautiful and the evening much enjoyed.

The week of April 12th an exhibition of etchings by Miss Dorothy Stevens was held in the Studio, with some splendid oils by Mrs. Robinson. This was the only exhibition we were able to arrange owing to the R.C.A. finding it impossible to send us their usual exhibit.

The date of the annual school competition was left to the Committee, who decided to hold it in the Fall term instead of in the Spring, as in previous years.

"The Studio Magazine" was again subscribed for, for another year.

Mrs. Gliddon, our energetic convenor of the musical committee, arranged five most delightful twilight musicales, which were quite patriotic in character. The Christmas twilight was an exceptional treat and evinced much painstaking effort on the part of those participating. Our hearty thanks are extended to Mrs. Gliddon for her most efficient efforts.

The W. A. A. gave the usual $5.00 prize at the Peterborough Industrial Exhibition, which was won by Miss Maud Hanna. Members of the Society were invited as judges.

The topic taken up by the Reading Club, "The Cathedrals in the War Zone," under Mrs. Mowat's able leadership, proved to be particularly interesting in view of the fact that several of the cathedrals studied have been seriously damaged and partially destroyed.

With an average attendance of eight members we feel that the interest evinced was very encouraging, and the thanks of the Association are due Mrs. Mowat for her untiring efforts, all of which is respectfully submitted.

Mona M. D. Roy,
Secretary A. A.

Is Determined to Marry "Al" Davis

NEW YORK, Oct. 5.—Eugenia Kelly, the twenty-year-old heiress whose Broadway escapades have kept her in the public eye for a long while, declared that she is determined to marry "Al." Davis, despite parental objection. Davis recently brought suit against Miss Kelly's mother for $50,000, alleging that Mrs. Kelly had called him a "love pirate" and a "tango parasite."

"Mr. Davis expects to have his divorce decree in November, and then we are going to get married in New Jersey," said Eugenia. "That means good-bye to Broadway for both of us. We have taken a house at Williston, Long Island, where we are going to live. We are going to raise dogs and horses for a living. Al. is not marrying me for my money, he wants only me."

Mrs. Kelly has announced, through her counsel that she is determined to take steps to "save Eugenia from herself." Davis is nearly forty years old, and was formerly a professional tango teacher in Broadway, where he met Miss Kelly.

At the evening session another interesting and helpful talk was given by Mr. Bartlett on the subject of "Evangelism." The night weavers at the Auburn Woollen Mills went on strike last night demanding a 25 per cent increase in wages. About fifty employees walked out last evening. ALD. EDGAR FATHERS COMMISSION FOR CITY'S GOVERNMENT

Committee Formed to Obtain Material Regarding the Results of This Method Elsewhere

To give the citizens an opportunity of expressing their attitude toward municipal government by commission, Ald. Edgar moved seconded by Ald. Saunders that a by-law be prepared for submission at the January elections. In fathering this idea Ald. Edgar said that many citizens has expressed their approval of it. He believed that the success of the Utilities Commission was an indicator of what might be expected from a commission to handle all the departments of civic business.

Ald. Duffus said he believed the by-law would carry, but personally he had heard of more failures than successes in this method.

Ald. Green remarked that if the by-law carried the city would have to go further and secure special legislation.

Mayor Buller suggested a committee to review the work of city commissions and prepare material to be presented to the Council and the people. The first motion was therefore dropped and it was moved by Ald. Edgar seconded by Ald. Duffus that the proposed committee consist of Aldermen Saunders, Edgar, Dobbin, Duffus and Green.

Chooses Death Beside Wife

DETROIT, Mich., Oct. 5—Mr. and Mrs. Louis Robidoux were burned to death in their home when they were trapped in a room on the second floor by flames that cut off their escape.

"Jump, Ethel, it's your only chance!" shouted Mr. Robidoux, standing with his wife at the head of the rear stairs.

"I can't jump, I'm afraid," replied his wife.

"We will go together, then," remarked Mr. Robidoux, drawing his wife to him and kissing her.

Firemen found their bodies in the ruins. A jump of less than twenty feet would have saved their lives.

YOUR EYES MAY NEED HELP

That Head-ache May be From Eye-Strain

The old and common method of placing lenses before the patients' eyes and letting him decide by asking "Is this better or is this worse" only too often tempts the examiner and worries the patient, giving a dread or fear of inaccuracy, which is generally the case.

Our Method as Specialists enable us to measure the refraction of the eye entirely independent of any answers from the patient. "See Us and See Better"

SNOW IS FALLING ON THE MOUNTAINS

Winter Has Set in in One War Theatre

ROME, Oct. 5—The following official statement was issued from the Italian general headquarters:

"In the higher mountain regions, where snow is thickly falling, there have been small engagements, which ended in our favour, at Lagoscuro Pass (at the head of the Genova Valley), and at Pramosio (in Carnia).

"In the Tolmino section Italian troops repulsed an attack directed against positions recently conquered by us on the heights of Santa Maria."

The following was issued last night:

"Along the entire Isonzo front from Mont Rombon to Carso the enemy yesterday wasted a large amount of heavy gun and rifle ammunition; in certain districts the action was so precipitate that large shells from distant batteries fell on the most advanced Austrian trenches. However, the enemy's infantry made no effort to advance on any part of the front. Only on the slopes of Mont Rombon did enemy detachments try to approach our lines, but they were promptly repulsed by a well-directed fire."

PRESIDENT WILSON PRAYED.

Got Members of Cabinet to Seek God's Evidence.

INDIANAPOLIS, Oct. 5. — How President Wilson went down on his knees and led his Cabinet in prayer at a recent meeting was told here by Bishop William F. Anderson of Cincinnati, at a session of the Indiana Methodist Episcopal conference. A United States Senator told the bishop of the incident. The Senator had heard it from one of the Cabinet members who had prayed with the President.

"When the President arrived at the Cabinet meeting," said Bishop Anderson, "his face wore a solemn look. It was evident that serious affairs of the nation were on his mind. He said to the Cabinet members, 'I don't know whether you men believe in prayer or not. I do. Let us pray and ask the help of God.'

"And right there the President of the United States fell upon his knees and the members of the Cabinet did the same and the President offered a prayer to God. Every minister in the land should every time he offers a prayer take Woodrow Wilson by the hand and lead him into the presence of God and ask that he be given strength to continue to be the great Apostle of Peace among men."

BIRTH.

JOHNSTON—To Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Johnston, North Monaghan, Saturday, Oct. 2nd, a daughter.

EMPLOYEES REMEMBER MEN AT THE WHEEL

"Our experience in probating wills is that it is quite a profitable business for a man to be a chauffeur," said a legal light in discussing some of the bequests that have been made in a number of wills recently probated.

"Faithful service is attributed as the reason for making such handsome bequests as have been noticed recently both with respect to private secretaries and chauffeurs, and in the case of the latter the suggestion was made that the reason might be nothing more than an appreciation of the chauffeur's responsibility in having his employer's life in his hands while driving him or her around in the auto.

The latest chauffeur to benefit in this way is Mr. William Richards, who, according to the will of the late Mrs. E. W. Cox which was recently filed for probate by the National Trust Co., receives $5,000 and a Packard runabout car. In addition to this, Mr. Richards will, for the next year at least, have the pleasure of residing in much more palatial style of house than the present little one-storey home he has been residing in at 92 Yorkville avenue, for he and his wife are moving to the home of the late Mrs. Cox on Isabella street for the purpose of looking after the place. Mr. Richards started to work for the late E. W. Cox fifteen years ago.

Mr. Richards however, is not the only one who has been rewarded by the Cox family. Mr. Ignace Perusin of 95 Bleecker street, was chauffeur for many years for the late Senator Cox, and for his late wife after his death. In her will he was bequeathed the house and lot on Bleecker street and $500. There was legal disputing as to whether the late Mrs. Emily Cox intended to give him $500 outright or 500 a year, but this has been settled with him getting the latter provision.

Chauffeurs, however, are not the only ones to benefit handsomely from the various bequests made by the Cox family. Private secretaries have also proved to be somewhat favored as evidence by the bequest of $50,000 made by Senator Cox to his private secretary, Mr. George Little and the bequest of $10,000 made to Mr. S. F. Hill, by Mrs. E. W. Cox.

He Opened It.

A little girl stood one day before a closed gate. A man passed, and the little girl said to him: "Will you please open this gate for me?" The man did so. Then he said, kindly: "Why, my child couldn't you open the gate for yourself?" "Because," said the little girl, "the paint's not dry yet."

Fresh Trouble in the Balkans

Greek Premier Has Resigned

GREECE WILL NOT SUPPORT THE ALLIES AGAINST BULGARIA

Parliament Supported Venizelo's Policy But King Constantine Forced the Resignation of the Premier and Country is in a Turmoil With a Revolution Threatening---Crown Prince Leaves for Salonika.

LONDON, Oct. 6.—The Allies' hopes have been dealt a severe blow in the Balkans. With Bulgaria about to join the Austro-Germans, both Greece and Rumania seemingly have abandoned Serbia to a combined attack on all sides.

The news of the Greek Premier's resignation has created consternation here. King Constantine apparently has determined definitely not to give aid to his ally Serbia, unless the Bulgarian troops also invade Greek territory.

The sudden upheaval at Athens has completely overshadowed the Russo-Bulgarian situation. The Allies' capitals are now positive that Bulgaria will take her place with the Austro-Germans, and have turned to the more startling developments at the Greek capital.

Athens despatches, closely scanned by the Greek censor, gave only hints of the developments that preceded Premier Venizelos' resignation.

One report said that the Bulgarian Premier assured the Greek Minister at Sofia that Bulgaria would not attack Serbia unless the Austro-Germans cross the Serbian border.

The Greek Crown Prince left Athens with his staff officers last night for Salonika, where 70,000 French troops have disembarked.

No intimation of his intentions reached here, but in view of the sudden change in the policy of the Greek Government the situation at Salonika is causing some apprehension here.

The landing of the French troops was made with the silent consent of the Venizelos Ministry.

Kitchener Knows The Men He Needs

Has Their Names and the Numbers on Their Doors, Labour Men Hear

LONDON, Oct. 5.—The results of the great recruiting rally in England on Saturday are not yet known, but it is generally understood that Lord Kitchener will get the necessary number of men, by one means or another.

"I know how many men I want," he told the Labour leaders. "I know their names and numbers on their doors, and if they don't come I will fetch them. Give me the men and munitions I want, and I guarantee we shall have the war in the hollow of our hands."

DERANGED YOUTH FLEES IN UNION SUIT

JOHNSTOWN, Pa., Oct. 6.—Seized by a sudden mental derangement, the result of an inquiry to his head a year ago, Walter H. Pribek, member of a prominent Westmount family, escaped from the swimming pool of the Y. M. C. A., and, clad only in a union suit, socks and one running shoe, ran two miles through the populated district of the city before he disappeared in the Laurel Hill mountain foothills, being captured five hours later. He is in a serious condition as a result of the experience.

Hundreds joined in the chase for young Pribek, but when they came within earshot of Pribek he would disappear with the speed of a deer. The capture, seven miles from Johnstown, was purely accidental.

Among the searchers was his father, who carried the clothing the son left behind. Exit from the building was made by means of the fire escape while the elder Pribek waited in the office.

Madge—"You shouldn't say he's a confirmed bachelor unless you know." Marjorie—"But I do know; I confirmed him."

One Killed, Four Hurt When Auto Runs Wild

BUFFALO, Oct. 6.—One man was killed, another was seriously injured and three others were slightly hurt, when the automobile in which they were riding [illegible] hill, which is approximately a half mile from the village of Boston, and turned turtle.

Frank Pavlock of 446 Inghan avenue, Lackawanna, was pinned under the car and killed instantly.

Michael Stawski of 448 Inghan avenue, Lackawanna; Frank Peach of 451 Inghan avenue, Lackawanna, and John Dejowek were the other men in the car. They suffered bruises and scratches, but went to their homes.

The men had been hunting in the hills of that vicinity all day and were near the top of the hill, which is steep and dangerous, Pavlock, who was driving the car, tried to apply the brakes. The machine shot down the hill backwards and turned over several times before landing in a ditch.

John Rucker, whose home is near the centre of the hill, and his family witnessed the accident and hurried for aid. Pavlock and Kowek were under the car, while the other three men were thrown clear of it. Medical Examiner Bruce L. D. Cook took charge of the case.

Several days ago Parrott came here to visit old friends after an absence of 40 years. He met Mrs. Riggs, and, in a few hours they were engaged.

After spending a few days here, Mr. and Mrs. Parrott will go to Wichita, where they will live

HAS INVENTED A SUBMARINE DETECTOR

NEW YORK, Oct. 5.—An invention to locate submarines when they are submerged, by Prof. Tissot, of the French Academy of Science, has enabled the French navy to keep submersibles pretty well away from the French coast.

This information was brought here by William Dubilier, an electrical engineer of this city who arrived on the Amtrican liner St. Paul. He went abroad to interest the French Government in a wireless appliance for aeroplanes and was asked to aid in the perfection of a submarine detector.

Mr. Dubilier described the invention as a microphone fitted with what he called a sound filter or set of resonant tubes that act somewhat like tuning forks. The sound of a submarine moving under water is a sort of humming noise. Several of the detectors are placed in the sea at points off shore and they will give the alarm of an undersea craft sometimes seventy-five miles away, Mr. Dubilier said. The location of the submarine is worked out by triangulation.

Mr. Dubilier told how he witnessed the destruction of a submarine that ventured into the harbour at Boulogne. A British troop ship was coming into the harbour and the detectors picked up the sound of the submarine two miles away. A torpedo boat quickly went after her and opened fire as the submersible was coming to the surface.

THIS MINISTER WOULD FIGHT

MONTREAL, Oct. 5.—"If the officials of this church will release me, I will be in the trenches as quick as I can get there, and I won't be there as a chaplain, either."

Thus spoke Rev. Charles A. Williams, pastor of St. James' Methodist Church, Montreal, at a service in his church held under the auspices of the Citizens' Recruiting Association.

The morning service was particularly for the Sunday school, it being Rally Day. In the evening a very large congregation was present to listen to Mr. Smith, and very favourable comments were heard at the close of the service. His singing was much enjoyed. He expects to preach every night during the week except Saturday.

SEEN THROUGH GERMAN EYES

The Munich Post has made another of those astounding discoveries by means of which the German Press as a whole has managed to out-Munchausen Munchausen.

The Government of Canada has adopted a cunning plan to rid itself of a large number of its humbler functionaries, the payment of whose salaries, though they be not excessive, is pressing heavily on the population, who are already taxed out of existence during the serious commercial and economic depression through which the country is now passing.

The authorities have circulated among all Government employees handbills bearing the words: "Your King and Country Need You: We Do Not."

Thus, under the guise of an appeal to their patriotism, these leaflets announce to workers that they are dismissed from the service of their real Motherland, so that they may be forced into the service of stepmother Britain, for whom they have no love, and to whom they owe no allegiance, and into leaving their bones in the improvised graveyards of Flanders. It is a truly British procedure, this driving of men by starvation to fight for a cause that appeals to them about in the same degree as they would to an inhabitant of Patagonia.

"He offers me a platonic affection." "Well, take it. A platonic affection often leads to the real thing."

To Kill Defamers Says Mr. Lindsey

DENVER, Col., Oct. 5.—"If there is no law to protect my reputation against perjured affidavits and criminally libelous statements, I will revert to the methods of the primitive and kill the first man who assails it again," said Juvenile Judge "Ben" B. Lindsey last night. "I am going to get a shotgun and fill him full of lead. It's the only thing left for me to do. I am a law abiding citizen and sworn to uphold the law, but I am entitled to protection, and if I cannot get it from the law I am going to see that I get it otherwise," he exclaimed.

The Juvenile Judge had just been served with a subpoena summoning him for the trial of Frank L. Rose, an evangelist, indicted by the last Grand Jury on a charge of criminal libel. Mr Rose criticised Judge Lindsey.

NO BABIES DIE AT VILLIERS LE DUE

Commenting upon the coming into force of the Early Notification of Births Act, a writer in the London Times says: "It appears to give sufficient powers to enable the local authority to set about the task of reaching the ideal that lies before each worker for the welfare of infancy and motherhood, that ideal being simply a zero infantile mortality rate.

"The mention of such an ideal will perhaps raise a smile of incredulity. But that ideal has already been reached. There is the example of the small French commune of Villiers le Duc, where for ten years together the infantile mortality rate was zero. Not one baby died for ten years, not one child died, every child born in that commune was, at the end of those ten years, 'vivant et vigoreux.' There has been no death of a mother in childbirth. The number are small but the period is long. So that a zero infantile mortality rate is not impossible. Within my own experience I have knowledge of an industrial town of over 100,000 inhabitants where the average of the deaths of babies is five per week, several times for more than one period of a week together—for one period of ten days together—the infant mortality rate of that town was zero. The number in this case was large, but the period of time was, alas! very short. Also within my experience, out of over 100 babies born within a specified time, amongst these hundred babies under a year old, during a continuous period of twelve months, not one of the hundred died; amongst these 100 babies for twelve consecutive months the mortality rate was zero. The means by which the zero infant mortality rate was secured in the commune of Villiers le Duc, are set forth in a report to the French Academy of Medicine, and they are perfectly simple, and, under the new Notification Act, they are perfectly practicable."

In view of Montreal's heavy infantile birth rate, this new English legislation might be worth the study of our civic legislators.

FRENCH ARMY TAILOR MAKES MORE MONEY THAN ANY GENERAL

PARIS, Oct. 5.—Who in the French Army is making the biggest money out of the war? Answer, the regimental master tailor. He draws $1,000 a month extra, merely from the sale of the clippings of regimental cloth.

The case was brought out at a court-martial on an orderly in the service of the regimental tailor.

"Good heavens!" exclaimed the president of the Court.

"Incredible!" ejaculated the Crown prosecutor.

"Why, Gen. Joffre doesn't make that much!" observed another lawyer in the case.

"At this rate," said another lawyer, a lightning calculator, "the 650 master-tailors of the army have pocketed $5,200,000 from the State treasury in the last twelve months."

The orderly was sent to prison for a year. The regimental tailor got off free, as the clippings are a perquisite of his office.

For Sallow, Blotchy, Rough or Greasy Skins

Some skins require constant grooming to keep them from becoming oily, muddy, blotchy or rough, or if such condition has developed to overcome it. In such chronic cases it is particularly inadvisable to keep piling on cosmetics which clog the pores, collect dust and dirt, and "sing the complexion worse than ever. It's a lot more sensible to use ordinary mercolized wax, which literally absorbs a bad complexion. Apply the wax like cold cream, before retiring next morning, in washing it off you'll wash away fine, flour like particles of the unsightly cuticle. Repeat for a week or two and you'll have an entirely new skin—soft, satiny, spotless and beautiful as a child's. One ounce of mercolized wax, procurable at any druggist's, is all you'll need.

If the skin be wrinkled or flabby, here's the best possible remedy: Mix ½ a pint witch hazel and 1 ounce powdered saxolite and use as a face bath. It works like a miracle, yet is entirely harmless.

Blessings may appear under the shape of pains, losses and disappointments, but let him have patience and he will see them in their proper figure.—Addison.

Late in the afternoon I stole far up into the eastern tower to visit my adorable friend Rosemary. We played house together on the nursery floor, and I soon got over my feeling of depression. But even in play I was made to realize that I was not the master of the house. She ruled me with the utmost despotism, but I didn't mind. She permitted me to sip honey from that cunning place in her little neck and managed to call me Unko. My heart grew warm and soft again under the spell of her.

We Played House Together on the Nursery Floor.

The countess watched us at play from her seat by the window. She was strangely still and pensive. I had the feeling that she was watching me all the time and that there was a shadow of anxiety in her lovely eyes. She smiled at our pranks, and yet there was something sad in the smile.

I was young again with Rosemary and full of glee. She took me out of myself. I forgot the three Tituses and with them many of my woes. Here was a cure for the blues—this guy little kiddie of the unspeakable Tarnowsy!

I lay awake for hours that night, but when I finally went to sleep—and heaven knows I needed it—it was with the soporific resolution to put my house rigidly in order the very next day. The Titus family (omitting the countess and Rosemary) was to be favored with an ultimatum from which there could be no appeal. John Bellamy Smart had decided—with Morpheus smoothing out the wrinkles of perplexity—that he would be master in his own house.

My high resolve flattened itself out a little after the sound sleep I had, and I make no doubt I should have wavered sadly in my purpose had not a crisis arisen to shape my courage for me in a rather emphatic way.

Shortly after breakfast Mrs. Titus came downstairs very smartly gowned for the street. She announced that she was going into the town for an hour or two and asked me to have one of the Schmicks ferry her across the river. There was a famous antique shop there—memory of other days—and she wanted to browse awhile in search of brasses and bronzes.

I looked at her aghast. I recognized the crisis, but for a moment was unable to marshal my powers of resistance. Noting my consternation, she calmly assured me that there wouldn't be the least danger of detection, as she was going to be heavily veiled and very cautious.

"My dear Mrs. Titus," I murmured in my dismay, "it isn't to be considered. I am sure you won't persist in this when I tell you that Tarnowsy's agents are sure to see you and"—

She laughed. "Tarnowsy's agents! Why should they be here?"

"They seem to be everywhere."

"I can assure you there is none within fifty miles of Schloss Rothhoefen. Our men are in this city. Four of them preceded me. This morning I had Mr. Bangs telephone to the hotel where the chief operative is staying—in the guise of an American tourist, and he does it very cleverly for an Englishman too—and he assures me that there is absolutely no danger. Even Mr. Bangs is satisfied."

"I am forced to say that I am by no means satisfied that it is a safe or wise thing to do, Mrs. Titus," I said, with more firmness than I thought I possessed.

She raised her delicate eyebrows in a most exasperating, well bred, admonitory way.

"I am quite sure, Mr. Smart, that Dillingham is a perfectly trustworthy detective, and"—

"But why take the slightest risk?"

"It is necessary for me to see Dillingham, that is the long and short of it," she said coldly. "One can't discuss things over a telephone, you know. Mr. Bangs understands. And, by the way, Mr. Smart, I have taken the liberty of calling up the central office of the telephone company to ask if they can run an extension wire to my dressing room. I hope you do not mind."

"Not in the least. I should have thought of it myself."

"You have so much to think of, poor man! And now will you be good enough to have Hawkes order the man to row me across the"—

"I am very sorry, Mrs. Titus," said I firmly, "but I fear I must declare myself. I cannot permit you to go into the town today."

She was thunderstruck. "Are you in earnest?" she cried after searching my face rather intently for a moment.

"Unhappily, yes. Will you let me explain"—

"The idea!" she exclaimed as she drew herself to her full height and withered me with a look of surpassing scorn "Am I to regard myself as a prisoner, Mr. Smart?"

"Oh, I beg of you, Mrs. Titus"— I began miserably.

"Please answer my question."

Her tone cut me like the lash of a whip. My choler rose.

"I do not choose to regard myself as a jailer. My only object in opposing this"—

"I have never known anything so absurd." Two bright red spots appeared in her cheeks. "Your attitude is most extraordinary. However, I shall go to the city this morning, Mr. Smart. Pray give me the credit of having sense enough to— Ah, Collingraft!"

The two sons approached from the breakfast room, where they had been enjoying a 10 o'clock chop. Collingraft, noting his mother's attire, accelerated his speed and was soon beside us.

"Going out, mother?" he inquired, flicking the ash from his cigarette.

"If Mr. Smart will be good enough to withdraw his opposition," she said icily.

He gave me a sharp look. "What's up?"

"Mrs. Titus doesn't seem to realize the risk she runs in"—

"Risk? Do you suppose, Mr. Smart, I would jeopardize my daughter's"—

"What's up?" repeated Collingraft insistently.

"Mr. Smart calmly informs me that I am not to go into the city."

"I don't see that Mr. Smart has anything to say about it," said her son coldly. "If he"— He paused, glaring.

I looked him squarely in the eye. If he had possessed the acumen of a polywog he would have seen that my Dutch was up.

"One moment, Mr. Titus," I said, setting my jaw. "I have this to say about it. You are guests in my house. We are jointly interested in the effort to protect the Countess Tarnowsy. I consider it to be the height of imprudence for any member of your family to venture into the city now or at any time during her stay in this castle. I happen to know that Tarnowsy is having me watched for some purpose or other. I don't think he suspects that the countess is here, but I greatly fear that he believes I am interested in her cause. He suspects me. You have heard of our recent encounter. He knows my position pretty well by this time. Mrs. Titus says that the man Dillingham assures her there is no danger. Well, I can only say that Dillingham is a fool, and I don't purpose having my own safety threatened by"—

"Your safety?" exclaimed he. "I like that! What have you got to be afraid of?"

"You seem to forget that I am harboring a fugitive from justice," I said flatly.

Mrs. Titus gasped. "How dare you"—

"The Countess Tarnowsy is wanted by the authorities for kidnaping, and I think you know the facts quite as well as I do," I went on harshly. "God knows I am doing my best to protect her. I am risking more than you seem to appreciate. If she is found here my position isn't likely to be an enviable one. I am not thinking solely of myself, believe me, but after all I contend that I have a right to assert myself in a crisis that may affect me vitally. I trust you will see my position and act accordingly—with consideration if nothing else."

Mrs. Titus did not take her eyes off mine while I was speaking. There was an expression of utter amazement in them. No one had ever opposed her before in just this way, I gathered. She didn't know what to make of it.

"I fear you exaggerate the extent of your peril, Mr. Smart," she said dryly. "Of course I have no desire to put you in jeopardy, but it seems to me"—

"Leaving me out of the case altogether, don't you think it is a bit unfair to the countess?" I asked in some heat. "She doesn't want to go to jail."

"Jail!" she cried angrily.

"That's no way to speak about"— began Collingraft furiously.

I broke in rashly. "If you please, Mr. Titus, be good enough to keep your temper. I have no desire to appear harsh and arbitrary, but I can see that it is necessary to speak plainly. There isn't anything in the world I will not do to help you and the countess in this unfortunate business, Mrs. Titus. I hope you believe me when I say as much. I am her friend. I want to be yours if you will let me. But I reserve the right to say what shall be and what shall not be done as long as you are under my roof. Just a moment, Mr. Titus! I think we are quite agreed that your sister is to depart from here on the 14th of the month. I am to be her escort, so to speak, for a considerable distance in company with Mr. Bangs. Well, it must be clearly understood that not one of you is to show his or her face outside these walls until after that journey is over. That's plain speaking, isn't it?"

"I shall go where I please, and I'll go to the town today"— roared Collingraft, getting no further for the reason that his mother, seeing that I was desperately in earnest, gave vent to a little cry of alarm and clutched her big son by the shoulder. She begged him to listen to reason.

"Reason!" he gasped.

"If you—or any of you—put a foot outside these walls," I declared, "you will not be allowed to re-enter. That's flat!"

"By cricky!" fell in fervent admiration from the lips of Jasper junior. I glanced at his beaming, astonished face. He positively was grinning. "Good for you! You're a wonder, Mr Smart! By cricky! And you're dead right! We're darn fools!"

"Jasper!" gasped Mrs. Titus.

"Good for you, Jasper!" I cried warmly and took the hand he proffered.

"Collingraft, please take me to my room," murmured the mother. "I—I feel faint. Send for Aline. Ask Mr Bangs to come to me at once."

I bowed stiffly. "I am sorry, Mrs Titus, to have been so harsh, so assertive"—

She held up both hands. "I never was so spoken to in all my life, Mr Smart. I shall not forget it to my dying day."

She walked away from me, her pretty head held high and her chin suspiciously aquiver. Collingraft hastened after her, but not without giving me a stare in which rage and wonder struggled for the mastery.

I ran my hand over my moist brow.

"Geef" said Jasper junior. "You've corked her all right, all right." He followed me into the study, and I couldn't get rid of him for hours.

NEVER MISSED A CHANCE.

The saying that a woman doesn't like to tell her age may be a cruel slander on the sex; but it was true of Mrs. Thomson. She never missed a chance of letting her friends know she was years younger than her husband. "Yes, George is fifty years old," she remarked to a visitor one day, "and there are ten years between us." But the visitor was an elderly spinster with a sour disposition. "Is that so?" she exclaimed, in well assumed surprise. "Now, really, you look quite as young as he does!"

SURGICAL MAGNETS.

In the hospitals of England magnets have been developed that will draw fragments of shrapnel to the surface from a depth in the flesh of even six inches, and steel-jacketed bullets have been drawn out from a depth of more than two inches.

At the Invalids' Hotel in Buffalo, N. Y., are many as wonderful electric machines, high frequency currents, X-ray, violet rays. Then Dr. Pierce has equipped the Sanitarium with every known device to aid the sick and in the Surgical Department every instrument and appliance approved by the modern operator. The permanent cure of rupture is accomplished here without pain and with local anaesthesia. Gravel removed in many cases without pain and the patient can return home cured in a few days.

Dr. R. V. Pierce, nearly half a century ago, devised and used two prescriptions which were almost unfailing. They were made without alcohol or narcotics, extracted from roots and herbs by using pure glycerine. The ingredients are made public.

Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery is a tonic and blood purifier that cures pimples, blotches, sores, humors, eruptions and diseases of the skin.

Nothing stands as high to-day in the estimation of thousands of women as Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription—this is a soothing nervine. For girls about to enter womanhood, and for the days of middle age Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription should always be on hand. In liquid or tablets. Write Dr. Pierce, Invalids' Hotel, Buffalo, N. BOWSER'S CHANGE.

Sudden Access of Good Nature Greatly Alarms His Wife.

SHE FEARS THE WORST.

Week Goes by Without a Kick From the Old Man—Doctor Reassures Mrs. Bowser—All Men, He Says, Occasionally Act That Way.

[Copyright, 1915, by T. C. McClure.]

It was Sunday evening that Mrs. Bowser observed the change in Mr. Bowser. He found two clothespins in the back yard, but he did not come in and charge her with being the most reckless housekeeper in town and talk about the poorhouse.

He discovered that a pane of glass in one of the bay windows was loose, but he did not charge her with having dug out the putty and sold it.

He found the tack hammer lying around with the head off, but he drove in the handle without a word. Mrs. Bowser couldn't make it out and was worried.

Monday.—Mr. Bowser got up and dressed without finding any holes in his socks or jawing around about his collar and tie. The breakfast bacon was fried too hard, but he didn't seem to notice it. When he came home in the evening a policeman called and wanted him to run for mayor at the next campaign, but Mr. Bowser firmly declined. He further absolutely declined to invest in a patent four handled jug that the inventor brought around. He denied to Mrs. Bowser that he had a headache or had been attacked by a new sort of rheumatism. He offered to go into Green's and play poker for a couple of hours, but his conduct was so unusual that Mrs. Bowser made an excuse not to go. He held the cat on his lap all the evening and made no remark when a boy threw a stone and hit the front door.

HE WAS BEATEN TWENTY-EIGHT STRAIGHT GAMES OF EUCHRE.

Tuesday.—Mr. Bowser dressed without ripping off any buttons or doing any cussing. He had put one of his socks in the pocket of his nightshirt on going to bed and had to hunt for it for ten minutes, but he displayed no impatience.

Made no assertions that the world was cold and unselfish and that Mrs. Bowser would be glad to collect his life insurance.

Cook had got up late and in her hurry had mixed the tea and coffee together, but Mr. Bowser drank the compound and never made complaint.

During the evening of that day a man called to sell him a Jersey cow, but he wouldn't even go around into the alley to look at her.

Another man called with an invention to throw cats off the back fence, but his reception was so chilling that the cats rejoiced.

Mrs. Bowser said that some furnace coal must be ordered at once and then stood by for an outbreak, but none followed.

Wednesday.—Mr. Bowser was awakened half an hour ahead of his usual time by a row between two milkmen, but he did not blame Mrs. Bowser for it. On the contrary, he got up and looked out of the window and really enjoyed the scrap. Some change had fallen out of his pantaloons, but he didn't charge Mrs. Bowser with having tried to rob him during the night.

Turns Down a Good Thing.

When he reached home that evening he found a man at the gate who wanted to sell him a cannon that would shoot twenty-four miles, but he turned him down with a smile and wouldn't even invest at half price.

On the front steps was a second man who had a fire escape that could also be used as a spare bed in case company arrived, and he wanted to sell a half interest. He was waved aside.

In the hall sat a man who had been waiting a whole hour for Mr. Bowser to tell him that he had discovered on his farm a spring the waters of which would grow hair on a fence rail. He was asked to take a walk.

As there was no growling at dinner on account of the bone the butcher had sent with the meat, Mrs. Bowser became alarmed and suggested cards for the evening. Mr. Bowser was willing. He sat down with her and was beaten twenty straight games at euchre and never yelled out. In some of the hands she deliberately "lugged" in hopes to arouse him, but he refused to see it. On the contrary, he praised her for a good player and criticised himself.

When through playing, she showed him the gas bill for the previous month and characterized it as an outrage, but he said he had changed his mind about such things. There was a time when he looked upon the gas man as a highway robber and a liar, but he had come to the conclusion that he had done him gross injustice.

The cook called Mrs. Bowser up to her room and said that she was afraid to stay in the house overnight. She once worked in a family where the man of the house made just such a sudden change, and after a week he got up one night and killed four people with an ax.

Thursday.—Still the meek and uncomplaining Mr. Bowser. There were only toast and coffee for breakfast, and by Mrs. Bowser's orders the toast had been burned, but nothing whatever was said. Indeed, Mr. Bowser ate with hearty enjoyment.

The Smile Won't Come Off.

Coming home on the car that evening the conductor short changed him out of 10 cents, but he got off the car smiling.

On the car a fat woman poked an elbow into his ribs and asked him why he didn't wear a wig and keep his vest pulled down, but he let it all go without a word.

He had only got into the house and hung up his overcoat and hat when a man called and sought to interest him in a refrigerator that used cobblestones instead of ice, but he was worked out doors in the midst of his guarantee that there was at least $5,000,000 in it.

Mrs. Bowser had determined that something must be done. At dinner she suggested the theater. Her suggestion was at once accepted. Mr. Bowser got ready without the slightest fuss. On the car going down he had to stand up, and a man beside him called him "old man" and asked him to get off and have a drink, but there was no row.

It was a poor play, and Mrs. Bowser fell asleep, but Mr. Bowser stayed awake and endured it without a complaint. While those around him were wishing they had potatoes to throw at the actors he simply felt sorry for the whole cast and wished he could find them jobs in a sawmill.

Plenty of provocation, but no row going home. On the steps was a man who had been waiting for three hours to sell Mr. Bowser a soup ladle that turned with a crank, like an egg beater, but he was gently lifted up and deposited outside the gate, and his feelings were not hurt by any hard words.

Friday.—A heavenly calm before breakfast, a heavenly calm during the meal, a bland smile on Mr. Bowser's face as he left home. He hadn't got to the corner when Mrs. Bowser called up the doctor by telephone and related affairs and asked what should be done.

He replied that he was busy, but would read up on the case and let her know as soon as possible.

When Mr. Bowser came home at night he was followed from the car by three men who wanted to sell him chicken farms, but he smiled benevolently and turned them down.

No finding fault with the dinner.

No startling remarks when told that the cook had given notice.

No observations of any sort when told that the iceman had sent in his bill and that it was a dollar too much.

Mr. Bowser Holds the Cat.

Mr. Bowser held the cat and read his newspaper during the evening. Men called to offer him investments in strawberry farms, war balloons, hair dyes and pitchforks that would pitch a ton of hay over the barn, but by his orders Mrs. Bowser met them at the door and kindly replied, "Nothing wanted tonight, thank you."

Saturday.—No trouble with Mr. Bowser before breakfast.

Not an unkind word at breakfast.

Same blissfulness, some beatitude.

At noon the doctor called and heard the story. When all the symptoms had been specified he burst into a laugh and said to the tearful Mrs. Bowser:

"Suffer no more anxiety. This is what the medical profession terms a lucid interval. Nearly all husbands have them. Bowser will probably come home tonight to fling down his hat in the hall, kick over a chair or two in the sitting room and then go down to dinner to yell at you and ask what in blazes you have got corned beef for when you know that he wanted roast mutton."

"Do you really believe he will, doctor?"

"Of course I do."

"Then I am so glad—so very, very glad! I thought sure that he was going to die!" M. QUAD.

"WINSTON" AT HOME.

Churchill is Full of Fun and Boyish Pranks.

The popular conception of Mr. Winston Churchill is that he is a delicate man, who works on his nerves and enthusiasm. This impression, no doubt, arises from his pallor, his very white, fair skin making him look delicate. This is accentuated by his almost constant habit of bending his head forward, which gives him the appearance of a slight stoop.

The real truth is, however, that Mr. Churchill is a strongly-built, muscular person, who takes a very healthy interest in his meals. "With Winston dinner is a sacred institution," says The Strand Magazine. He never misses his grub. Very few men could preform the amount of work which he does, and fewer still could bear the constant strain and anxiety to which he has been subjected for many months past.

Mr. Churchill starts work early in the morning. If you are privileged to interview him in his bedroom, say at eight o'clock, you will find him sitting up in bed busily writing page after page of memoranda or dictating to his shorthand writer. Mr. Churchill writes a beautiful hand, and makes comparatively few alterations in what he writes. He has the literary mind and literary habit. He thinks over his sentences before he writes them, and, as a rule, when written they require very little change.

He usualy rises about nine o'clock, and in the course of dressing frequently does more writing or dictating. After he has dressed, if his engagements will permit, he takes a short ride in the Park, either alone or with Mrs. Churchill.

A delightful companion, always full of interesting subjects for conversation, he has a fund of good stories, and is always ready with some opposite allusion.

Mr. Churchill has a wonderful memory for verses. Three of his favorite poets are Burns, Kipling, and Lindsay Gordon. Long before the war he was fond of quoting Burns' well-known verse:

For gold the merchant ploughs the main,
The farmer ploughs the manor;
But glory is the sodger's prize,
The sodger's wealth is honor.
The brave poor sodger ne'er despise
Nor count him as a stranger;
Remember he's his country's stay
In day and hour of danger.

Mr. Churchill has many relaxations; one of his chief delights is the preparation and delivery of a fine peroration.

He already uses spectacles for reading and writing, and his face bears evidence of much mental work and responsibility. He is a singular combination of youthfulness and age. He loves to wear rather old-fashioned-looking hats and clothes. On the other hand, when away from work he is often full of fun and boyish pranks.

Tact in the Army.

Military etiquette demands that when a party of British officers are saluted by a British private the senior officer alone acknowledges the salute. When, on the other hand, the salute is given by a French private the acknowledgement is made by all our officers. This may seem a trivial point, but in reality it is not so. By this act of courtesy we daily show to the French our consciousness that if we are their allies we are also their guests in their country. And where the officers give the lead our men are quick to follow. You have only to wander about the country to see the excellent terms on which we are with everybody.

"Tomorrow some time?"

"No, sir."

The stranger looked at the office boy sharply.

"When did he go?"

"Yesterday afternoon."

"Didn't he say when he'd be back?"

"No, sir."

"Well, where the dickens is he?"

"At the undertaker's."

"What's the matter?"

"He's dead."—Harper's Weekly.

Lightning as Cure.

When a man is struck by lightning, in nine cases out of ten it is either "kill or cure," for, though many deaths occur as a result of lightning stroke, marvellous cures of infirmity are often effected by the same means.

The other day the papers reported the case of a man who had been deaf for three years being struck by lightning. For some time he was unconscious. When he regained consciousness he found, to his delight, that he could hear once more.

In another case lightning was the cause of the restoration of sight. For some time, owing to age and infirmity, a man had lost the sight of his right eye. He never expected to regain it. Walking along a common he was caught in a thunderstorm; the lightning struck him, but, far from doing him bodily harm, he found, when he had got over the shock, that he could see with his right eye as well as with his left.

BULGARIA IS COMPLETELY IN TEUTON HANDS

LONDON, Oct. 5.—A despatch to Reuter's Telegram Company from Petrograd says:

"Opinion in high quarters here is that the Bucarian Government is so tied hand and foot by Germany and Austria that there is little or no likelihood of Bulgaria's compliance with the demands of the Allies. The latest news received from Sofia is that the German Colonel von Tarlow has been appointed commandant at the Konak (the royal residence), with German and Austrian aides.

"Dr. Radosavoff's residence is under the surveillance of German secret agents, with a view to the possibility of the Premier vacillating at the last moment. All the orders of the Bulgarian war ministry are submitted for the sanction of German and Austrian officers. The German and Austrian Legations are described as having been transformed into fortresses as a precaution against possible disorders by opponents of the government's policy.

"Two German journalists recommended by the German Minister are co-operating with the Germanophile head of the press bureau in the Foreign Office."

WHY PEOPLE FEEL DEPRESSED IN THE COLD WEATHER

Why is tiredness and langour so prevalent just now? A physician explained that the cold of winter drives blood from the surface of the body to the liver. Normally one-fourth of the whole blood supply is in the liver, and when more blood is accumulated in that organ everything goes wrong.

No better remedy exists than Dr. Hamilton's Pills which are composed of such vegetable extracts as Mandrake and Butternut, and possess wonderful liver stimulating powers. It's a marvel the way Hamilton's Pills clear the blood of the poisonous humours. They put new life into worn out bodies, build up the appetite, bring back a reserve of nerve energy, tide folks over the cold days of winter and the depressing days of spring. For your health and body comfort get a 25c. box of Dr. Hamilton's Pills to-day.

HOW BLIND MEN READ

LOUIS BRAILLE WAS BENEFACTOR OF UNFORTUNATES.

Frenchman, Who Invented Means Whereby Blind May Read, Was Born a Century Ago Near Paris and Became a Professor at 17—Publishing Braille Books Is a Costly and Laborious Work.

It was a magnificent tribute which King George paid to the memory of the man who "made the blind to see," on the occasion of the recent opening of the new building added to the National Institute for the Blind in Great Portland street, London. "A great service," said His Majesty, "was rendered to humanity when Louis Braille devised the system of reading and writing which partially restores to the blind the lost means of intercourse with their fellows."

The tribute was well deserved, for of all the reading and writing systems which have been invented for the help of the blind, it is generally recognised that that of Louis Braille is by far the best. Much of the £130,000 which is being appealed for to support the National Institute is required to supply the increasing demand for books of the Braille type. That the money will be subscribed by the generous-hearted public there is little doubt, for, as King George truly remarked:

"It is a commonplace that men do not realise the value of that which they have never lost, but I am confident that your appeal for funds to extend and develop your undertaking will stir the imagination of many who unreflectingly enjoy the blessing of sight."

Braille, who was born in 1809 about twenty-three miles from Paris, became blind through an accident at the age of three. When he was ten years of age he entered as a pupil the Institution Nationale des Jeunes Aveugles, which was founded by Valentin Hauy in 1784, and such was his intelligence that when he was seventeen years of age he was elected a professor of the institution.

Both as a pupil and professor, however, he labored to invent a system which the blind could not only read but write in relief, and after years of patient labor devised the wonderful system which bears his name.

Briefly the signs of the Braille system consist of varying combinations of six points or dots placed in an oblong, of which the vertical side contains three and the horizontal two points. There are sixty-two possible combinations of these six points, so that after providing characters for the twenty-six letters of the English alphabet, there remain a sufficient number of signs for punctuation, contractions, etc.

The first ten letters, from "A" to "J," are formed by combinations of dots in the upper and middle rows; the next ten letters, from "K" to "T," are formed by adding the left-hand dot on the lower row, and the remainder by adding two dots in the lower row to the combinations representing the first ten letters.

By other various combinations it is easy to represent punctuation, numbers, and musical notes. Indeed, by means of this dotted system a blind man is able to keep memoranda or accounts, write his own music, emboss his own books from dictation, and carry on correspondence.

For writing, a frame is used consisting of a grooved metal bed, containing ten grooves to the inch. Over this is fitted a brass perforated guide, fixed into a light wooden frame like the frame of a slate, and which is attached to the grooved metal bed by hinges. The paper is introduced between the frame and the grooved bed, the instrument for writing being a blunt awl which carries a little cap of paper before it into the grooves of the bed, thereby producing a series of little pits on the side next the writer. When taken out and turned over, little prominences are felt, corresponding to the pits on the other side.

The reading is performed from left to wright, consequently the writing is from right to left. But this reversal presents no practical difficulty as soon as the pupil has caught the idea that in reading and writing alike he has to go forwards.

That the making of Braille books is a costly and laborious process may be gathered from the fact that John Andrew Ford, whom the King and Queen saw at work when they visited the National Institute, and who has the distinction of having hammered out the first Bible in Braille, took three and a half years to accomplish the task.

The task involved no fewer than 20,000,000 blows, the punch having to be struck three times with the hammer for each dot. This Braille edition of the Bible runs into thirty-nine bulky foolscap volumes.

Classified.

One-third of the fools in this country think they can beat the lawyer in expounding the law, one-half think they can beat the doctor at healing the sick, two-thirds of them think they can beat the minister in preaching the gospel, and all of them know that they can beat the editor in running the newspaper.—London Tit-Bits.

English Club in Paris.

A new club for English residents in Paris, to be called the Imperial British Club, is to be opened in Paris by King George. The new club, with a subscription of only $16 yearly, will appeal to the 20,000 British residents of Paris.

Good Shot.

Wigg—So young Goldie has become a benedict. What was his wife's maiden name?

Wagg—Her maiden aim seems to have been to marry Goldie, and she proved an unusually good shot for a woman.

"I don't know," said the bridge builder, "whether the engineer has the picture drawed yet or not, but the bridge is up and the trains is passin' over it."

CHILE'S HANGING GARDEN.

Wondrous Beauty of Santa Lucia Park, in Santiago.

Santiago, with its 460,000 of population, fifty miles inland from Valparaiso, is the capital of Chile. It lies in a great amphitheater forty miles long and eighteen miles wide and is inclosed by walls of lofty mountains covered white with snow. Outside of Rio de Janeiro, no capital in the world has a finer situation. Standing in the central plain, it looks out on one side over fertile fields, sloping toward the coast range and on the other it looks up to the gigantic Cordilliera 19,000 feet above it, furrowed with deep glens and covered with snowy wastes.

There are beautiful drives and parks and pleasure resorts on every hand. The Alameda Avenida Delicias, 600 feet in width, runs the entire length of the city. The finest private houses front on this wide boulevard. They are built in Spanish style with courtyards full of flowers and shrubs. The city has sixty-seven miles of electric car lines. Most of the streets are paved with asphalt. The policemen carry swords. The city has an air of law and order. A beautiful park was given to the city by Senora Isadora Cousina. It is called the Quinta Normal.

But the part of parks in Santiago is Santa Lucia. For striking and picturesque beauty it is scarcely equaled anywhere else in the world. It is a steep and rocky hill rising 500 feet right from the center of the city. The original scanty soil has been added to by skillful gardeners until it has become an exquisite park, lifting its verdurous masses like a hanging garden high above the city. Flowers and creeping vines trail over rocks in wild profusion. Fountains glimmer in the sunshine, marbles gleam against the green. Grottoes invite you to their shade and winding paths allure the traveler to the very summit.

Here, at the top of this green rock, a splendid vista of the city lies at your very feet. You hear the hum of traffic and the buzzing wheels of commerce and out beyond you see a fertile plain, while on the far horizon the mighty summits of the snow capped Andes cut their silhouettes against a sky of blue. Beautiful for situation is Santiago, unique and fortunate in its Santa Lucia park.—Peter McQueen in National Magazine.

Three Atmospheres.

The atmosphere is divided by scientists into three parts. The first extends from sea level to about 10,000 feet high. In this layer are almost all the water vapors or clouds and all the dust. In it all the storms take place. The temperature tends to decrease, but very irregularly. The second layer extends to between six and seven miles high. In it are the "cirrus" clouds, and the temperature decreases uniformly. Man cannot go beyond it.

These two layers together are called the troposphere, because in them all the vertical movements of the air take place. Beyond them is the stratosphere, in which occur any movement of the air in planes parallel to the earth's surface.

Strathcona's Romantic Marriage.

The marriage of Lord Strathcona was a romance. He met the lady when he was twenty-nine and living on the coast of Labrador. She was a widow and had a little son. There was no priest or church within 1,000 miles and the marriage was a simple contract without ceremony. It was for this reason that when the high commissioner became a peer in 1897 a remarriage was held to be necessary and it was solemnised with the full ritual of the Church of England. The Labrador marriage was, however, ratified by special act of parliament.—London Tatler.

Whistler as a Courtier.

Most of the stories of Whistler are rather "waspish," but one recalls a story that shows him in the light rather of a graceful courtier.

It happened that the then Prince of Wales paid a visit to an exhibition of pictures that was held by an art society of which Whistler was the president. Whistler received the prince at the door, and as they entered the gallery his royal highness asked:

"What is the history of your society, Mr. Whistler?"

"Sir," replied the artist with a courtly bow, "its history begins today!"

Noah and the Animals.

Few people will say that Noah took more than two of each kind of animal and fowl into the ark, yet here is the Bible on the subject (Genesis vii, 2): "Of every clean beast thou shalt take to thee by sevens the male and his female and of beasts that are not clean by two—the male and his female;" (Genesis vii, 3) "Of fowls also of the air by sevens—the male and the female to keep seed alive upon the face of the earth."

Collar Champion.

A seven-year-old boy coming from school one day informed his mother that half his class had been promoted. His mother asked him whether he had been one of the number.

"No," said he, "and I'm glad I'm not, 'cause I'm the smartest one left."—New York Post.

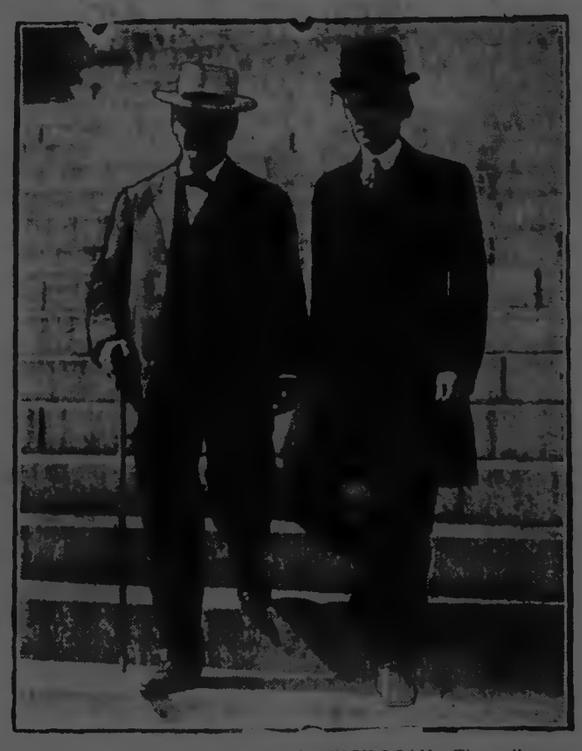
Too Much Mental Tax.

"What is your objection to slang?"

"To be perfectly candid," replied Miss Cayenne, "what I most object to is the constant study required to keep up with it."—Washington Star.

Conscience in the soul is the root of all true courage. If a man would be brave let him learn to obey his conscience.

Miss Gossip—"Mrs. Fewyears tells me she wasn't 16 when she was married." Miss Telltale—"Well, I should say she wasn't. She was 29."



HENRY FORD DISLIKES ANGLO- FRENCH LOAN.—The tall man is the famous automobile manufacturer, the other is Secretary of the Navy Daniels. They were photographed in Washington on their way to visit President Wilson. Mr. Ford has secured much publicity by his statement that he would withdraw his savings from any bank that subscribes to the Anglo-French loan.

HINTS FOR SMOKERS.

How To Get the Best Results From Your Favorite Pipe.

A good meerschaum pipe demands plenty of attention. If you carry it loose in your pocket pieces of grit will scratch it. Keep it in a case except when actually smoking it.

If you wish to color a meerschaum, bear these few points in mind. Use a strong tobacco at first, shag for preference. Put a plug at the bottom of the bowl. Ordinarily the bottom of the bowl colors before the upper part, but this plug reverses the process. When the top of the pipe has become an even brown remove the plug.

Don't smoke the meerschaum in a high wind or when out in the rain. The wind may color it unevenly, the rain will spot it. Don't let it get too hot, and be careful not to scratch it with your finger-nails.

The best pipe to smoke is a briar. Clean it out once a week by running a piece of string through the stem, and it will give you just as good a smoke and less trouble than a meerschaum, clay, or calabash. String makes a better pipe-cleaner than a feather, as it goes right through the stem and out at the bowl, whilst the feather comes back the same way as it enters. Whenever possible, scrape out ashes in preference to knocking the bowl against any hard substance, as constant knocking causes the bowl to crack. But don't scrape away all the carbon from inside the bowl—just leave a thin coating.

Some smokers always light their cigarettes with wax vestas and their pipes with wooden matches. The liquid wax drips on to the tobacco and taints it. The unpleasant taste of a brand-new pipe can be banished by burning some grass in it.

Snow and Timber.

Few would imagine that the absence of snow would double the price of timber. The greater part of the world's supply of common timber comes from the forests of Canada, Scandinavia and Russia. All of these countries have a greater or less fall of snow. Snow is one of the best non-conductors of heat or cold in the world, and when the fall is a foot deep a thermometer showing 60 degrees on its surface will, if buried beneath the snow, rise to about 30 degrees. The snow, therefore, is an enormous blanket protecting the roots of the trees from the intense cold, besides covering the warmth of the soil. A full-grown pine can stand almost any degree of cold, but a young tree cannot do so. It might sprout during summer, but a snowless winter would infallibly kill it. If, therefore, snow ceased, the enormous timber supplies of Northern Europe, Asia and America would disappear.

A Free-Handed Prince.

The following is told of the famous Prince of Conde: He left his son, aged nine years, 50 louis d'or to spend while he himself was absent in Paris. On his return the boy came to him triumphantly, saying:

"Papa, here is all the money safe. I have never touched it once."

The prince, without making any reply, took his son to the window and quietly emptied all the money out of the purse into the street. Then he said:

"If you have neither virtue enough to give away your money nor spirit enough to spend it, always do this for the future, that the poor may have a chance of it."

Rain as a Fertilizer.

Rain, especially when accompanied by thunder and lightning, has a fertilizing effect upon the soil. There is almost always ammonia in the air, and this is carried by the rain into the earth. It has been calculated that a quart of rainwater may contain about one-eightieth of a grain of ammonia.

The Woodpecker's Tattoo.

Heard a woodpecker tapping the trees in the high woods. How strangely he is constructed! If we chopped our teeth on a stick loud enough to be heard a hundred feet off, at the end of an hour our jaws and gums would be so sore we could not bear it. But the woodpecker seems to suffer no inconvenience.

A Chance to Make Money.

A young man who had been out of employment for some time and to whom money had become a stranger stood on the Walnut street bridge over the Schuylkill gazing down at the water.

Suicide was in his mind, but he was afraid to seek death by drowning and only contemplated it when he realized that he had no money to purchase poison, a rope or something of the sort.

As he was standing there a well dressed man accosted him.

"Young man, do you want to earn $4?" he said.

"Four dollars!" gasped the unfortunate, to whom the sum sounded like a million, "Lead me to it," he said.

"Come along," said the stranger as he led the way across the bridge.

The young man followed, a new hope gleaming from his eyes.

The stranger led the way to a room on a side street off Walnut.

"Here we are," he said.

"Well, how am I going to earn those $4?" asked the young man.

"Well, you see, I'm a little hard up for cash," said the stranger, "and I'm going to sell you a pair of five dollar shoes for a dollar!"—Philadelphia Press.

The Carrot Cure.

Dr. Oliver Wendell Holmes, referring to the true efficacy of carrots as a cure for wounds (a tradition which was certainly not handed down from Crecy), writes to Dr. Hunt in 1863, telling him how a man's heel, which was severely wounded at the battle of Fredericksburg, was treated by Dr. Bigelow, who did nothing but keep the wound open and made the patient use for this purpose a little ping of carrot, which seemed to agree with him very well.

Another more modern medical authority says that for delicate persons an excellent supper vegetable is a fair sized carrot, boiled whole so as to retain its aromatic properties, then split into quarters and warmed afresh before being served hot. It acts as a nervine sedative while being cordial and restorative. A sense of mental invigoration will follow, and the digestion of this estimable root will be readily performed without preventing sleep.—Pall Mall Gazette.

Peacock Plumage.

However much milliners may admire the plumage of the peacock and however much they may desire the money it brings, superstition prevents many of them from using it.

"Rather than give peacock feathers house room I would lose my best customer," one milliner declared. "I have done it more than once. Women who want their own materials made up have brought peacock trimming, and when I positively refused to handle it they went away angry and looked for somebody else to work up their peacock feathers. But no doubt they had a long chase, because two-thirds of the milliners feel just as I do about peacock feathers."

"But why?" asked a woman who carried a peacock feather in her hand bag.

"It's bad luck, that is why," said the milliner.—New York Sun.

Justifying His Expense.

Managers who have to pass on expense accounts will appreciate David Gibson's story about a Chicago salesman who paid $8 excess fare to reach New York on a fast train.

"What time did you arrive in New York?" asked the employer.

"Nine-forty in the morning."

"What did you do when you got in?"

"Went up to the hotel, took a bath and ate breakfast."

"What time did you see your man?" asked the conservator.

"About 3 in the afternoon," said the salesman.

"Yes, but why have you got $8 charged up for excess fare on the limited when you could just as well have taken a regular train?"

"Well," said the salesman, "it looked better to be on that train."—New York World.

The Meeting of Two Of Fate's Currents.

[Original.]

A woman lay dying. No one was with her except her son, a boy of ten years. She looked at a shelf over a fireplace and tried to speak. The boy, knowing she wished to speak of something on the shelf, took up various articles on it, at every one of which his mother gave a negative sign till he came to a small lacquered box, at which she began to mutter. He took down the box, went to the bedside, put his ear close to her lips and tried to distinguish what she wished to say to him. But he failed. The mother died before she could make herself understood.

After all was over and the dead had been laid away the little fellow closely examined the lacquered box. It was locked, and he had no key to open it. Taking it to a locksmith, he procured a key and unlocked the box, but found it empty.

The boy was left with nothing and was obliged to make his own living. The few articles of furniture were sold, realising only a few dollars. His home had always been in the country, and he sought an abiding place and work on a farm.

Farmer Simpson agreed to take him. He was to do chores and such light farm work as a boy of his age might be able to do, such as feeding the stock, milking the cows and weeding. He was permitted to go to school for a portion of each day, though this was for his employer's as well as his own benefit, for little Belle Simpson, seven years old, was sent to school, and the boy was her protector over the two miles between the farm and the schoolhouse.

And so Benny Rengerait grew up the protector of a child who came to be a woman. Strange that her father should not have expected that the two would pass from the friendship of childhood to the love of youth. In truth, he never realized that his daughter had grown to womanhood till after it was too late. Then when he began to consider which one of the neighboring well to do farmers' sons she would take for a husband he discovered that she and Ben were welded together. They might be parted, but it would be like tearing up two clinging plants by the roots.

Nevertheless he resolved to do so. Ben was twenty-two years old and had accumulated nothing. Indeed, he had never been paid anything to accumulate. He was told to go, and there seemed nothing for him to do but get work as a farm hand wherever he might. But he had been an apt scholar and was fairly well educated. He resolved to go to the city and seek a business situation. When he parted from his sweetheart she told him that she would never marry unless at some future time she might marry him.

Five years passed. Ben was receiving a small salary. Neither he nor Belle had married, but Farmer Simpson was as inexorable as ever.

Fate works in strange grooves. While all this was passing one of her other currents was flowing on to meet the one recorded. One day a woman, seeing a red flag before a house, entered and found an auction. She bought several knickknacks, including an old lacquered box. It was coming to pieces, and she secured it for 15 cents.

Some months after this purchase one of Ben Rengerait's friends called his attention to a personal advertisement which concerned him. It said that if he would call at a certain street and number of a certain town he would hear something to his advantage. He was naturally very much surprised and went at once to the place designated. He was received by an elderly lady.

"Are you Benjamin Rengerait?" she asked.

"I am."

"Did you ever see that box?" pointing.

Ben looked at the box.

"No," he said. "I never saw it before."

She saw that he was endeavoring to recall something and gave him time. That quick springing plant memory had taken root in his brain, and while seconds were being ticked away it was growing. It had been excited by the box, which he had not seen for nearly twenty years. Again it stood on the shelf over the fireplace. Then he saw his mother looking toward it, her efforts to tell him something concerning it, her failure.

"Yes," he said. "It belonged to my mother. When she was dying she tried to tell me something about it, but her voice failed her before she could do so. Where did you get it?"

"I bought it at an auction, intending to use it for trinkets. But it was coming to pieces, and I tried to glue it together. Failing in this, I tried to fasten it with nails. Under the hammering it broke apart and revealed a false bottom. See."

She took out the upper bottom and disclosed a small paper book with a number printed on the cover. She opened it and showed him his name. It was a savings bank book. There were deposits entered in it, the last having been made more than seventeen years before. The aggregate deposits were $3,000. The accumulated interest would amount to nearly twice as much more.

"It is yours," she said. "Doubtless your mother had long been saving it for you. I am glad to be the means of its return to you."

And so it was that the mother's intentions were carried out in time and when perhaps they did the most good. Ben married his sweetheart, invested his find in business and is now prosperous and happy.

A Useful Reflection.

The optimist was reciting some of the numerous articles in his creed. Finally he came to the end. "Oh, there is one more, after all," he said.

"On the days when I reflect how little I really amount to I cheer myself by remembering how much I expect of others."

Her Age.

"I understand that heiress Jobbins married was rather old. What was her age?"

"I guess as far as Jobbins was concerned it was heritage."—Baltimore American.

First Aid to Tired Housekeepers.

Men and women with inventive genius are constantly devising ways and means to lighten the labor of the housewife. Every department of housework is included, and nearly all are for people of moderate means; not for those who can employ abundant help.

To keep posted in these products read the advertising columns. You may find something that will save money or something that will enable you to devote more time to the family circle.

You may not be able to afford everything, but there are some things you cannot afford to do without.

The Armenian Alphabet.

An Armenian girl goes to school at four or five years old, but before that she has probably learned her "letters," which is almost an education in itself, as the Armenian alphabet contains thirty-nine. She learns these letters from a small slab of wood on which they are printed. This slab is fastened to a handle, making it something like a hairbrush in shape. The Armenians boast that their formidable alphabet is so perfect as to give every sound known to any other nation.

Burn Silk Before Buying.

Why did your last year's silk split and crack?

Because it was adulterated.

You might have tested it easily before purchasing and saved both money and worry.

A piece of silk and a match are all you need for the test. Light the match and apply it to the fabric. If it holds its shape the silk is adulterated with some of the various minerals so used. If it runs together in a puffy mass the silk is pure.

A Slight Difference.

The globe trotter was telling about the wonders of India.

"The scenery in some portions of the country," he said, with enthusiasm, "is incomparable. Far, far away, the mountains pile up toward the sky, and stretching off to them are beautiful valleys, while close at hand you can get in sight of a man eating tiger"—

"I beg your pardon," interrupted an eager listener, "but did you say inside of a man eating tiger or in sight of one?"

Good Advice.

Don't live beyond your income, no matter how small it is.

Don't live up to your income. Save at least 10 per cent of it every month and if possible 40 per cent.

Don't let money lie idle. It is the fractions that count. Put every bit of surplus in a savings bank quickly, and every time $100 accumulates invest it.

Don't pay for show, but for value received.—Louisville Post.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

THE GRAND PROMOTER

Another Good Thing Comes His Way With Money to Invest.

NOT EASY AS HE LOOKED.

Caller Wanted Profit of 9 or 10 Per Cent on His Investment—Gave the Major a Bogus Check That Made Him Mean.

[Copyright, 1915, by T. C. McClure.]

Major Crofoot, grand promoter, had been figuring, and he was a bit lonely. He owed his landlady, his laundress, his tailor and a dozen different men who had taken chances and loaned him a dollar. He also owed for office rent and a gas bill, and the last shovel of coal had been fed into the stove. As assets he had the sum of 19 cents in cash. He was wondering how to make nothing go into something and leave something over when there came a knock at his door. He made no reply, and it was repeated. It wasn't the aggressive knock of a landlord after back rent nor yet the half hearted knock of his laundress come for the $2 he was owing, but yet feeling that she would never handle a penny of it, and at the third knock the major rose up and opened the door, and his heart beat again as he found a stranger there.

"Is this Major Crofoot's office?" was asked.

"It is. Come in."

"I'm looking for the Major Crofoot that has all sorts of good things to invest in."

"Then you have come to the right place. Have a chair."

"Thanks. Now, then, I don't wish to take up your valuable time. Have you got anything good on hand? I want something perfectly safe that will return me 9 or 10 per cent on the money."

The major began rubbing his hands and almost gasped for breath. Another sucker had come along at last. As soon as he could work up a smile and control his voice he said:

"My dear sir, I have got half a dozen of the best things going. When you speak of 9 or 10 per cent dividends it makes me smile. I don't deal in such small fish. Anything I take hold of must pay 30 per cent or I drop it."

"Good Lord!" ejaculated the caller as he sat up.

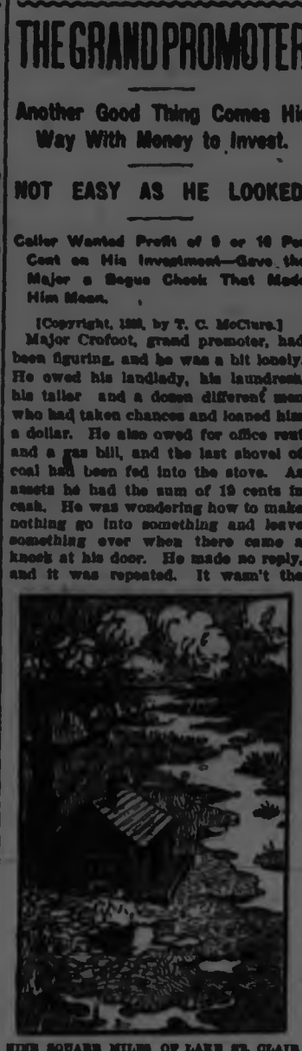
"Thirty per cent at least, sir. What would you say to stocks paying dollar for dollar?"

"Can it be possible?"

"Perfectly possible, my dear sir. The Great American Chicken Gizzard company is going to do better than that this year. The fowls are fed on chalk and their gizzards thus whitened. They are then cooked, spiced and canned. We shipped 10,000 cans to the czar of Russia yesterday. He has no gizzard of his own, you know."

"And if I put in a thousand dollars I get the same amount back in dividends each year?"

"There is no more stock for sale, my dear sir. I just mentioned the Gizzard company as a sample of my work.



NINE SQUARE MILES OF LAKE ST. CLAIR FLATS.

There is the Perennial Cucumber company, but I'm afraid it's hardly good enough for you. It won't pay over 40 per cent this year."

"But I'm willing to take 40 per cent," replied the man. "Gee whiz, but what man can ask for more than that?"

"Very fair, very fair," loftily replied the major, "but nothing to brag of. Being you have come direct to the office, I want to pick you out something extra. Let me see. The Universal Glass Eye company paid 60 per cent dividends two years ago, but last year dropped down to 30. It will be still less than that this year on account of hard times. Lots of one eyed people will stick a patch over the eye and let it go at that. If you'd come in a month ago I could have let you in on the ground floor of the Magic Rat and Mouse Destroyer. The stock went like wildfire, and the last was sold at $200. We figure it will pay 400 per cent dividends for the next twenty years."

Greatest Thing in World.

"Greatest thing in the world, my dear sir. It is a trap that goes to the grocery and buys the cheese to bait itself and then comes home and follows rats and mice into their holes to catch them. Keeps its own tally and buries its own dead. Senator Forsker said he would rather be the inventor of that trap than to be president of the United States."

"But you must have something for me," insisted the caller in anxious tones.

"Let me see! Let me see! Humph! How absentminded I am this morning! Just as you knocked I was making up the incorporation papers for my last and best scheme. It's one that'll lay over all others. I was saving it to begin the year on."

"Good! Good! What is it? By George, old fellow, if you put me on to something good you shan't lose by it."

"You know what delicacies turtle soup and turtle steak are considered?"

"I do."

"And you know the high price frogs' legs bring?"

"Yes."

"Well, that's the basis of the Great Western Banquet company, just organized. We are going to rent nine square miles of Lake St. Clair flats and raise our frogs and turtles and can them on the spot. They will be canned in champagne, and the labels on the cans will be handsome enough to frame and hang in any one's parlor. Three turtle steaks and two dozen frogs' legs in every can. Killing and canning takes place every day. We shall control the market of the world. No banquet complete without our goods. The Emperor William writes"—

"I don't care a cuss what the Emperor William writes, but I want some of that stock!" interrupted the caller. "What dividends do you figure on?"

"Well, last night I was figuring on a straight 100 per cent, but this morning I thought I ought to make a little allowance. Many turtles die of homesickness, you know, and a certain per cent of the frogs are bound to jump the wire fences and get away. To be very safe and conservative I have put the dividends at 65 per cent. I think that is a rather neat figure, don't you?"

"Great! Great Scott, I've been lending money at 6 per cent!"

"How—how much were you thinking of investing?" asked the major in a voice that trembled in spite of himself.

"Twenty thousand dollars, perhaps."

The major's knees grew weak and wabbly, and he had to sit down, and there was a lump in his throat so he asked:

"And you—you will pay something down to secure the stock?"

"A hundred dollars. Here's a check I'll indorse over to you, and I'll come in tomorrow and pay the balance and get the stock. By George, but I'm in luck! Just think of my getting hold of something paying 65 per cent dividends! You won't let Morgan buy the whole thing up and freeze me out, will you?"

Gives Caller Stock.

"No. You shall have the stock."

"And I'll remember you. I'll buy you a pearl pin out of the first dividend. If you want, when you get started I'll show you how to catch frogs for canning. There's a peculiar way of getting hold of them by one hind leg. Ninety-five per cent! I can't sing but dwell on it."

"Yes; it's a good thing," replied the major as he shoved the folded check into his vest pocket in a careless way. "You will be in tomorrow?"

"Sure, Mike. If I was a Frenchman I'd kiss you for luck, but as I'm not we'll shake hands and I'll say ta-ta. Tomorrow! Ninety-five per cent! Whoop!"

When he had gone the major walked up and down to calm his raging heart. It didn't seem possible. He couldn't credit his good luck. Then at last he took the check from his pocket and looked at it to see what bank it was drawn on. His eyes opened wide, and he uttered a moan and staggered to a seat.

It was drawn in favor of "A. Sucker," indorsed by "Another Sucker" and signed by "Uncle Rube."

Then the light went out, and the grand promoter bowed his head and knew the bitterness of the green persimmon.

POLICIES OF RUSSIA HAVE BEEN BETRAYED

The Paris correspondent of the Daily Chronicle telegraphs details of the circumstances connected with the hanging for high treason in Russia of Lieut.-Col. Miassiedoff, and a large number of his accomplices, and the sentencing to hard labor of Baron Grothus and Von Freinat. Letters found on a Bavarian officer in the Yser region showed that the Russians were being betrayed. Gen Pau was just setting out for Russia when he received the letters, and he acquainted the Grand Duke Nicholas with the discovery.

The Russian commander replied that he was fully aware that his armies were being betrayed, but by whom he could not tell. Thereupon a "fake" military order was drawn up. Care was taken that it should be communicated only to a small group of people who were already suspected. The expected result happened.

Germany at once showed a knowledge of the order, and took military action in consequence. The spies had fallen into the trap. It only remained to put the suspects under rigorous cross-examination. Lieut.-Col. Miassiedoff was among them. His only thought was for his own skin, and under pressure he admitted his guilt, and betrayed the names of his accomplices. For ten years he has been in the pay of Germany. He had kept Berlin informed of everything that was happening or about to happen in Russia, and there were few men in the Empire who were in such a position to know.

Russia had no secrets, military or political, from her Western neighbor. The traitor's pay corresponded to the value of his treason, and amounted over the whole period to some millions of roubles, of which a very small fraction went to his subordinate agents.

It is said (though this does not appear in his confession) that Miassiedoff held back an order that should have reached Gen. Rennenkampf for twenty-four hours, and by so doing saved the German army from what seemed like inevitable disaster.

Up to the outbreak of the war it had been Miassiedoff's special duty to watch over the personal safety of the Tsar. He then asked to be attached to the General Military Headquarters.

SOFIA FEELS THE PINCH.

Municipal Authorities Put War Measure Into Effect.

PARIS, Oct. 5—Municipal authorities at Sofia have adopted rigorous measures made necessary by the military situation, says a despatch to the Temps from the Bulgarian capital. Citizens have been prohibited from promenading the streets after ten o'clock at night. Meetings, political gatherings and public demonstrations have been forbidden. Restaurants and theatres must close at ten o'clock and stores at an early hour except bakeries, which are permitted to sell bread until nine o'clock. Grocers, butchers and wood dealers have been ordered not to advance prices above the scale established by the municipality. Landlords have been prohibited from raising rents or evicting tenants for non-payment of rent.

YOU don't get better beer because you pay twice as much for imported lager as for O'Keefe's.

The difference is the duty.

O'Keefe's Pilsener Lager

CANADIAN BUGLER NOW A WAR HERO

LONDON, Oct. 5—Anthony Ginley, the boy bugler of the Royal Montreal Regiment, whose persistence won for him a place with the regiment at the front, and who, it is stated, has been recommended for distinguished conduct, caused a mild sensation by arriving unexpectedly at Clivenden Canadian Hospital bearing a rifle and uniform and giving evidence of recent association with the trenches. He did not come for treatment, being sound in wind and limb, but was seeking Captain Richardson, quartermaster of the hospital. Ginley met a warm welcome, being for some time the lion of the institution. He is of Scottish parentage, but an orphant. His father died when he was 18 months old, and subsequently with his mother he went from Scotland to Canada. His mother died there years ago. Major Woodside, of the Canadian Heavy Brigade, engaged the boy on a small farm near Ottawa, and when war broke out Major Woodside volunteered for active service, and the boy was also eager to go. The boy was so young that the Major declined to consent, but allowed him to join the 14th Montrealers as bugler. He came to England and crossed to France in February, being keen to accompany the regiment to the trenches. He was allowed to shoulder a rifle, and hard work agreed with him, and since he went to France he has grown three inches. He was present at both the battles of Ypres and Festubert. Last week he was granted seven days' leave to visit Captain Richardson at Clivenden and friends in Scotland. Captain Richardson informed the Canadian Press that Mrs. Richardson, now in Ottawa, had taken an interest in the lad and had sent him letters to the front, which led to his visit to Clivenden, where Captain Richardson saw he was well cared for. He remained in the hospital till yesterday, when he left for Scotland. He will rejoin his regiment on the expiration of his leave.

Dandruff Soon Ruins the Hair

Girls—if you want plenty of thick, beautiful, glossy, silky hair, do by all means get rid of dandruff, for it will starve your hair and ruin it if you don't.

It doesn't do much good to try to brush or wash it out. The only sure way to get rid of dandruff is to dissolve it then you destroy it entirely. To do this, get about four ounces of ordinary liquid arvon; apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

By morning, most if not all, of your dandruff will be gone, and three or four more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it.

You will find, too, that all itching and digging on the scalp will stop and your hair will look and feel a hundred times better. You can get the liquid arvon at any drug store. It is inexpensive and four ounces is all you will need, no matter how much dandruff you have. This simple remedy never fails.

HOW GERMAN SOLDIERS ARE PAID.

The Belgian papers remark upon the broken-down, forlorn appearance of the German soldier of to-day as compared with the well-set-up and admirably equipped soldier of just over a year ago. Their rifles are the worst part of their equipment, at any rate, of those in Belgium, and many date from over a generation ago. The men themselves complain that they are no longer properly paid. Instead of coin of the realm, they are paid with counters; these are accepted by the army canteens, but by nobody else.

Comfort and Cure For Baby's Skin Troubles

Dr. Chase's Ointment Cured When Baby's Body Was Covered With Distressing Eczema

If every mother could try Dr. Chase's Ointment for the chafing, skin irritation and resulting eczema which tortures so many babies, what a blessing it would be for the little ones.

This letter will give you an idea of what a wonderful work this Ointment is doing in the way of bringing comfort to children who are so unfortunate as to contract eczema. It is so easy for this trouble to develop from chafing or irritation caused by the clothing, and so difficult to get it cured, that Dr. Chase's Ointment is appreciated when once its healing qualities are known.

Mr. M. L. Dusclos, Postmaster, Dugnayville, N.B., writes: "I believe it my duty to recommend Dr. Chase's Ointment as a cure for eczema. My baby was seized with eczema and his face and arms were covered with this terrible disease. After trying all sorts of ointments the disease continued to spread until it covered the entire body. When the itching became bad he would scratch himself and was sometimes found in his cradle covered with blood. Hearing about Dr. Chase's Ointment I bought two boxes and before this was all used the child was cured. That was a year ago, and there has been no trace of eczema since. I recommend Dr. Chase's Ointment to all who suffer from eczema as being the best treatment in the world for itching skin diseases."

Dr. Chase's Ointment is for sale by all dealers at 60 cents a box. It is a good idea to keep it at hand along with the bath soap to be used for roughness of the skin, chafing or irritation. Prevention is so much better than cure. Powders clog the pores, but Dr. Chase's Ointment cleanses the pores and thereby keeps the skin soft and smooth. Sample box free if you mention this paper. Public Charges Are Not Beneficiaries of Life Assurance

A census was taken about a year ago of the inmates of alms houses, of prisons, of asylums for the care of the helpless, in an eastern state. It was found but three of the occupants of these institutions, who numbered altogether over fifteen hundred, had been beneficiaries of life insurance.

It was somebody's neglect that forced the public to pay higher taxes in order to take care of nearly all these people.

Life insurance limits the needs of poorhouses, prisons, old folks' homes. Life insurance, therefore, reduces the needs of the State in maintaining institutions for the care of the needy.

The man who has sufficient insurance to take care of his own future if he reaches old age, and of his dependents, should anything happen to him, is doing his duty, not only to his family, but to his State.

WOULD YOU CONSIDER

a proposition making provision for your family in the event of death, or, if living, provision for old age?

"TILL BOYS COME HOME" THE LATEST SONG IN ENGLAND

LONDON, Oct. 5.—Never has a song had such a popular appeal as is contained in the words of "Till the Boys Come Home," which is the favorite lyric in this country, and is being sung or whistled by everybody. Written by Ivor Novello, who is but 23 years of age, it has made his reputation as a composer.

It is not a ballad to fire the martial spirit, but rather a reminder of home; set to a swinging, yet most touching melody. Here are the words of the chorus:

Keep the home fires burning.
While your hearts are yearning;
Though your lads are far away.
They dream of home.
There's a silver lining
Through the dark clouds shining,
Turn the dark clouds inside out,
Till the boys come home.

Young Novello, a born "composer," is a brilliant pianist, and was one of the most accomplished choristers in England but it is "Till the Boys Come Home," which has given him fame.

"I do not know what inspired me to compose the song," he remarked. "I had in my mind the idea of keeping the homes as happy as possible while the soldiers are away, and in half an hour I had invented the air, not a note of which has since been altered."

25 CENTS DESTROYS YOUR DANDRUFF AND STOPS FALLING HAIR

Save Your Hair! Make It Thick, Wavy and Beautiful Try This.

Thin, brittle, colorless and scraggy hair is mute evidence of a neglected scalp; of dandruff—that awful scurf.

There is nothing so destructive to the hair as dandruff. It robs the hair of its lustre, its strength and its very life; eventually producing a feverishness and itching of the scalp, which if not remedied causes the hair roots to shrink, loosen and die—then the hair falls out fast. A little Danderine tonight—now—any time—will surely save your hair.

Get a 25-cent bottle of Knowlton's Danderine from any drug store or toilet counter, and after the first application your hair will take on that life, lustre and luxurience which is so beautiful. It will become wavy and fluffy and have the appearance of abundance, an incomparable gloss and softness; but what will please you most will be after just a few week's use, when you will actually see a lot of fine, downy hair —new hair—growing all over the scalp.

ALMOST A DEADLOCK EXISTS ALONG THE EASTERN FRONT

Germans Are Thrown Back Where They Had Secured a River Crossing—Enemy is Short of Reserves

PETROGRAD, Oct. 5.—A general slackening of German activity has been noticed along the entire front. Since the failure of their successfully-begun operation against Sventziany the German left wing has lost all its activity. The right wing, after a series of unsuccessful engagements, has been unable up to now to recover or alter conditions. Consequently the centre, having lost the service of both wings, is brought to a deadlock by the determined Russian resistance.

Military experts explain the German failure as chiefly due to the absence of reserves. To relieve the cavalry before Sventziany, the Germans have been compelled to shift forces from the right flanks to the armies of Gens. Von Eichhorn, von Scholtz and von Gallwitz over 250 to 350 miles of damaged roads.

The Russian position at Dvinsk is unshaken. German attempts at an assault from Novo Alexandrovsk, their nearest point to Dvinsk, were repulsed, and north of Lake Drisviaty the violence of the Russian artillery fire put the Germans to flight.

At Lubtcha, northeast of Novo Grodek, the Germans almost succeeded in crossing to the right bank of the Niemen, but the Russians threw them back with great loss.

Attacked in Heavy Masses.

Another unofficial despatch says: The recent Russian gain of 25 miles which culminated in the capture of postawy, northeast of Vilna, has been followed by a new Russian offensive on a front running from Postawy south to Smorgon, southeast of Vilna. Berlin admits that the Russians attacked all along this fifty-mile front in heavy masses, and while the Germans claim this attack was repulsed, with heavy losses, Petrograd's report will be awaited with interest. Berlin also admits a strong Russian offensive on the Dvina at Lennewada Manor, where the Germans some time ago tried to break through to Riga.

Russians Report Gains.

PETROGRAD, Oct. 5.—The following official communication from General Headquarters was issued yesterday:

"Near Dvinsk the Germans at noon yesterday opened a hail of fire against the sector of one of our regiments in the vicinity of the village of Chichkoro, between the railway and Sventiksventen Lake. The Germans employed guns of very large calibre, including some eight-inch.

"Preceeded by a violent fire, they rushed forward and occupied part of our trenches. We, in turn, subjected the trenches and the enemy who reached them to a destructive fire, and our troops advanced in a vigorous counter-attack. Unable to withstand our fire, the Germans fell back with heavy losses. The trenches were reoccupied by us.

"At many of the fords of the River Madzioki and its tributary, the Disenki, there has been stubborn fighting. The village of Voroya was carried by assault by our troops. We captured prisoner and quick-firers. The Germans were dislodged at the point of the bayonet from the villages of Teliaki and Kozley, between the villages of Koziany and Postawy.

Captured Villages.

"In some sectors of the Spaglitzy River, south of Vichnevskoie, our troops succeeded in passing to the western bank. In the capture of some villages in the region of Cheremehitzy and Stakovzy we took three hundred unwounded prisoners, including nineteen artilleryment and five officers. Four quick-firing guns and other trophies also fell into our hands.

"The front approximately from the region of Smorgon to the Pripet is unchanged. At the mouth of the stokhod the enemy occupied the village of Pojog, but was dislodged by an energetic attack. The enemy also was dislodged from positions north of the village of Soviechtchitza.

"On the Styr, in the region of the Kovel-Sarny railway, and at the village of Kostiouklovka, southwest of Soviechtchitza, we took prisoners of more than two hundred men. We also captured two machine guns and a convoy. In the same region our troops crossed the Etyr River near Polonno, dislodging the enemy from the village of Taminy. We also succeeded in crossing near the village of Kozlinitchi, below Ciartorisk."

HUNGARY SUFFERS MANY HARDSHIPS

LONDON, Oct. 5.—A Government decree ordering all factories in Hungary engaged in the manufacture of cotton goods to cease work and surrender their stocks for military purposes has thrown 100,000 persons out of work in Bohemia alone, and at least as many more in other parts of the empire, says a Budapest despatch to The Post.

The decree has affected Czechs particularly. Wholesale and retail dealers in cotton goods are said to be going bankrupt by hundreds. There is similar paralysis in building, rubber, and other industries.

Police reports show that the number of women in Budapest who have committed suicide has increased enormously in the past year. Seventy per cent. of these suicides are ascribed officially to poverty and virtually all the remainder to grief over the loss of husbands who were killed while fighting.

LED POLICE CHASE IN FROZEN NORTH

The twenty months' chase for Harold Tolchard, through the wilderness of the Far North, by the police reads like a chapter, from a Northland romance. From Hudson's Bay posts to Indians' encampments this fur-trader outwitted his hunters. His knowledge of the trails and conditions were far superior to that of his pursuers and this alone helped him to elude them. He is a fine specimen of a man and looks prosperous — the type of man made for the hardships that the Northmen only know. In yesterday's Toronto Police Court he was charged with obtaining $500 from the Dominion Express Company. While in the North, sent there by a local fur firm to purchase a season's stock, Tolchard acted as agent for the Dominion Express Company. He was wired by the head office and ordered to discontinue issuing money orders. A telegram was received from Tolchard to the effect that he received the order, but he failed to stop issuing the money orders. After obtaining $500 he left for the Far North, and there, with dog-teams and his past experience as a trapper, he roamed, out of reach of the police. The local fur firm have lost several thousand dollars, which they gave to Tolchard to purchase furs. Thinking apparently that all trace of him was lost he emerged from the wilderness and landed in Chicago. Here all trace of him was lost until Detective Taylor arrested him here on Saturday.

Without plea or election he was committed for trial for the $500 theft. The theft of the money from the fur firm has not been laid yet. A bond of $5,000 was accepted.

WEALTH OF MONARCHS.

Czar is Richest of Old World Kings —Britain's Ruler Poorest.

The Westminster Gazette of London says:

"We have heard something of the diminution of the Kaiser's private fortune owing to the war. But even with his fifty royal residences and interests in all manner of businesses, he has never been the richest monarch in the world. That honour has always belonged to the Czar, who on his accession, come into the Romanoff private estate, yielding about 10 million dollars a year. Beyond that his 'salary' amounted to another ten million dollars, besides many profitable investments abroad.

"There were small expenses to be deducted, such as some 2 1-2 million dollars a year to grand dukes and duchesses. But when everything had been taken into account, the Czar remained the richest monarch in the world, far ahead of the Turkish sultan, with his 7 1-2 milion dollars, or our own king, who is the poorest in pelf and palaces of all the Old World potentates."

A LUMBERMAN'S OPINION.

"I was troubled with palpitation of the heart and sleeplessness," writes Wm. Pritchard, Lumber Inspector, Lumsden Mills, Ont., "and used Dr. Chase's Nerve Food with very great benefit, as my whole system was strengthened and built up. Dr. Chase's Nerve Food forms new, rich blood and restores the feeble wasted nerve cells."

"Are you married, my man?" a woman asked a sailor.

"Yes, indeed, mum— married and fourteen children."

"Poor fellow, travelling about like this? And don't you ever get homesick?"

"Only when I'm hungry, mum."

Miss Annie Smith was called to Harvey during the past week to attend the funeral of a niece.

Mr. William Dainton, private, of Kingston, spent the week end with his family. This is Mr. Dainton's last visit before sailing for overseas service.

What might have been a very serious accident happened to Dr. N. T. Harrison and his driver, Mr. P. Roache, while on their way from Peterborough last Wednesday evening. While on their way from ePterborough the axle of the bugay broke, letting it to the ground, which frightened the horse, causing it to run away. Both occupants of the buggy were thrown out, but aside from a severe shaking up we are pleased to state neither are any the worse from their experience.

Miss Laura Macfarlane was in Peterborough on Saturday.

Privates J. Moore, W. Wedlock, J. Fletcher and J. Wedlock spent the week end with Keene friends.

Mrs. Joseph Dougherty and children of Peterborough, are visiting Mrs. Dougherty's parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Doris, this week.

Miss Bessie Reid of Peterborough, is the guest of the Misses McCrea.

Miss Elizabeth Stewart has returned to Peterborough after a few days' pleasant visit with her sister, Mrs. R. N. Johnston durin gthe past week.

Mr. H. McLachlan and Master William Wedlock were in Peterborough on Tuesday.

Judge Huycke of Peterborough, was in the village on Tuesday.

On last Thursday afternoon the Mission Band of the Presbyterian church held their annual Thank offering services in the basement of the church. Mrs. Horn and Mrs. Purdy of Cobourg were present and delivered splendid addresses on Missions, after which tea was served and the evening spent socially.

Mr. Lorne Anderson and sister, of Lindsay, visited Mr. and Mrs. A. D. Anderson this week.

Mrs. John Hore of Frobishire, Sask., is visiting friends in the community.

An Easy Way to Get Fat and Be Strong

DO YOU WANT TO GET FAT AND BE STRONG?

The trouble with most skin folks who wish to gain weight is that they insist in dragging their stomach or stuffing it with greasy foods; rubbing on useless "flesh creams," or following some foolish physical culture stunt, while the real cause of thinness goes untouched. You cannot get fat until your digestive tract assimilates the food you eat.

There is a preparation known to reliable druggists almost everywhere which seemingly embodies missing elements needed by the digestive organs to help them convert food into rich, fat-laden blood. This preparation is called Sargol and much remarkable testimony is given as to its successful use in flesh building. Sargol, which comes in the form of a small non-injurious tablet taken at meals, and mixing with the digesting food, tends to prepare its fat, flesh and muscle building elements so that the blood can readily accept and carry them to the starved portions of the body. You can readily picture the transformation that additional and previously lacking flesh making material should bring when your cheeks fill ing out, hollows about your neck, shoulders and bust disappearing and your taking on form 10 to 30 pounds of solid, healthy flesh. Sargol is harmless, inexpensive, efficient. All leading druggists of this vicinity have it and are authorized to refund your money if weight increase is not obtained as per the guarantee found in each large package.

NOTE:—Sargol is recommended only as a flesh builder and while excellent results in cases of nervous indigestion, etc., have been reported cure should be taken about using it unless a gain of weight is desired.

"Which one of the ten commandments did Adam break when he ate the apple?" asked the Sunday School teacher.

"He didn't break any," replied one little fellow.

"Why not?" queried the teacher.

"'Cause there wasn't any then."

ACID STOMACHS ARE DANGEROUS

"Acid" stomachs are dangerous because acid irritates and inflames the delicate lining of the stomach, thus hindering and preventing the proper action of the stomach, and leading to probably nine-tenths of the cases of stomach trouble from which people suffer. Ordinary medicines and medicinal treatments are useless in such cases, for they leave the source of the trouble, the acid in the stomach as dangerous as ever. The acid must be neutralized, and its formation prevented, and the best thing for this purpose is a tea-spoonful of bisurated magnesia, a simple antacid, taken in a little warm or cold water after eating, which not only neutralises the acid, but also prevents the fermentation from which acid is developed. Foods which ordinarily cause distress may be eaten with impunity if the meal is followed with a little bisurated magnesia, which can be obtained from any druggist, and should always be kept handy.

WHY DO POPPIES GROW ON THE BATTLEFIELDS?

There is a brisk discussion in France between the scientific people and the sentimental tradition-loving peasants, says the Manchester guardian. It has been noticed that all the battlefields of Northern France where blood was shed last year are awave with red poppies, which grow everywhere and border all the roads. The peasants see in it the aftermath of the blood shed in the fights of last autumn. Scientific men point out that it is merely the natural result of the fields being thrown out of cultivation on their side. The dreadful battle of Landen in 1693, when the victorious French and the defeated Allies left on the field between them some twenty thousand dead, produced a similar phenomenon. Lord Perth, writing to his sister in the following summer, described the appearance of the field in words which gave Macauley an opportunity for a characteristic flight. "During many months the ground was strewn with skulls and bones of horses and men. . . . . The next summer the soil fertilized by twenty thousand corpses, broke forth into millions of poppies. The traveller who on the road from St. Tron to Tirlemont saw that vast sheet of scarlet spreading from Landes in Neerwinden could hardly help fancying that the figurative prediction of the Hebrew prophet was literally accomplished and that the earth was disclosing her blood and refusing to cover the slain."

EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

CHILD'S DRESS.

By Anabel Worthington.

This very plain little frock receives a decorative touch from the bretelles and these form its only trimming. The blouse is altogether plain in cut and fastens down the centre of the back. The neck is high with a flat band finish, shaped to the outline. The bretelles are merely straight straps of the dress material, passed over the shoulders and ending at the waistline in both front and back. They may be made of contrasting material with good effect.

The sleeves have a small puff above the cuff at the wrist, but are otherwise plain. They may be made full length or as much shorter as individual taste dictates.

The skirt is a one piece design and is joined to the blouse with a flat box pleat panel in front and a similar one in the back. It closes under the edge of the pleat in the back.

These little frocks are excellent for school wear. They can be made of wash materials even in winter and also of serge, gabardine and of the many novelty fabrics. Plaids and stripes are always bright for the little people, and may form the entire dress or merel, the band around the neck and the bretelles.

The dress pattern, No. 7322, is cut in sizes 2, 4, 6 and 8 years. Medium size requires 2¾ yards of 36-inch material.

This pattern can be obtained by sending 10 cents to the office of this paper.

When ordering remember to give your name and address as well as the number and size of pattern required, and age of a child.

Price 15 cents, or 2 for 25c.

Will Not Stop Landing Of The Allied Troops

The French Soldiers Are Enthusiastically Received

GREECE READY TO PROTECT HERSELF AGAINST BULGARIA

King Constantine However Does Not Wish to Array Greece Against Germany and Austria---Mobilization of the Army to Continue and Serbo-Bulgarian Situation Will Be Watched Closely--More French Troops Land.

ROUMANIAN ARMY IS MOBILIZED

ATHENS, Oct. 6.—The formal resignation of the Venizelos Ministry was promptly accepted by the King. King Constantine is willing to go to almost any extreme to ensure Greece against any aggressive act by Bulgaria, but does not wish to array Greece against Germany and Austria, it was stated here to-day in explanation of his disagreement with Premier Venizelos. The mobilization of the Greek armies will continue, and a close watch will be kept on the Serbo-Bulgarian developments. The King, however, feared that certain steps were being undertaken by the Venizelos Ministry were leading the nation into an open alliance with France and England. It is stated here that the Roumanian army is mobilized and established on the Bulgarian frontier.

PARIS, Oct. 6.—More French troops, it is reported here, are landing at Salonika to-day, though the War Office has not confirmed this statement.

The Allies, it was officially intimated, count upon the support of the Greek people in their efforts to prevent the Bulgarian Czar from dominating the Balkans.

Official circles cling to the belief that the Greek Chamber will refuse to accept the new Ministry, and that Venizelos will be forced to reconsider his resignation.

"The resignation of Premier Venizelos, even if persisted in, cannot affect the interests of Greece nor stop the landing of troops by the Allies for the assistance of Serbia," it was stated. "The troops were enthusiastically acclaimed by the Greeks, who understand their cause is the Allies' cause, and that their cause will be defended in any event against Bulgarian enterprise. The Greek nation intends to remain faithful to the engagements."

PARIS, Oct. 6.—The resignation of Premier Venizelos will not stop the landing of the Allied troops for the defence of Serbia, it was stated officially here this afternoon.

Turkish troops are moving toward the Bulgarian border to join hands with the Bulgars, according to despatches received here to-day.

LONDON, Oct. 6.—Despatches from Athens this morning say the entire Greek Cabinet has resigned to-day. Censored messages declare that Venizelos quit not because of trouble with King Constantine but because of dissension in his own Cabinet. The French Cabinet met in extraordinary session this morning to deal with the situation.

PARIS, Oct. 6.—Salonika despatches to-day reported that French troops were greeted enthusiastically on their arrival at the Greek port.

"Greek officials and populace greeted the French troops as allies, and in the same manner in which the French received the British troops upon their arrival at Boulogne," it was stated.

LONDON, Oct. 6.—An official announcement from the French Government states that the sudden overthrow of the Greek Ministry will not halt her armies in the march toward Serbia, caused the greatest sensation in to-day's complicated Balkan situation.

Officials here would not discuss the French statement nor attempt to place any construction upon it. In some quarters it was taken to mean that France had been informed that the movement of her troops would not be interfered with by the Greek King. In others it was construed as a defiance to King Constantine.

LONDON, Oct. 6.—Petrograd despatches this afternoon say that Bulgaria has rejected the ultimatum of Russia and has sent an ultimatum to Serbia demanding the ceding of Macedonia forthwith.

ROME, Oct. 6.—Vessuvius has suddenly become violently active, according to Naples despatches to-day. Strong earthquakes occurred, rocking villages around Naples, but no serious damage is reported so far.

LONDON, Oct. 6.—Major-General Sir Archibald James Murray has been appointed Chief of the Imperial General Staff at the Army Headquarters in London, according to the Times.

Murray has already established a reputation for gallantry in the present war, having been twice praised by Marshal French in official reports.

(Willison Cable, Copyright)

LONDON, Oct. 6.—The roll of honour in the British papers today includes the name of Captain Hallam, of the 18th Battalion, the first officer of the 2nd Division killed in France. The division's baptism of fire was a severe one, the shells being heavy along the whole Canadian front. But reports from the Canadian Red Cross and other official sources show no unusual increase in the number of casualties, a fact which completely sets at rest persistent rumours here that the Canadians were engaged in the Allies' advance. Heavy fighting is anticipated, but not until the real advance of the Allies takes place. The present operations are only another test by the Allies of the strength of the German lines, though made on a greater scale, and with greater success than any preceding advance. The cavalry officers here on leave for the last two weeks, including Lieut. Roy Nordheimer, L. P. Sherwood and "Billy" McCarthy, have all returned to France. Letters from the front report no unusual incidents. The officers of the Second Division write with much satisfaction of the steadiness and coolness of their men under fire.

THIS PHOTOGRAPH WAS PICKED OP IN THE TRENCHES

Picture Sent by Mrs. G. P. Curtis to Her Brother at the Front is Returned to the Examiner

HE WAS WOUNDED

Some time early in the year Mrs. George P. Curtis, 502 Stewart Street, city, sent a postcard photograph of herself to her brother, Pte. H. Johnston of the Peterborough first contingent detachment. The picture has just came back under very interesting circumstances.

The other day the Examiner received the card in a field service envelope, inscribed as follows:

"I picked this up in a firing trench at Givenchy a week ago.
Yours truly,
J. L. Oedaker."

The photograph had been stamped in one corner "Roy Studio, Peterborough, Canada." This gave the soldier who found it a clue as to the address of the man who lost it, and the finder forwarded it to the Examiner for identification purposes.

The Examiner soon succeeded in locating the original of the photograph. Mrs. Curtis, whose husband, Pte. Geo. Curtis, was invalided home from Salisbury, it was learned, had sent the picture to her brother, who left here with the 57th detachment, and was later transferred to the 10th Canadian Battalion and was wounded at Ypres. He was buried in a dug-out by the explosion of a shell, and sustained a number of wounds around the head and shoulders. After being treated in hospital at Rouen and in England, Pte. Johnston returned to the front some time ago, but a letter received by Mrs. Curtis from him today, states that his health has again broken down.

It is not known just how he lost the photograph, and whether the man who found it belonged to a Canadian or British regiment is another point on which there is no information.

Most Thrilling War Story Ever Seen Here

To-day the most thrilling and sensational war picture ever shown is the five-reel film entitled "Northern Lights" at the Royal Theatre.

A short synopsis of the plot is that Capt. Gray of the U. S. Army is wounded. Mrs. Gray, who is soon to be a mother, hears of the catastrophy. This affects her so greatly that the pre-natal effect causes her son, born later, to be a coward. The son joins the Army and is dismissed for cowardice and imprisoned. Later on during an Indian uprising he volunteers for a most hazardous ride through the Indian lines. He shows that he has lived down his cowardice and saves the situation. Wedding bells ring.

HAVE YOU DONE YOUR BIT FOR THE BAND?

The Overseas Band Fund is growing day by day, but for the benefit of those who have not yet contributed it may be pointed out that a large amount of money is yet required. The people of Peterborough will owe the band more than the subscriptions given by next spring as payment for the enjoyable music which they are giving, and which they will continue to give during the winter. The band will be here until next spring, and will be heard daily. Surely that is worth paying for. Let us have your subscription as soon as possible. Only about a quarter of the amount needed has yet been subscribed. Have you done your bit yet?

BATTERY BOYS ARE GIVEN SEND-OFF ON LAST VISIT HOME

Were Escorted to the Station This Morning by Peterborough Overseas Band and Battalion--Affecting Scenes at the Station--Six Recruits Passed Yesterday---General Hughes at Kingston---To-day's Military News.

Peterborough said farewell last night and this morning to her sons who are leaving for overseas in the draft from the 33rd Battery. Last night there was a parade and farewell addresses in the armouries and this morning the batterymen were escorted to the G. T. R. station by the band and men of the Peterborough Overseas Battalion and given a rousing send-off.

The men fell in at the armouries at 7.30 o'clock and Hon. Major Davidson, chaplain of the 57th Regiment, conducted a brief but impressive service of prayer after which the Overseas Band played the National Anthem. The parade to the station was then formed, headed by the band, with the artillery draft next and 200 men of the overseas battalion forming the rear guard. In spite of the early hour there were many people on the streets, as the soldier boys marched to the train, while a big crowd gathered at the G.T.R. station to say the last farewell. Using a baggage truck as a platform, Hon. Major Davidson in a brief address said that the citizens of Peterborough were proud of every one of the men she was sending out and knew that the boys of the 33rd Battery would be a credit to Peterborough wherever they were. He wished them God speed and promised them a worthy reception when they returned.

His Worship Mayor Buller on behalf of the city expressed the admiration of Peterborough generally for the gallant lads who were leaving to represent her on the far away battle fields. He assured them that they need not worry about those dependent upon them who they were leaving behind. The city would do its part in seeing that they were well looked after. His Worship then called for three cheers for the boys of the battery, which were given with a will, followed by cheers for His Majesty the King.

There were many affecting farewells before the train pulled out. Relatives knew that the boys would not be home again before leaving for England, and that knowledge made the parting wrench even more severe than when they left to join the battery at Barriefield. The realization that some at least of the gallant lads were looking at Peterborough for the last time, was present with every one and had its effects on the final scenes at the station.

As the train slowly drew away from the platform the Overseas Band played "We'll Never Let the Old Flag Fall," while the men of the Peterborough Battalion, their caps waving in the air, led in the cheering for the Battery boys, who waved their hands in reply until the train was out of sight.

Last Night's Farewell.

Hundreds of citizens turned out last night in spite of the threatening weather to do honour to the battery boys. The parade, which left the armouries at 7.30 o'clock, was the biggest procession of khaki clad men Peterborough had seen. The Overseas Band and the Bugle Band of the 57th Regiment supplied the music. Forty of the artillery draft, in charge of Sergt. Orme Cavanah, were next in line, while the overseas infantry detachment was under the command of Capt J. R. Munro. The route of the parade was down George street to Hunter street, west to Aylmer street, south to Charlotte street, east to George street and back to the armouries via George and Murray streets.

At the armouries, where a huge crowd quickly gathered, brief farewell addresses were delivered by J. H. Burnham, M.P., His Honour Judge Huycke and Adj. McElhiney.

Mr. Burnham reminded the boys of the battery that they were going to fight in a just and righteous cause. If they were called upon to give up their lives they could not lay them down in a greater cause than that for which the British Empire was fighting. "The heart-felt wishes of every man, woman and child, not only in Peterborough, but in Canada, will go with you," remarked Mr. Burnham, "and when you return, as we pray you all will, you will be given a reception such as true British patriots deserve."

Adjutant McElhiney said that the people of Peterborough were very proud of her boys in the 33rd Battery and were confident that they would uphold the good name of Peterborough wherever they went. They were leaving to do battle for the noblest and best of causes and Adjt. McElhiney asked them to go away unworried about their dependents, who would be looked after as were the wives and children of those who had gone before them.

His Honour Judge Huycke, whose son, Lieut. G. M. Huycke, is one of the officers who will be in charge of the battery draft, was the last speaker. In beginning His Honour urged the men of the battery to live up to the principles and ideals of the song just played by the band, "Oh Canada," and he was confident that they would do so. He had been told, he said, that the 33rd Battery was the best battery in Kingston and had replied, "Why shouldn't they be. More than half of them come from Peterborough?" "Peterborough is proud of her men in the 33rd Battery," said Judge Huycke, "and proud of all her boys who have gone to the front. I wish we could say we are just as proud of the boys who are staying at home. But we're not — we're not proud of some of them."

The boys of the 33rd Battery he advised to be gentle as well as strong, and to protect all those who needed assistance. One who was very dear to him and one who respected and loved every one of the boys in the battery was going with them, and he asked them to help and support him in doing his duty, as he would do his best to help and direct them.

"The good wishes, hopes and prayers of the people of Peterborough will go with you wherever you go."

Cheers for the battery draft were given by the crowd, after which the latter gave three cheers for Judge Huycke and his son Lieut. G. M. Huycke.

The National Anthem brought the meeting to a close.

The Peterborough members of the draft include the following: Sergt. Orme Cavanah, Corporals W. Hawthorne, J. Hawthorne, Bombardiers Alf. Hagerman, Gray, E. Graham, Gunners Clancy, Dunsford, Buddy Ball, Jackson, Hardill, Withers, R. V. O'Brien, H. V. Crowe, S. Taylor, Hargrove, Dougherty, Girvan, Parks, Carr, Mowry, Chambers, Blanchard, Doupe, Dounton, S. Hagerman, Lebar, Hill, McGregor, Knowles, Gillard, Laing, C. Hagerman, Butcher, A. Taylor, Smith. The names of the other members could not be obtained.

Yesterday's results in the recruiting line were not so good as on Monday, but at that five recruits for the Peterborough battalion were added yesterday. There were a number of other applicants who went down before the medical test. Of the five who passed four were born in Canada; four live in the city and the fifth in Norwood. The list was as follows:

INFANTRY FIGHTING HAS STOPPED IN THE WEST

Official French Statement To-day Reports an Entire Cessation of Infantry Action Last Night and To day.

HEAVY CANNONADING

PARIS, Oct. 6.—Entire cessation of infantry actions along the France-Flanders front last night and early to-day was reported by the War Office this afternoon.

There was heavy cannonading south of Givenchy Woods, and at several points on the Champagne, Argonne, and Lorraine fronts.

The French improved their positions slightly near LaFolie, by the use of hand grenades, fighting being confined entirely to communication trenches.

PARIS, Oct. 6.—A battle of a decisive character is believed to be imminent on the Anglo-French front.

Artillery fire has been breaking over the trenches on both sides for 48 hours without interruption.

The Germans are massing reserves to meet the expected attacks and to launch a counter offensive.

The greatest activity is reported from Labasse, south to Arras. The Germans have been shelling British positions for many hours, evidently in preparation for an infantry thrust.

Along the Champagne front the Teutons have emerged from their trenches at several points, planning bomb raids on the French works.

THE ARRIVAL OF 21ST BATTALION NEAR FIRING LINE

Unit in Which Many Peterbore' Men Are Were Warmly Welcomed by the People of France When They Landed

A LONG DAY'S MARCH

The arrival of the 21st battalion, which contains many Peterborough men, in France, is described in an interesting letter from Pte. A. W. Symes of that unit, to Mr. P. B. Symes, of Ottawa. His letter was dated Sept. 19th and said he expected his battalion would go into the trenches on the following Tuesday.

His letter continues

"We had a safe, comparatively calm trip to France, and marched through the French port with bands playing next morning to a rest camp beyond the town. We were not only surprised but delighted with the treatment of the French people, in view of the thousands of British troops who must have passed through ahead of us since the war began. When we halted on the way up a hill they brought out bottle after bottle of their best vin blanc and gave a small glassful to each man while it lasted. We remained in camp until about 7.30 p.m. and then marched three miles to a freight station, finding the going hard owing to the heat and the weight of our packs. The French engines and equipment seem larger than anything in England, and almost as big as the ones in Canada. We were packed into stock cars like sardines (44 men to the car) but nobody complained so long as we had room for both feet at once. After a journey of several hours we got out at a station, and helped to haul our transport waggons out of the freight shed, finally marching away about 3 in the morning over a road paved with cobble stones and lined on either side with tall elm and poplar trees which seem to be a feature of this part of the country. We marched all day—with frequent rests—passing through villages and towns as well as agricultural districts. The crops look very good and are being harvested by old men, women and children, besides men unfit for the army. The hops, which are strung on wires and rise to a height of 25 feet above the ground, are strange to Canadians.

"About 5 p.m., after the hardest day the 21st has ever known, we were billetted in farm houses (or rather outside of them), for the night, some 15 miles behind the firing line.

Number of inspections—706

Number of pupils excluded because of uncleanliness—14.

Number of houses visited—21.

A great many pupils received dental attention during the month, and a few medical attention.

FAMOUS MOTION PICTURE COMING

The Grand Opera House announces that the celebrated motion picture, "The Birth of a Nation," which was a feature of the Ottawa Exhibition and which was shown for three weeks at the Royal Alexandra Theatre in Toronto, will appear at the Grand on Nov. 15, 16 and 17. An orchestra of twenty musicians accompany the picture.

The Investigation Will Continue

Crown Attorney Hatton is in Possession of Evidence Relating to Havelock Case

Crown Attorney Hatton has received a transcribed report of the proceedings in the Havelock case which concerns the death of May Lindsay. A Coroner's Jury brought in a verdict of foul play arising, it is alleged out of an illegal operation. It is altogether likely that a Provincial detective will be detailed to continue the investigation which may produce some startling revelations.

QUAKER OATS IS RUNNING FULL CAPACITY

Fifty Girls Could Secure Employment at Once at Good Wages—An Interview With the Superintendent

Learning of exceptional activity at the Quaker Oats Company plant, an Examiner representative had an interview with Mr. W. H. Denham, superintendent, this morning, and elicited the fact that the company was filled up with orders and that October and November business would be exceptionally heavy, necessitating running the mill at capacity. Just at present fifty girls are required by the company with the prospect of a long stretch of work. When asked what wages were paid to female labour Mr. Denham stated the wage for wrapping was 85c per day, and as soon as the girl was acquainted with the work she was put on piece work, and allowed to make all she could earn. An average girl should be able in a short while to make $1.20 per day. Some of the more experienced are able to make $1.80 per day and even more. The more the girl makes the better it pleases the company as it enables them to make deliveries of the goods on time.

Peterborough should be able to supply all the female labour required by the different factories of this city, but if it cannot it means that some orders must go elsewhere as non-delivery in a great many instances cancels orders, and as a result the business is lost to the city.

No girl in this city should be out of employment at the present time. All who are looking for a position can start at once on application to the Quaker Oats plant, Hunter St.

"Peterborough Presents Possibilities Unsurpassed."

WEDNESDAY, OCT. 6, 1915

A CONFESSION.

Premier McBride says he welcomes the inquiry into his purchase of submarines for the Dominion Government because it will give him an opportunity of revealing to Canada "the nakedness of the defence of the Pacific seaboard." This is a patriotic attitude for Sir Richard to take. We should not be surprised to hear the British Columbia Premier, openly, as he is inferentially approving the Laurier naval policy, and openly reproving the Borden Government for not putting the Laurier Naval Act into force, as he sought to do in part, even if it was only by the purchase at good figures, of submarines which the Chilean Government rejected. Facts are hard things to turn aside in the process of teaching logical conclusions.

WHO IS TO BLAME.

We feel humiliated over the arrest of active service soldiers in Peterborough. We expect better things from men who have the manliness to enlist, than that they should soil their uniform by conduct unworthy a soldier. A street fight was staged yesterday in London, Ont., provoked by the arrest of two soldiers for disorderly conduct while under the influence of drink. We must not altogether blame the soldier; he is human and is not free from the human weakness to which men much higher placed, and much more highly endowed often yield. The blame rests almost wholly upon the Ontario Government. It places drink before the soldier; puts a temptation in his way that he does not resist. The Government fought against a proposal to remove by closing the bar, the temptation of drink, from the soldier under arms, as well as the soldier in the prosaic battle of life. It has not had the courage to close the open bar as a necessary and strongly indicated war measure. Premier Hearst is virtually guilty of the act of keeping the bottle to the soldiers lips. A mother who would put a razor in the hands of her baby as a play thing, would be doing a no more foolish and harmful thing than the Ontario Government is doing in keeping the temptation flagrantly before the active service soldier.

THE LOAN AND SOMETHING BESIDES.

The British and French loan in the United States is over-subscribed; and there is no doubt that if another loan is proposed it will meet with a like liberal answer. Of late we have not heard much of the protests of the pro-German element against the loan. Their hostile agitation was given short shift. The people of the United States (with money) are commercially minded. They know a good investment when they see it; and will not tolerate any hyphenated interference that threatens dividends or profits. The government may be short on protests against the outrage upon the neutrality of Belgium, which is in principle an outrage upon the sacred thing upon which the United States is founded and for which fratricidal war was waged more than a century ago. The cry, however, is hands off when profits are menaced. It is no risky statement to assert that the Government of the United States in its halting attitude of submissive neutrality, does not interpret the heart of the best and numerically greatest element of the country. No doubt the popular mind chafes under the buffettings on both cheeks which the powers that be make Uncle Sam meekly accept. The onlooking world, knowing the strength and national pride and sense of dignity of the United States, and the self-respect of the people, are astonished, not that it does not risk actual war, but that it does not wage moral warfare by formal and high protest against outrages upon its own dignity and outrage upon the foundations of its national structure. Strong, plain worded protest against German disregard of the elementary ethics of civilized warfare; against her flagrant breach of faith; against her outrageous violation of all that humanity, and all solicitude for human liberty hold dear, could well be made. This seems to be more called for than cautiously worded diplomatic finicking with words, when things demand ringing protest that would show that the greatest democracy of the earth is not greatest in evasion of moral responsibility, but among the greatest of the nations in moral courage.

MONEY AND MILITARISM.

Henry Ford, the head of the great auto industry of that name, not only drives his cars with gasoline, but uses gas to advertise his business. He has raised a great cry of protest against the loan to the Allies, as an aid to militarism which he denounces, with more consistency. He objects to the loan because it encourages militarism. He declares in an interview that "the more money the Allies get the longer the war will last." He is wrong in that; for the Allies are fighting to end the war, and the more money and men they get the sooner the war will be over; the sooner the monster of militarism will be crushed, and crushed forever. The militarism Mr. Ford denounces in connection with the loan is the benign militarism that is fighting to destroy malignant militarism.

THE CANDID FRIEND.

The Toronto Telegram, candidly Conservative, though somewhat of a journalistic Ishmaelite, has the courage of its convictions and is not no friend to Liberalism, it has the courage of its convictions and is not afraid to stage the candid friend act. It points out the defects of the Ontario Government in these rather trenchant words:

"In the defect of being blind, small, short-sighted and extravagant, and in the vice of failure to be as big as its opportunities, the provincial administration of Ontario has proved a bigger failure than the civic government of Toronto."

If a Liberal newspaper had dared declare in cold type that the Ontario Government is as bad, weak, and degenerate, as this staunchly Conservative journal declares it to be, its language would be ascribed to pure party malice. It would be a pleasure, for the good of the province, to be justified in criticising and condemning the above language of the party journal, as strongly as it criticises and condemns the Government of Ontario. This is hardly possible.

This Soldier Sold His Horse For Cigarettes

LONDON, Sept. 30.—An officer writing home to a friend on September 6, says: "I have now been in the first line of trenches for three days, and though we have had plenty of firing and all manner of shells hurled at us, we have not had many casualties. Our cheif loss was an officer who was killed to-day in a sap. The bullet which laid the poor fellow out was, of course, from a sniper, and came clean through a loop-hole. You realise the sad side of the whole business when your pals, who are so cheery and full of pluck and courage, go down.

"It seems so silly to spend one's time dodging bullets, although I hope our friends who keep popping away at a distance from fifty to seventy yards are not so lucky with their dodging as we are. I can hear shouting now and then, and their favorite taunt is: "When are you coming over?" Perhaps they will be sorry when we do arrive. They try to alarm us now and then by holding up canvas sheets with alarming war 'communiques to the effect that our Allies are losing thousands upon thousands, but we laugh at their ridiculous efforts.

"The men here are very good fellows and are full of anecdotes. One was telling me to-day that at the time of the great retreat he was lucky enough to find a horse, which he mounted. In this way he was able to sleep a little while travelling along. But the rich part of the story was the fact that he sold his horse next day to an artilleryman for a packet of woodbines! How's that for a price?"

AT 72 FIGHTS FOR FRANCE SECOND TIME

According to the Paris Figaro the oldest volunteer in the French army is Alcide Verd born in April, 1843, at Rompont (Ardeche). He already had celebrated his seventy-second birthday when he became attached to the recruiting bureau at Troyes. A detachment recently was sent from there to fill gaps in the ranks of the Forty-seventh Territorial regiment, and Verd was so insistent on going to the front with the younger men that the commanding officer finally consented to enlist him for active service.

The aged volunteer now is a soldier in the Seventh company of the regiment, which is stationed somewhere in the trenches of the first line of defence. He is doing his duty as efficiently as any of his comrades in arms, whose unbounded admiration the spry septuagenarian has won through his vivacity and never failing good humor.

Alcide Verd has seen war before. He fought the fathers of his present adversaries during the Franco-Prussian conflict, in which he took part up to the ominous battle of Sedan, when he was made a prisoner and with thousands of others sent into captivity in Silesia.

CONNECTING LINK BETWEEN "TOMMY" AND CANADIAN SOCKS

How Heroic Women Promptly Reply to Pathetic Appeals From Men in the Trenches

To give the socks knit by the Canadian mother to the Canadian son in the trenches is, briefly stated, the object in life of the Canadian Field Comforts Commission. "Socks" of course means also every possible comfort sent, including shirts, mufflers, gloves, tobacco, chocolate, writing paper, and even photographs. The khaki yarn that knits the socks is now a heart-coloured line binding Canadian womanhood to the trenches, and the C.F.C. Commission must see that this line is kept unbroken.

Many women in Canada, through the multiplication of societies and leagues for patriotic work, do not yet clearly understand the Canadian Field Comforts Commission. Until they do, the commission, in so far as those women are concerned, is unable to fulfil its mission of comfort. When it is understood it will be seen that it in no way conflicts with any existing society. It is a boomerang of comfort, comforting the knitter with the assurance that the socks have been delivered, and the recipient with the socks themselves.

"Those who knew what had happened in South Africa were very anxious that it should not occur again," says Miss Joan Arnoldi, one of the C.F.C. Commissioners in explaining its origin. "Great quantities of field comforts were sent out there which never reached the men. You ask any South African veteran; he will tell you of the day, of the weeks and months that he wanted fresh shirts, fresh socks, etc. He knew where they were, but he did not know how to get them. There was no connecting link between the man and the socks."

The Canadian Field Comforts Commission forms this connecting link. Miss Joan Arnoldi, who with Miss Mary Plummer, both well-known Torontonians, was appointed in charge of the work of the commission, by General Hughes, is leaving this month for England to resume active work there, and while here told the story of the commission, its origin, work, and plans.

Last year Canada had 20,000 men at the front, and the work in Canada and England was strenuous. This year we have now 45,000 and unlimited possibilities of more. All Canadian women will be working to prepare the men for the winter campaign, and the work of Christmas distribution is also hovering in the offering. For this reason and for the comfort of the Canadian women who knit, the following facts are presented in concise form:

Given Free Transport.

The Militia Department has organized the Canadian Field Comforts Commission to enable the women of Canada to use the military organization for forwarding extra supplies to their soldiers.

The commission has free Government transport. Packages should be sent marked "Charges collect." Supplies should be addressed "Canadian Field Comforts Commission, Moore Barracks, Shorncliffe, England," and the shipping addresses are: Summer, care of F. McCourt, Esq., Dominion Iron and Steel Co. warehouse, Wellington, Basin, Montreal, P.Q., and winter, care of Hector McInnes, Esq., Red Cross Warehouse, Halifax, N.S.

According to Miss Plummer and Miss Arnoldi, who are in constant communication with the Canadians at the front, the requirements are socks, underwear, shirts, handkerchiefs, small towels, leather boot laces, books, candles, candies, cocoa, soup tablets, notepaper, toilet paper, pencils, games, cards, tobacco, gum, etc.

Everything sent to the troops from the depot is addressed to the company, battery, or section commander, as this is the officer who knows what is and is not in his men's kit, and who will see to immediate distribution. Parcels sent through the commission to specially designated regiments are forwarded direct to those regiments. Great care is taken in this matter.

It is not advisable to send parcels for individual soldiers through the commission. They go quicker and more directly posted to the individual.

"We get special requests from the officer at the front for all sorts of things," said Miss Arnoldi. "Sometimes it is for the staple things, such as socks, shirts, etc., and other times it may be for something fancied by that particular regiment. When a request comes in from an officer we feel that that must go out at once. He has not asked for something he wants in two or three weeks' time. They may not be there in two or three weeks' time, so we try to post whatever they ask for that day.

For Sick Men in Trench.

"Not long ago a chaplain wrote asking for malted milk, Bovril, and hot water bottles. This was for the men who were ill in the regiment, but not ill enough to be sent back to the hospital. Perhaps they had heavy colds or bad chills. He said he had written to two associations in London and they had both referred him to someone else. Those things went to that man that night, and he was very grateful. We try to send out two bales monthly to every unit, but of course this all depends on the supplies.

"These bales contain socks for every man, and a percentage of other articles, and this plan has been very highly recommended by all the returned wounded officers to whom we have spoken. The bales contain socks, shirts, underwear, handkerchiefs, towels, bootlaces, notepaper, pencils, pipes, tobacco, candles, candies, cocoa, books, toothbrushes, and soap, and anything else which may have come in for the men.

"The life of a pair of socks at the front is a short one indeed. We came to the conclusion that the men ate socks. In the winter mufflers are also much valued, as they mean something warm and dry under their continually wet jackets, and we never had enough gloves and half gloves. The latter are always in demand as the men can do their work in them, handle guns, etc."

Naturally the C.F.C. Commission is deluged with letters of gratitude for comforts received, and the blessings of the men in the trenches are showered down on the heads of Canadian women in a more than merited manner. But among all these warm letters of thanks from the men who are fighting for us, one of the most pathetic is a letter of appeal from a bomb company which had not known where to ask for comforts and had hitherto been overlooked.—E. S. M., in Toronto Star Weekly.

CLERGYMEN GROWING SCARCE IN GERMANY

The perennial subject of the scarcity of clergymen in Germany has recently been enlivened by somebody's suggestion that wounded officers who are no longer able to serve at the front take up the study of theology. To this proposal, however, the objection is raised that "the office of a clergyman requires spiritual endowments seldom to be found in officers, else they would never have yielded to their desire to become officers."

Meanwhile the scarcity of clergymen is growing greater and is expected to become still more pronounced. It is mentioned that the sons of clergymen no longer choose the ministry as their calling to the same extent as some years ago. Fifteen years ago there were still 344 clergymen's sons studying theology at the universities to every 100,000 clergymen, but by 1912 the number had already dropped to 283.

It is said that, owing to the lack of clergymen, many churches in villages are being attached to others in larger towns, after which they have occassional services held by the clergymen from those more important churches. Not only is the tendency of young men to choose other calling than the ministry, but even those who choose it show a marked inclination later on to switch off into something else. It is noted that nearly one-third of the regular school inspectors in Prussia are former clergymen; and not a few ministers also have abandoned their calling to take positions in teachers' seminaries.

CANADA THRICE BLESSED.

English newspapers pay eloquent tribute to the success attained by the Canadian sergeant as recruiting agent in London. A member of the first Canadian contingent, he was wounded in Flanders and has since devoted all his energies to the work of obtaining volunteers for the front. His direct, "sledge hammer" methods have proved most effective.

The name of this very efficient young officer is Niemeyer. The moral of the tale is that Canada is evidently free from the affliction of the "hyphen."—N.Y. Herald.

THOSE "OVERSUBSCRIBED" GERMAN LOANS.

Persons having knowledge of conditions in Germany are not particularly impressed by the reports that came via Sayville concerning the "enthusiasm" with which the German people have subscribed to the war loans. A writer in the Boston Transcript tells of the plaints of Germans there over the methods resorted to by their government in taking the money of the people for war purposes, quoting prominent Germans as saying:—

For years we have paid our heavy war taxes without complaint. Then came the war levy in 1913, forcing every property holder to pay into the war fund five per cent of his entire capital—more than a year's income! We have hardly recovered from that and now comes a big war loan to which we are forced to subscribe. We have no option! the government simply takes twenty-five per cent. of our bank deposits and holdings and writes us down as subscribers to the loan for that amount. And this is only the beginning!"

All of which may be valuable testimony to German government efficiency, but hardly bears out the roseate assertions of the official press agency concerning the popular enthusiasm with which this mulcting process has been greeted.

Weighing Words.

An Advertising Expert says, "The man who weighs his words, says what he means and no more, is the one who gets a reputation for solidity in his community. Advertisers should remember this. Exaggeration is futile—it does not convince. Aside from the morality of the matter, it does not pay to insult the intelligence or stretch the credulity of your public. Get a reputation for truthful advertising, and people will go a long way out of their road to do business with you."

Good advice and fortunately followed by nearly all our local advertisers.

THE WORLD OF SPORT

WESTON LACROSSE TEAM MET OLD-TIME EXPERIENCES

The Weston lacrosse team, twice winners of the Intermediate O.A.L.A. championship, have been mixed in two of the most unfortunate instances of the amateur lacrosse year.

At Campbellford the first semi-final game, and at Orangeville the last of the final series, wound up in young riots. The players got into a general mix-up, and the referee, Frank Doyle was assaulted and abused and the game generally wound up in disgrace.

Is it any wonder that Canada's national game is hard to rehabilitate when such disgraceful scenes mark important games which draw big crowds?

A Change in Spirit.

In neither instances was the Weston club to blame. The time was when Weston was just as tough a lacrosse town as any one on the map. Visting teams had to battle the crowd and the team both there, but all this is changed now. The management of the Weston Club made a dead set for clean surroundings—and they have had it. The game on the field was for the players and referee. The crowd did not interfere, no matter what happened. Any spectator who made a hostile move or stuck a foot over the fence was told where he got off at in a hurry, and a sense of sportsmanship was pounded into heads which had imbibed that "win at any cost" spirit.

Does the same thing obtain at Campbellford and Orangeville? Not by a long chalk. At Campbellford the crowd objected to the referee's decisions and mobbed him. Fine stuff! Several score hoodlums are allowed to attack one defenceless man. If the real atmosphere of sport had prevailed around Campbellford such row dies, who never have dared set foot on the playing field, and the ringleaders would have been arrested.

And the same goes for Orangeville. What inducement is there for Weston to take a crowd of supporters up to Orangeville again, when their ladies are abused right in the grand stand by Orangeville women? What sort of a spirit is abroad in a town when one woman will pull another's hair or her hat down over her ears with an umbrella? Things like that happened in the grand stand, to say nothing of more substantial abuse handed to male supporters of the Weston team. It is even charged that Manager Campbell of Orangeville took unfair advantage of his official position to order Rountree, the Tecumseh player, removed from the field for coaching his home town team—something Campbell was doing himself, the Weston players say.

That used to be great stuff in the old days. Campbellford and Orangeville should be blotted off the O. A. L. A. map, and, by the same token, a slam like that for a certain Toronto club, which does not provide better protection for visiting teams, is due, too.—Toronto Star.

"Gunboat" Smith Made Sorry Show of Big Al Reich

NEW YORK, Oct. 6.—Showing a return to the form which made him the most-feared heavyweight in the ring, "Gunboat" Smith easily defeated Al Reich, former amateur champion in a ten round bout at the St. Nicholas Rink. The contest went the full ten rounds, but the expected knockout was among the missing. Ten straight rounds went to Smith's credit, and he 183 and Reich 8½ pounds over the two century mark. The fighting was fast 183 ad Reich 8½ pounds over the two century mark. The fighting was fast throughout, with Smith setting the pace from the outset. He forced Reich to cover repeatedly, and so clever was the big fellow's defence that Smith was unable to land with his deadly right.

The Gunner came out of the contest without a mark, and will be in perfect condition for his meeting with Colin Bell at Montreal. Reich was badly marked, Smith using an effective straight left that nearly always found its mark.

CLAIM SPALDING WAS INFLUENCED IN MAKING WILL

SAN DIEGO, Cal., Oct. 6.—Contest of the will of the late A. G. Spalding, baseball pioneer ad millionaire sporting goods merchant, was to be entered immediately after the filing of the will for probate, by Spalding's son, Keith, who charges that the will was procured through the "undue influence of his wife, Elizabeth Churchill Spalding, and Mrs. Katherine Tingley, head of the Universal Brotherhood and Theosophical Society at Point Lima, Cal.

Spalding died at his residence in Point Lima, September 9 last. The contest alleges that for several years before his death Spalding was not in his right mind; that his mental and physical strength was impaired by advancing age, by sickness and by business worries.

About $5,000,000 was accumulated by Spalding and his first wife, who died in 1899, according to the contest. This, says Keith Spalding, was the result of the joint industry of his father and mother and was accumulated before the second marriage, which took place in 1900.

Immediately after the marriage, the document continues, Mrs. Spalding persuaded her husband to take up his residence within the grounds of the Theosophical Institute. The purpose of this, it is alleged, was to alienate Spalding from his son. Mrs. Elizabeth Churchill Spalding, the widow, who filed the will for probate and who was named as executrix, estimated the estate to be worth $800,000. Keith Spalding was, under the terms of the will, to receive $100,000, of which amount he had already received $65,000. The adopted son, Albert Spalding, was also bequeathed $100,000, of which he had received $1,000. The remainder of the estate was left to Mrs. Spalding ....

No Apprehension For Future As Far As Munitions Is Concerned

Now Have Plenty of Munitions British Under-Secretary for War Says—Allies Will Finish the Job

LONDON, Oct. 5.—"The success of the present operations is such as to encourage the hope that it is the beginning of the end," said H. J. Tennant, Parliamentary Under-Secretary for War, to the correspondent of The Mail and Empire to-day. In reply to a question about the probable duration of the war, Mr. Tennant said:

"Unlike the Germans, we are not so meticulous as to fix a date or a time-table of days or hours. All we say is that we have set our minds and plans to a definiet purpose, and, horrible as may be the loss of our sons, of those we hold dearest, we are ready to sacrifice even more in the accomplishment of our purpose.

"Although it may be too early in the day to express much, it must be patent to all who have watched the progress of recent events that a very good start has been made to press the enemy back and secure the eventual evacuation of Belgium.

"One hopes it will not escape notice how fine a part has been played by the officers and men of all arms in the allied armies. It is not easy or desirable to single out any particular force for a larger measure of praise than is given to the rest, but it would be less than human to withhold one's admiration from the fine performance of the men of our new armies. These men do not differ from the other elements which go to make up the British forces—all are made up under the voluntary system—but they are of a somewhat special character in that they contain perhaps more of the characteristic middle classes with the so-called lower classes of the British nation.

"As is well known all these voluntary armies are of a magnitude unparalled in the history of this country and much greater than had ever, or indeed, could possibly have been anticipated in time of peace. England was prepared only for defence not for offence. Many of us feel that in effectiveness and fine spirit a smaller army raised on the voluntary system is preferable to a large force raised on the system of compulsion.

"One might, of course, carry this to the breaking point, but the national temperament, historical association and the geographical position of this country have all gone to create in the people an ingrained preference for voluntary effort.

Plenty of Munitions.

"The future of the allied armies' munitions is assured. New machinery has been set up and ample provision made so that for to-morrow and next year and the succeeding years as long as it may be necessary, our armies and those of our allies will be adequately equipped. During the recent offensive the expenditure of ammunition has been on an enormous scale. Let me say, however, there need be no apprehension for the future.

"I desire to emphasize significantly that our last shot has not been fired by a long way. Germany's boast was that her west front was impenetrable. We have shown the fallacy of that. It is not our habit to boast, but we have a job on that we shall finish and finish as it should be finished."

An Able Exponent.

"Dr. Shorter preached a sizzling sermon to-day."

"Yes?"

"I never before heard a man use so much invective."

"What was his subject?"

"'Temperance.'"—Exchange.

Battery Boys Are Given Send-off

S. Brazendale, 110 Murray Street, born in England, one year in the 57th Regiment.

Dan. Allen, 537 Rogers Street, born in Canada.

Garfield Torrance, Park Street, born in Canada. Five years in the 57th Bugle Band.

Howard McMaster, Norwood, born in Canada, two years in the 40th Regiment.

Maurice McMahon, 531 Concession Street, born in Canada.

Capt. R. P. Watt and Bandmaster Hughes were successful in their visit to Toronto yesterday, purchasing a Class A set of drums for the Peterborough Band. A bass drum and two snare drums were purchased, as well as a set of cymbals. They will be here in time for presentation to the band at Friday nights' concert in Brock Street Rink. The other instruments will not be available for several weeks.

Pte. Ed. Mowry of Peterborough, who is a member of the 35th Battalion, C.E.F., Niagara Camp, is home for a few days on leave. The 35th Battalion is one of the twelve battalions to go overseas in the near future.

The Grillia hockey team, intermediate champions of the O. H. A. last winter, has set a record for recruiting that is not beaten by any team in Canada. Nearly every member of last year's champions has enlisted. The list includes Ted Corbould, goal keeper; Norman Harvie and Ken McNab, defence; Lovering Jupp, Harry Draper, Andy Tudhope and Gordon McDonald, forwards; Norman Cooke, spare goal keeper, and a number of juniors.

The famous Melville (Saskatchewan) team are nearly all doing their bit for king and country. The Mackenzie Brothers are in the 78th Battalion; Mullen and Smith are with the 68th Battalion; D'Arcy Smith is with the 28th Battrey; Manager Goldie Smith and Deschenes and Capt. McCutcheon are with the 45th Battalion, and two spares, Little and Clee, are at the front with the 28th Battalion. Every man gave up a good position to enlist.

So many players of the Victoria Hockey Club of Winnipeg have enlisted that the Club is dropping senior hockey and football. Over 50 per cent of the members and players are wearing the khaki. Four have been killed at the front—Art Muir, Ball, Erskine and Robertson. Geo Dion and Dick Denison, well known stars, have been invalided home, and Les Moffatt, Corky Fowler, Charlie and Francis Caldwell, four of the best amateur players in Canada, are in training.

The Kingston Standard says: Here are a few of the names Capt. Grey, of the draft company of the 58th Battalion will have to learn to pronounce in the Russian platoon: Spinak, Stef, Ionep, Syer, Tkrash, Troutman, Bostham, Dolishenski, Urkow, Belsac, Swaton, Leon, Kabowsky, Snehyr, Bodner, Pockrych, Kostuk, Kararpow, Kowalthuk, Nesboratsky, Faklinchuk, Museo, McLaren, Prokofjeff, Pasicoka, Prumac, Prokopnuk, Reshet Etnek, Solonuk, Solonynkak, Sloboslanuk, Sarenowech, Chemnetz, Akula, Boredawka, Brown, Tefunuk, Carkawy, Cohun, Dolyck, Dehter, Platen, Gorlich, Hocul, Hermakowsky, Hamel, Hanchey, Koftunik, Kusema.

Another handsman was added to the ranks of the Peterborough Overseas Band yesterday, in the person of Percy Doughty, a former clarionet player in the 57th Regiment Band. There are eleven former members of the 57th Band in the new band.

When the parade returned to the armouries last night the men of the Peterborough battalion gave three hearty cheers and a tiger for the boys of the 33rd Battery. They later replied with a similar compliment to the Peterborough Battalion.

The Overseas Band left this morning, but not for the front, only as far as Keene, where they are taking part in the Fair this afternoon. Reinforcements followed them this afternoon in the shape of the physical drill squad in charge of Sergt. Oxley, who went down to Keene on the 1.30 G. T. R train.

Word has been received that Pte. Cyril Giroux, former captain of the Peterborough hockey team, who left Canada as a member of the machine gun section of the 38th Battalion, has been transferred into the crack Borden Armoured Battery, which is now at the front. There was keen competition among the machine gunners for places in the Borden Battery, and Pte. Giroux was chosen after a rigid test

Mr. Louis Yeates presented the battery boys with cigarettes at the armouries last night.

Quartermaster Sergt. A. Kent, of B Squadron, 8th C.M.R., is home from Kingston. He returns to Barriefield Camp to-night.

Of the last 70 recruits accepted for the Peterborough battalion, 60 were born in Canada. The "native born" are awakening to a sense of their responsibility

Gunner Fred Lebar of the overseas draft of the 33rd Battery, who left this morning for Barriefield, was presented with a fountain pen by the employees of Barries Limited yesterday as a mark of the affection in which he is held by them.

Lt.-Col. Johnston, Lieut Stewart and Sergt.-Major Miller of the local battalion, are on recruiting business at the Keene Fair to-day.

Kingston, Oct. 5.— Major-Gen. Sir Sam Hughes made a thorough inspection of Barriefield camp to-day, and said good-bye to the 8th Regiment, C.M.R., which will shortly leave for overseas. The Minister of Militia took charge of the review himself, and put the troops through their facings in a way that was new to them. Afterwards Sir Sam gave a heart-to-heart talk to the officers as well as the men. After paying a visit to Principal Gordon, Queen's University, in company with W. F. Nickle, M.P., the Minister had lunch with the camp staff. In the afternoon colours were presented to the 59th overseas battalion by Mrs. Richard H. Waldon, Kingston, and were consecrated by the battalion chaplain, Capt. the Rev. S. J. M. Compton, of this city. The Minister of Militia attended this ceremony, which drew a large crowd from the city and district.

The Minister intimated that all Kingston would have quartered here for the Winter would be three battries, which would equal in number about half the number of overseas troops quartered here last winter.

Two recruits who walked into Peterborough from north of Lindsay are here to-day to join the Peterborough Battalion.

Capt. E. Campbell and Lieuts. M. Carey, R. D. Bradshaw, and R. C. Burlingham of the 3rd Dragoons have been appointed to C Squadron, Depot Regiment.

Man Confesses To Smuggling Opium

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont. 6.—Philip Weisenfels, the Buffalo man arrested here at the upper steel arch bridge after government agents had been informed he was carrying opium, has confessed, so the authorities declare, he was smuggling the drug for a man in Toledo. He has given the name of the man to the government agents who are now trying to locate the fellow in the Ohio city.

Weinsenfels told the government officers his home was at 68 West Huron street. He said he had purchased the opium from a bellboy in a hotel on the Canadian side of the river, and intended to forward it to Toledo immediately after his arrival in this city. He had 45 pounds of the drug in his possession at the time of his arrest. He will be given a hearing this afternoon before United States Commission Glenn A. Stockwell.

HUNGRY FOR WAR NEWS.

Slavs Have Now Taken Strongly to Reading Newspapers.

So intense is the interest in the war among the Russian peasants, says a writer in the Novoe Vremya of Petrograd that every train stopping at a wayside station is besieged by peasants of both sexes and all ages stretching their hands to the passengers at the windows and crying "Give us a paper!"

Before the war the Russian peasants looked upon a newspaper as a material for rolling up a cigaret. Now he reads it to learn a little more about the great war in which his heart lies. Every bit of old newspaper is received as a crust of bread by a starving beggar. This prompts the writer to advocate the establishment of a great "People's Paper," to be run by the state, not only as a newspaper for the masses hungering for news, but also as a means to popular education.

GERMANS WAGE WAR ON RUSSIAN LANGUAGE

In all the cities and towns of Poland now under German occupation active steps are being taken to Germanise them thoroughly. To this end all efforts are at present being directed to have the German language supplant the Russian. In Lodz, Warsaw and other towns all the Russian signs on the streets and in street cars and 'buses have been removed and German signs put in their places. In the restaurants and hotels all the menus are now printed in German, and the German language is spoken where formerly the Russian prevailed.

Beginning with the first week in October with the reopening of the schools in Lodz and Warsaw the teaching of the German language will be begun, with the object of bringing up the younger generation to speak German first and instil in them German kultur. In fact, a widespread propaganda has been organized by German officials for the elimination of the Russian language entirely from the conquered sections of Poland.

FALSE RUMOUR THAT SOCKS WERE SENT TO SHANTYMEN

Mr. Geo. A. Gillespie Stated That This Story Was Widely Believed and it Was Necessary to Deny It —Socks Made For Soldiers Sent Only to the Men at the Front.

The first public reference to a rumour that socks knitted for the soldiers had gone to shantymen was made by Mr. G. A. Gillespie, M.P.P., at this morning's Cheese Board meeting. This malicious falsehood has not been confined to Peterborough, but has been circulated extensively.

Mr. Gillespie was urging that every factory should contribute one day's milk for patriotic purposes. Many patrons, he believed, would gladly make this donation if they were assured that the money was going to the proper places. Many believed the fiction that a Peterborough woman had received from a shantyman in the back country a card which she had enclosed with socks she knitted for the soldiers. Mr. Gillespie knew this woman and took the trouble to investigate the rumour. The woman told him that there was not the slightest truth in it; in fact the story was a fabricated falsehood, possibly originated by an enemy. All the socks knitted here, Mr. Gillespie said, went to the trenches, and every dollar spent in yarn in this country was worth two dollars when the socks reached the soldiers. Further, he had received other information that the Canadian patriotic fund was administered by business men who gave their time and labour to the cause.

The only expense was for clerical work, which could not be avoided.

Mr. Gillespie remarked that although the factory patrons were paying the war taxes there were thousands of farmers able to give more generously than that, and he believed they would give more if all the circumstances were made plain to them.

Apsley factory patrons had recently given one day's make, the maker and teamsters had given their services free and the patrons had asked Mr. Gillespie to handle the cheese, free.

The following factories have given a day's make this season: Warminster, Warsaw, ($78); Pine Grove, ($40.35); Myrtle, ($60); Young's Point, Lang, ($50); East Emily, Trewern, Fleetwood ($85). The other factories have either not given or are undecided. The Board is anxious that every factory be generously represented.

Larger Offering of Cheese Shows Good Pasturage

Mr. Cook and Mr. Gillespie Participated in To-day's Purchases —High Price Was 14 9-16c.

At to-day's Cheese Board sale 2,047 boxes were disposed of at 14 9-16 cents and 14½ cents. Two weeks ago 2,018 boxes were sold at 14 11-16 cents. The increased production during the past two weeks indicates the splendid pasturage throughout the country, and there is every prospect that this condition will continue to the conclusion of the dairy season. The factories boarded as follows:

Keene 80, Warminster 80, Shearer 150, Selwyn 113, Villiers 75, Warsaw 110, Westwood 175, Oakdale 100, Daisy D. 75, Myrtle 195, Ormonde 110, Young's Point 55, Lang 125, Indian River 95, East Emily 85, Trewern 99, Norwood 175, Fleetwood 85, Pine Grove 55, Killarney 95. Total 2,047.

The Bidding.

Mr. Gillespie opened at 14 cents, and Mr. Cook secured first call at 14 9-16 cents, taking the following factories: Westwood, Villiers, Ormonde, Norwood, Daisy D., Oakdale, Killarney, Trewern, Selwyn, Warsaw, Warminster, Pine Grove and Shearer.

Mr. Cook offered 14½ cents for further selections. Mr. Gillespie's bid was 14½ for the balance of the board, as follows: Fleetwood, East Emily, Indian River, Lang, Young's Point, Keene and Myrtle.

The Board adjourned for two weeks.

Two Women Were Released

Crown Had Not Sufficient Evidence to Offer—To-day's Police Court

Sadie Wallace and Maude Nichols, who for some weeks past have been in conflict with the machinery of the law, were charged in this mornings' police court with the theft of $60.50 from Patrick Mulcahy. Through their solicitor, Mr. G. N. Gordon, the two women, who claim Buffalo as their place of residence, pleaded not guilty and declined to elect. Mr. G. W. Hatton, representing the Crown, said that he had no evidence to offer. The police, after working on the case for the past week, found they had not sufficient evidence on which to hope for a conviction. The case was dismissed.

COLLECT RAZORS MAKE BANDAGES

C. L. A. of Charlotte Street Church Begin Red Cross Activities

In their newly organized Red Cross work, the C.L.A. of Charlotte street Methodist church made an auspicious beginning last night. A considerable number of bandages were wound, and razors collected. A number of the local barbers have volunteered to hone razors received, and the rest will be conditioned by Roger Bros. in England. The C.L.A. has also purchased a quantity of yarn, of which ladies of the congregation desiring to knit socks for the soldiers may obtain supplies by applying at the parsonage or to Mr. Fred Jamieson. Last night's meeting included a little social hour. Refreshments were served.

Caring For The Wounded in Egypt

Peterboro' Boy Notes the Grit and Happy Spirit of the Men Who Find Their Way into the Hospital

Mrs. William Patterson, 675 Water street, has received the following interesting letter from her son, Pte. J. R. Patterson, who is now in Cairo, Egypt, with No. 5 Canadian Stationary Hospital (Queen's.)

"Well, here we are still in the land of the Egyptians, and we are working good and hard this week. Last Sunday night we got forty wounded straight from the front into my ward, and since then have been going at a double pace. I have some very interesting cases; lots of dressing to do and cases to write up. So you may bet I have no time to do much else. To see some of the cases that I have in my ward makes a person realize that war is hell, but the grit and happy spirit of the men would surprise anyone. Until we arrived in Egypt our medical experience did not amount to anything, but I believe we are going to get lots of it here. Of course we had a couple of months' good experience in Shorncliffe.

The Indians in Canada.

I have just been reading some of the papers you sent last July and was glad to get them I assure you. It seems good to see so many familiar names when one is so far from home and among foreigners. I was reading a piece in the paper about not letting the Indians in Canada, but I think we let many other people into Canada who are less worthy. I am not allowed to say where I met some of them, but I have seen a number of them here and they seem a very fine lot of men, all big fellows, happy, and from all appearances much more intelligent than many foreigners who enter Canada. Of course these are soldiers I have met. The civilian Indians may be different.

By the time this reaches you it will be time for the Queen's boys to be flocking back to college, and I wish I was flocking with them. Most of our boys are sick of war, and the day we get back to civilization will be an occasion for a big jubilee.

School Board Urged to Adopt Penny Bank

Communication to That Effect Was Received by the Board and Will Be Placed in the Archieves —Helping the Empire.

HABIT OF THRIFT

At last night's meeting of the Board of Education the appended communication was received from M. A. Mackenzie of the Penny Bank, Toronto, containing the following:

In view of the financial strain which will continue throughout the Empire long after this war is ended, and in sympathy with the appeals made by the British Government to all the people, urging the practice of thrift as an important patriotic duty, and especially referring to School Banks, may we ask you to bring the work of this institution again before your board. We would like every child in Canada to have a chance to do his or her little bit towards helping our country in this time of difficulty. Since all the deposits of the children go to Ottawa, each child who saves a dollar is lending that dollar to the country. At present the school children of Canada are in this way lending her over a quarter of a million dollars. With the help and by the instruction of the teachers that sum could be more than doubled this winter. The country will need and can use this loan. The children will have pride and pleasure in knowing that they are helping, and the valuable habit of thrift will be developed in future citizens.

STOLE QUANTITY OF SILVERWARE

Inspector Reburn Concludes Investigation of Theft Case at Union Creek

Inspector Reburn of the Provincial Police Department was in the city yesterday afternoon in connection with a theft case that he has been investigating at Union Creek, when a girl named Vera Henderson was charged with the theft of a quantity of silverware and incidentally a bottle of Florida water. The latter furnished a clue for the police through the medium of a friend of the accused who attended a party one evening bearing unmistakable evidences of having been liberally besprinkled with the saccharine fluid. The girl pleaded guilty. Restitution was made, including the costs of the case. No further penalty will be imposed.

Inspector Reburn returned to Toronto last evening.

Arts and Crafts Column

In this column, conducted by Mr. Hepburn Johnstone, painter and decorator, 256 College Street, will be answered —on Wednesdays — questions of the kind given below, for the benefit of those who, in this period of stringency and enforced and suggested economy, might like doing their own work. Questions relating to painting, signwriting, paperhanging, furniture polishing, and decorating may be sent to the Examiner, and will receive attention in due course.

West Ender, Peterborough, Ont.—I have been an interested reader of your "Arts and Crafts" Column since its inauguration and am desirous of information regarding the finishing of floors.

(a) What preparation is necessary for new floors (in use a few months) preparatory to finishing, etc.? What will take dust and other dirt out of them?

(b) Which is the better finish for basswood floors, natural or light oak Kindly give me instructions as to how to finish in both natural and light oak. I have some pale plastic oak varnish. Could this be used?

(c) Will wax preserve linoleum?

(d) What is the best way to apply wax to hardwood floors and woodwork? How often should it be done?

(e) What is used in Georgia pine, (outside verandah work) for finish, and how many coats?

Ans.—A and B: I presume that your new floors (Ques. B.) are basswood and in a raw state. First, sand paper thoroughly to get out all grit and dirt; it will come out easy as basswood has very little grain and is comparatively soft. Next, the preparation: If you mean to imitate to oak in colour, grain and figure, first apply a coat of paint composed of white lead, raw oil and turpentine. After the floor has been thoroughly dusted. On the other hand, if you mean to simply stain the basswood oak colour and endeavour to imitate oak that way, (and this is what I would suggest) sand paper and dust as above, and if any stains have happened on your neglected floor, touch them over with dissolved Oxalic acid to bleach out the stain, when dry, sandpaper the spots lightly, thoroughly remove all dust and apply evenly a coat of raw linseed oil and turpentine, equal parts, with, say, a gill of drier to half gallon, let this thoroughly harden, then sandpaper lightly and dust off with a damp cloth, after which apply a coat of your "pale elastic oak varnish". When dry, make a stain composed of linseed oil, 1 part; turpentine, 3 parts, with just a touch of drier, a teaspoonful to a quart should be sufficient, and colour to suit your own taste with Raw Sienna, a very tiny speck of Burnt Sienna may be added to warm the colour. Now, with a soft brush, lay on your stain the way of the grain, using long, wavy strokes, allowing the brush marks to remain; press down hard on your brush to make the effect of sap grain, and when this is dry make a stain of diluted vinegar and Vandyke Brown; brush some on a piece of board, and while wet run a combing or over-graining wheel over it, and then along the grain of your floor, when dry, give the floor a coat of some good floor varnish and finish in either varnish or wax.

(c)—Yes! D:—Simply use a small quantity well rubbed out and evenly applied; let it set a few minutes, then use a weighted brush or a brick covered with old carpet and polish. On woodwork polish with a clothes brush, finishing with a soft rag. The frequency should depend upon conditions.

(e)—Georgia pine is better left natural or toned with a little stain which may be put in the following: Linseed oil and turpentine, equal parts; two coats of this, then one or two coats of exterior varnish makes a good finish that is inexpensive.

Quig, Peterborough, Ont.: There was a fire recently in my summer kitchen and part of it was damaged. I have had it rebuilt and painted. On the new wood the rerae some dark spots coming through and the paint does not dry on them. Can you kindly tell me the cause and how to overcome it?

Ans.—The dark spots are caused by the exudation of sap which shows the wood was green when painted. A coat of pure shellac on the knots and sappy portions, previous to priming, usually stops the bleeding, sometimes a coat of red lead is used and again a burning lamp to dry out all the sap before painting is sometimes found necessary.

Jamie X., Millbrook, Ont.: Will you please tell me how to make a polish for my piano and furniture that will not hurt the polish?

Ans.—Take equal parts of beeswax, raw linseed oil and turpentine; melt all together in a pot and allow it to cool for use. Keep away from open fire while melting. Another is linseed oil, half pint, turpentine, one pint; methylated spirits, one gill. Shake well before using.

A.B.C., City.—Please tell me, through your "Arts and Crafts" column how much paper I need for a bedroom 10 x 14 and 9 ft high, and what is a nice colour, and how much is it a roll?

Ans.—A room 10x14x9 will require 12 rolls of wall, 5 rolls ceiling, 14 yds. border. This is allowing for two ordinary openings. There are many nice colours and you will have to be guided in that respect by your own sense of taste and your environments. As to the price let your purse determine that.

SPLENDID SHOWING MADE BY COLLEGIATE INSTITUTE

Results of the Departmental Examinations Were Disclosed at Last Night's Meeting of the Board of Education.--Enthusiastic Comment by the Members--School Expenditures Returned With Interest Said Lieut.-Col. Miller.

The Peterborough Collegiate Institute made a high showing at the 1915 departmental examinations according to the report which was submitted to the Board of Education last evening. The members of the Board were more than satisfied with the result. "We have spent considerable money on schools, and every dollar is returned with interest in that report," commented Lt.-Col. J. W. Miller. Continuing he said: "A man who would grumble after receiving a report like that would grumble if he went to heaven."

"In all the twenty-five years I have sat on this Board, I have never heard a finer report," observed Mr. W. H. Hill. It was recommended that each member of the Board be supplied with a copy of the report which follows:

The Report.

How Peterboro' Prepared For War Fifty Years Ago

A Musty Militia Roster Compiled the Year Before the Fenian Invasion

An interesting document, especially in this time of war, came into the possession of Mr. S. Jay, second-hand goods merchant, 390 Aylmer Street. It is the "militia enrollment of the County of Peterborough," 1865." It contains a complete list of men liable for military service in the several municipalities of the county, classified under three heads, namely: First Class, Second Class, and Reserve Militia. It will be interesting to note that the total military strength of the town and county in 1865 was 4,871, of which 167 were first-class, 2,150 second class, and Reserve Militia 1051.

The first-class service men of the town of Peterborough numbered 288, second class 390, and Reserve, or "Home Guard," 163. Ashburnham only mustered a total of 45. Of the townships, Otonabee, with 311, had the largest enrollment, and the smallest list belonged to Burleigh—12.

Mr. Jay has generously turned over the book to Mr. Bela Fosse, Public Librarian, to be deposited in the Armouries archives.

The enrollment was prophetic, and also showed that the military authorities were alive to the value of preparedness. The roll was made the year before the Fenian invasion. Canada's first foreign war, June, 1866.

The document, which is in book form, is an interesting relic of old days. It contains many familiar names, but few of those now living.

The following is a literal transcription of the certificate of the County Clerk of that time:

Ido certify that I have truly and faithfully taken from the Assessment Rolls of the several municipalities the above Militia Rolls herewith appended.

WALTER SHERIDAN,
Clerk and Treasurer,
County of Peterborough.

Peterborough, 1st July, 1865

NOW IS TIME TO PLANT NARCISSUS AND JONQUIL

Garden lovers who wish their gardens or the ground around their houses to be rich with narcissus and jonquil, should begin their work without delay, for fall is the time to plant the bulbs of these flowers. The work should be undertaken as soon as, or even before an early frost has weakened the annual flowers in the bed.

In the case of narcissus, many householders will find it advantageous to naturalize the plant so that it grows and blossoms on the lawn much as the wild flowers do. In many of the parks of the larger estates of England, in portions of North Carolina, on estates along the James River, in Virginia, and in old New England garden, narcissus that were planted over half a century ago are still vigorous and produce every spring a beautiful display of blossoms.

To naturalize the narcissus it should be planted in the sod or partial shade. Make a small hole in the soil five or six inches deep, insert the bulb, pointed end up, and press the soil over the top, planting in rows or geometrical figures should be avoid. An easy method of accomplishing this is to scatter the bulbs as if one were sowing seed, and then plant them where they happen to fall.

When the tulip and narcissus bulbs are planted in the beds, the surface of the soil should be loosened after each rain and the bed kept free from weeds. In the late fall and early winter it is well to cover the beds with a light mulch of straw or leaves to prevent injury from alternate freezing and thawing. This mulch should be gradually removed in spring when the growth appears above the ground. If the soil is well drained, the bulbs will not be injured by severe cold.—Buffalo News.

COMPLETE STATEMENT OF CHEESE BOARD'S PATRIOTIC FUND

Presented by Mr. Ed. Hawthorne on the Instruction of the Cheese Board This Morning—Money Distributed Among Patriotic Workers

The appended statement was expressly prepared for the patrons of the factories on the Peterborough Cheese Board, to show what money was received from the donations of one day's make of cheese, and how it was expended. It refers entirely to the collection made last fall. The Keene factory item is simply a belated receipt.

In the expenditure column are names of recipients of various sums, most of them being secretaries of women's Red Cross Societies. Mr. W. C. Switzer's name appears for the reason that the Cheese Board desired to distribute some money among local patriotic societies. To facilitate this disposal Mr. Switzer was authorized to make the donations of the money. He made a complete report at a previous meeting. Gerald Rackham's name indicates the contribution to the 59th Battalion Fund.

Mr. Ed. Hawthorne was instructed by the Board this morning to prepare this statement for publication. He, himself, stated that every dollar paid by patrons had been paid out for patriotic purposes only. There was no expense in the handling of the Board's fund. Mr. Hawthorne gave his attention and time to the work for nothing.

The statement was audited by Mr. John Miller:

Canadian Aviator Who Is Interned In Holland Is Well Known Here

TORONTO, Oct. 5.—Flight Lieut. Erroll Boyd, 121 Bedford road, Toronto who was one of the five aviators in the raid on Zeebrugge Sunday, cabled his parents late last night that he was "quite safe."

Five aeroplanes of the allies bombarded Zeebrugge, on the Belgium coast, Sunday. Some of the bombs which were dropped weighed 75 lbs. The aeroplanes were attacked by anti-air craft guns, which brought down one of the machines. Another was compelled by a defective motor to land near Nieuvliet, on Dutch territory. A British officer was interned. Lieut. Boyd's parents believe he was in the latter machine.

At midnight last night a wire from Ottawa stated that Boyd's aeroplane had been shot down and that he has been interned in Holland. It was understood that he was uninjured.

Lieut. Boyd at the outbreak of the war was lieutenant in the Queen's Own. Being anxious to get to the front as quickly as possible as an airman and realized that the schools in Canada would not open for some time, he left for England on April 17. He enrolled as a member of the Eastchurch Aviation School on April 28. By May 10 he had successfully passed all examinations. He immediately received a commission and joined Naval Squadron No. 4, and has been in active service ever since.

Flight Lieutenant J. Erroll Dunsford Boyd, R.N.A.S., is well known in Peterboro'. He is the son of J. Tower Boyd of the Conferation Life Assurance Company, Toronto, a grandson of the late Martin Dunsford, Barrister-at-law, Peterboro, and nephew of W. H. Dunsford of the local branch of the Canadian Bank of Commerce. Lieutenant Boyd has taken part in checking all the Zeppelin raids on England during the past three months.

BERLIN SHOWS ILL EFFECTS OF THE WAR ON GERMANY

BERNE, Oct. 5.—A Swiss merchant who has just returned from Berlin confirms what already has been said several times regarding life in the German capital, at first sight appearing quite normal, but afterward, especially to those who have been there before, showing many and obvious symptoms of being very different from ordinary times. Business is at a standstill, traffic has enormously decreased, no building is being done, comparatively little male labor is employed and there is an increasing number of women workers. All these and many other signs testify to abnormal conditions. Nevertheless, the Berlin population still is very optimistic, and any one sitting in a frequented cafe of an evening may often hear the words, "We are invincible." If the English are mentioned it is a sure sign for the clenching of fists ad the raising of voices, which immediately becomes harsh. The conclusion is always the same:—"We must get to Calais."

Calais, says the Swiss merchant, is still the German goal, and the French, Russians, Serbians and Italians hardly count in the war, being considered as merely temporary enemies. The detested, abhorred, hereditary and permanent enemy still is England.

"There is more joy in Berlin over one Englishman killed than over ten thousand Russians made prisoners." This explains the popularity of the submarine warfare and Zeppelin murders, these being Germany's sole weapons for hitting direct at England, although in certain quarters it is the opinion that the submarine warfare is in reality injuring her more than England. The government, however, according to this man, does not dare put an end to it for fear of popular discontent and to a certain extent admitting that amistake has been committed.

800 Pound Safe Tossed By Storm

NEW YORK, Oct. 5.—The steamer Almirante of the United Fruit Company, arrived from Caribbean seaports, badly battered as the result of her encounter with a West India cyclone of great force. The ship met the storm 100 miles south of Kingston, Jamaica, on September 24. The seas swept over the ship, breaking iron railings on the bridge, carrying away lifeboats and ripping off several hatch covers. The ship drifted for hours, unable to make any headway.

While the storm was at its height, the ship's 800-pound safe started on a rampage. It was on wheels and as the ship tossed, it rolled about the cabin, breaking furniture and finally smashed through partitions into the quarters of Purser Frantz, who had a narrow escape before the crew lashed it down with hawsers.

ATHENS, Oct. 6.—The whole city is much excited to-day over the international situation. There is talk of the formation of a Coalition Government.

ROME, Oct. 6.—Emperor Franz Josef of Austria is seriously ill, according to a report received here this afternoon.

The Crown Prince, Baron Burian and Count Tisza are reported to have been summoned to his bedside.

NEW YORK CITY, Oct. 6.—Vigorous raids on the Stock Market to-day sent steel and the various war stocks tumbling from the high marks set during recent bullish activity.

BERLIN, Oct. 6.—(Official).—The Russians have renewed their attacks on a large scale in the Dvinsk region, gaining initial successes near Kosjany and south of Wiezieu Lake, but these gains were annulled by our counter attacks. Gen. Von Linsingen is developing a new offensive west of Czartorysk.

BERLIN, Oct. 6.—"God will continue to be with our armies in the future as in the past," Field-Marshal Von Hindenburg telegraphed the President of the Prussian Parliament to-day, replying to a message of felicitations on his birthday.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 6.—President Wilson this afternoon struck out straight for greater preparedness in an address of welcome to the members of the Naval Advisory Board at the White House, calling upon them to unite with the Government in establishing a defence that would "command the respect of the entire world."

"I think the whole nation is convinced we ought to be prepared, not far war, but for defence, and very adequately prepared," the President said.

BERLIN, Oct. 6.—An attempt by the French to resume the offensive on the Champagne front by heavy artillery fire against the German positions was frustrated with heavy losses by German artillery, it was announced.

LONDON, Oct. 6.—King Constantine of Greece has accepted the resignation of the Venizelos Ministry rather than concur in its war programme, but the Allied troops are still being rushed through Greece to Serbia, and Paris announces that there will be no interference with them, the Greeks having made formal protest and being prepared to "let it go at that."

The protest on the technical ground that the troops were landed to prevent something which had yet to occur, namely, an attack on Serbia by Bulgaria, saves the Government's face but all accounts agree that the military as well as the civic authorities have co-operated with the Allies in the landing and transporting the troops, and this friendliness is apparently being continued in spite of the King's attitude.

The fact may be that the army is so thoroughly pro-Venizelos that interference would incite civil war. Internecine strife is the possibility which will give force to the appeals for a Coalition Government. The King himself will know that it is safe to go only so far in opposing the wishes of the majority of his people, especially if that majority includes troops.

11 FOWLS DIE AFTER SWALLOWING CANDY

TARRYTOWN, N. Y. Oct. 6.—John M. Fulton, for years tenor in Grace church, New York, but of recent years a retired farmer living at Elmsford, found 11 of his prize fowls dead in his barn with wooden skewers sticking in their throats At first he suspected a German plot, but, after investigating, he cleared the mystery.

Mr. Fulton gave a barn dance and all the dancers were well supplied with lollypops. Many of the dancers sucked them until a dance was on and then dropped them on the floor or into the garden.

In the morning the chickens found them, and, in their eagerness for a morning meal, they gulped the stub ends of the candy leaving the wooden skewers sticking out In trying to get rid of the skewers they pecked the floor so hard they drove the sharp point through their throats and bled to death.

Jewel Theft Baffles Police

NEW YORK, Oct. 6.—Search for jewels valued at more than $75,000 stolen from the summer home of Mrs. J. McMillan, widow of the late United States senator, occupied the attention of the New York police and all New England to-day.

The jewels, the local police were advised, were stolen from the McMillan home at Manchester-by-the-Sea, Mass., the night of August 7. Among the jewels taken was one pearl necklace valued at $15,000. A diamond chain valued at $6,000 and numerous rings and other pieces worth from $1,000 to $4,000 are missing.

On the night of the robbery Mrs. McMillan saw that her jewels were put in their usual place in the safe. All servants were questioned following the discovery of the theft, but all disclaim knowledge of the disappearance of the gems. Detective agencies worked on the case for more than a month, and then, expressing the opinion that it was an "inside job," gave up. It was not until the private agencies withdrew that the police were advised.

WEDDING BELLS

ROGERS—LOBB

St Stephen's Church was the scene of a quiet wedding, when Euphrasia Elizabeth, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ernest W. Lawrence, was united in marriage with Mr. Frank Roy Hendren, youngest son of Mr. A. Hendren of Lakefield, by the rector, the Rev. T. G. Wallace. The bride was given away by her father and was unattended. She was wearing a smart navy blue garbadine tailored suit with Gage hat and corsage bouquet of roses and lily-of-the-valley. After the ceremony and wedding supper, Mr. and Mrs. Hendren left for Muskoka. On their return they will be at home to their friends at 1 Palmerston Gardens.

HURLEY—GALVIN.

On Wednesday, Sept. 29th, the marriage of Miss Agnes Galvin of Ennismore, to Mr. William Hurley of Norwood, was solemnized in St. Martin's church, Ennismore. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Father Galvin, brother of the bride, assisted by Rev. Father Fitzpatrick, P. P., of Ennismore, and Rev. Father McGuire, P. P. of Downeyville. Miss Loretto Galvin acted as bridesmaid, while Mr. Joseph Hurley performed the duties of best man. Miss Agnes Scollard presided at the organ. Lohengrin's wedding march was rendered as the bridal party entered the church, and during the ceremony sacred solos were sung by Mrs. Daniel Crough and Miss Marian Crough.

At the conclusion of the nuptial mass the bridal party repaired to the home of the bride's parents, where a dainty wedding breakfast was served and a reception held. Congratulatory speeches were delivered by Father Fitzpatrick of Ennismore, Father McGuire of Downeyville, and Father Galvin of Norwood. To these the groom replied briefly, thanking the previous speakers for the many kind remarks they had made in reference to Mrs. Hurley and himself. A large number of friends and relatives were present to extend congratulations and to offer good wishes to the newly married couple.

The day following Mr. and Mrs. Hurley went on a short trip to Buffalo. On their return they will reside in Asphodel, about a mile west of Norwood.

Clara Morris Gets Income

NEW YORK, Oct. 7.—Miss Clara Morris, one of the most distinguished actresses of the American stage and who seemed doomed to pass her declining years blind and in poverty, came into a fortune yesterday which will provide for her until the end.

This will be gratifying news to her thousands of admirers, many of whom had contributed to her support either directly or through benefit performances.

An accounting of the estate of her brother-in-law, William H. Harriott, filed with the tax appraiser of Queens county yesterday, shows that Miss Morris, who off the stage was Mrs. Clara Morris Harriott, is to receive the income of $50,000 for life. Mr. Harriot left an estate of about $150,000. After providing for Miss Morris he gave $50,000 to each of his two nephews, Warren H. Titus and William J. Wallace, and the rest of the estate to his widow.

Miss Morris formerly lived in Yonkers, but now is making her home with Mrs. Harriot, in Whitestone, Queens county. She is blind and in feeble health, requiring the attention of a nurse all the time.

Go now, make the best investment you ever made, by getting a large fifty-cent case of Pape's Diapepsin from any drug store. You realize in five minutes how needless it is to suffer from indigestion, dyspepsia or any stomach disorder.

Little Eunice, aged 5, was crying, and her grandmother asked what the trouble was. "Oh, everything seems to go wrong!" sobbed Eunice. "I just wish I had my whole life to live over again!" Exchange.

BRITISH TROOPS LANDING IN GREECE

Are Being Held at Salonika Waiting For Supplies---First Detachment of French Troops Are Reported to Have Reached the Serbian Frontier Where They Were Enthusiastically Received.

LONDON, Oct. 7.—The landing of British troops, begun yesterday, is continuing to-day, according to Salonika advices. The British for the present are being held at Salonika, awaiting the arrival of supplies.

Athens is wildly excited over the conflicting rumours. The announcement of the personnel of the new cabinet, to be headed by M. Zaimis, is expected to-night. Despatches received here to-day said that King Constantine hopes to secure the Chamber's approval of the new ministry by including several members of the Venibelos cabinet.

The first detachments of French troops who landed at Salonika are reported to have reached the Serbian frontier, near Gievgeli, where they were received enthusiastically by the Serbian patrols. Other reinforcements for the Serbs are hurrying forward from Salonika as rapidly as the railway facilities will permit. A portion of the British press to-day suggested that the Allies may find a quicker route to Constantinople through Bulgaria than through the Dardanelles. There was no hint in official circles, however, that any portion of the Allied troops now on Gallipoli Peninsula might be withdrawn and landed on Bulgarian soil.

The distance from the Suvla Bay region of Gallipoli, where British troops were recently landed in large force, to the Bulgarian coast on the Gulf of Saros, is less than forty miles.

ANNUAL MEETING OF THE SHAREHOLDERS OF THE CANADIAN PACIFIC

Sir Thomas Shaughnessy Reviews the Work of the Past Year and is Very Optimistic in Regard to the Conditions During the Coming Year. Banner Wheat Crop.

MONTREAL, Q., Oct. 6.—At the annual meeting of the shareholders of the Canadian Pacific Railway Company today the report of the directors was unanimously adopted. Richard B. Angus, Sir Edmund B. Osler, Sir Herbert S. Holt and Colonel Frank S. Meighen were elected directors. The arrangement with the Canadian Pacific Ocean Services, Limited, as outlined in the annual report, was ratified and confirmed.

In moving the adoption of the annual report, the President, Sir Thomas Shaughnessy, said: "The annual statement of your affairs now before you for consideration and approval, is, in some respects, the most satisfactory that has been submitted for a number of years past. The shrinkage in the gross earnings of your railway system, compared with the previous year, of $30,000,000 is very marked; indeed it is in excess of your entire gross earnings in the year 1901, but the fact that notwithstanding this great falling off in revenue, your regular dividend was earned is questionable evidence of your foresight and wisdom in having made such expenditures during the past ten or twelve years as to enable you to make a saving in your working expenses, representing such a substantial offset to the loss of gross revenue. The physical condition of your property has never been better than it is at this time. The reduction in the cost of maintenance of way for the year being due very largely to a favourable winter and to the fact that works of betterment chargeable in considerable part to working expenses, were completed before unfavourable business conditions appeared, and the additional facilities for the conduct of your business provided by your expenditures made it possible for you to handle your traffic more expeditiously and economically. As an illustration, the number of tons of freight traffic hauled one mile per the year (sweet) by the report was 62 per cent. greater than in 1905, but it required only 17 per additional train miles to perform the service. Improved gradient, double tracks, better facilities, larger locomotives and cars, enabled you to earn $3.17 per freight train mile in the last year as against $1.93 in 1905, an improvement of 64 per, although there had been a substantial reduction of freight rates in the meantime. Taking everything into account, I feel that we may accept the outcome of the year as evidence of the strongly entrenched position of the company and may look forward to the future with buoyant confidence in these days. When so many nations are engaged in a bloody and expensive war, when the financial machinery of the world is out of gear, and general business conditions are disturbed, it is not wise to make predictions, but everything points to a marked improvement in your revenue. During the current fiscal year the country has been blessed with a most bountiful harvest, and while the price of wheat is lower than it was a year ago, it is still above the average, and conditions prevailing abroad should cause a continuity of demand for this and many of our other products. Conservatively estimated, the field crops harvested this autumn

Slide Worst In Canal's History

PANAMA, Oct. 7.—Lieutenant Colonel Chester Harding, engineer in charge of the Panama Canal, has sent a message to the Secretary of War at Washington recommending that President Wilson issue an executive order officially closing the canal until November 1st.

Colonel Harding explains that it will be impossible to clear the channel before that date and perhaps not then. He favors refunding the tolls to those ships which have paid them and are now awaiting passage, and also suggests that arrangements be made to transship the cargoes of the vessels and forward them to their destinations.

The conditions caused by the new slide are the worst in the history of the canal, according to Colonel Harding. More than 1,000,000 cubic yards of earth must be removed before the channel is again deep enough to permit the passage of ships.

KANSAS BANKS ARE FILLED WITH MONEY

TOPEKA, Kan., Oct. 7.—Kansas banks have actually overflowed with money this year. Never before in the history of Kansas banking have the deposits of the bank reached a point where the banks could not receive them or violate the law. Most of the banks have simply built levies by adding to their surplus of capital accounts that would permit them to accept additional deposits.

There is a provision in the Kansas law that at no time is a state bank permitted to have deposits exceeding 10 times the capital and surplus of the bank.

No Frozen Feet This Year: French Have Abundant Woollen Supplies

PARIS, Oct. 7.—The Ministry of War announced that the stock of warm undergarments, socks and similar articles for soldiers at the front is abundant for the winter campaign and that it is needless for relatives of soldiers to send garments unless they wish to do so. In this case the suggestion is advanced that socks be made of absolutely pure wool, as protection against frozen feet. Underwear may contain a very small proportion of cotton.

The government, however, calls attention to the scarcity of wool on account of the occupation by the Germans of Northern France, where there are numerous factories, and the use by the government of large quantities of this material.

This announcement is made particularly in view of the eagerness with which garments for soldiers were accepted during the early months of the war, when it was impossible to foresee the length or character of the conflict, since that time measures have been taken to obtain all needed supplies.

Warsaw News

WARSAW, Oct. 6.—Woman-kind in the Warsaw district again has demonstrated a business acumen and progressiveness which indicate that 'mere man' will have to look to his laurels when the era of universal suffrage dawns. For a second time, the women's Institute has conducted a fall fair with a success which gives assurance that in future the event will take rank among the best in the county.

The exhibition, which was held Wednesday, Sept 29, brought together one of the largest crowds seen in the village in several years. The exhibits of farm produce in the town hall were of a quality testifying to the fact that Dummer farmers have enjoyed their fair share of the exceptionally favorable growing conditions of the season throughout Ontario. Not fully up to the standard which has been set by Dummer's women in past years, the [illegible] exhibits in [illegible] and [illegible] was the showing [illegible] work in the domestic science and fine art departments. Fine specimens of stock were shown in the yards at the Warsaw Creamery and the races and [illegible] were speedy contests and occasional bits of excitement.

In the evening a concert given in the town hall by talent from Peterboro, was well attended.

Miss Barbara Kidd, Atwood, Ont., is visiting her sister Mrs. Jame Hawthorne.

Misses Ella Russell and Edith Tucker are at Apsley for a couple of weeks.

Mr. Bruce Gillespie, Peterboro, was in town on business on Friday.

Mr. and Mrs. D. H. Macmillan and Miss Bernadine who have been spending a couple of months with Mr. and Mrs. M. R. Nathan Proctor, left for their home at Petrolia on Monday. Mr. Payne accompanied the party and will spend a month in the west.

The recruiting meeting in the interest of the 39th Battalion held in the town hall here on Saturday night was attended by a large and enthusiastic audience composed of some of the best fighting stock for which this township is noted.

Stirring the appealing addresses were given by His Honor Judge Hoyle, Mr. J. [illegible] Sexsmith, M.P., Mr. F. D. Kerr, Mr. Hinton and Rev. Mr. Bryan. The chair was ably filled by Dr. Munro.

At the conclusion of the meeting a committee was appointed to organize this work and to accept recruits.

THIS SCHOOL GIRL HAD BAD FAINTING SPELLS

Was Weak and Run Down. But Dr. Chase's Nerve Food Made Complete Cure

The most critical time in a girl's life comes during the school age, when she is impelled by rivalry to put forth her best efforts in studying for examinations. At the time she should have healthful outdoor exercise and abundance of fresh air, to keep the blood pure and rich, she is confined to her studies. Is it any wonder that she becomes run down in health and suffers from headaches, indigestion, loss of appetite and spells of weakness or fainting?

The case described in this letter is a good illustration and you can read here the splendid results of using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food to help through this critical period.

"While attending school my daughter became weak and very much run down. She was frequently troubled with bad fainting spells, and nothing we tried seemed to do her any good. We were advised to try Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, and did so with most satisfactory results. I am pleased to tell you that after using five boxes of the Nerve Food she was completely cured, and has no return of the fainting spells."

This statement is certified to by Mr. Hamilton Houston, Justice of the Peace.

The reason Dr. Chase's Nerve Food is so effective in cases of this kind is because of its extraordinary blood-forming influence. By creating an abundance of rich, red blood it strengthens the action of the heart, revitalizes the exhausted nerves and builds up the system in every way.

The appetite is restored, digestion improves, you rest and sleep well, and the new vigour and energy is felt in every organ of the human body. Dr. Chase's Nerve Food is doing wonders for men, women and children whose systems have become weak and run down. 50 cents a box, 6 for $2.50, all dealers or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto.

SUFFERED EVERYTHING

For Years, Restored To Health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Canadian women are continually writing us such letters as the two following, which are heartfelt expressions of gratitude for restored health:

Glanford Station, Ont.—"I have taken Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and never found any medicine to compare with it. I had ulcers and falling of womb and doctors did me no good. I suffered dreadfully for years until I began taking your medicine. I also recommend it for nervousness and indigestion." — Mrs. HENRY CLARK, Glanford Station, Ont.

Chesterville, Ont. — "I heard your medicines highly praised, and a year ago I began taking them for falling of womb and ovarian trouble.

"My left side pained me all the time and just before my periods which were irregular and painful it would be worse. To sit down caused me pain and suffering and I would be so nervous sometimes that I could not bear to see any one or hear any one speak. Little specks would float before my eyes and I was always constipated.

"I cannot say too much for Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and Liver Pills, for there are no medicines like them. I have taken them and I recommend them to all women. You may publish this testimonial." — Mrs. STEPHEN J. MARTIN, Chesterville, Ontario, Canada.

Bottling Funeral Tears.

The natives of Persia bottle the tears of those in grief, especially mourners at a funeral. In fact, bottling tears is one of the chief features of the ceremony. Each of the mourners is presented with a sponge to mop his face and eyes, and, after the burial, these sponges are given up to a priest, who squeezes the tears into bottles, which he keeps.

It is believed that bottled tears are a most effective remedy for certain chronic ailments. The custom is one of the oldest in the East, and has been practised by the Persians for thousands of years. Mention of it is made in the Old Testament.

CHAPTER XXI.

I Have a Tilt With Colingraft.

LATER in the forenoon the countess, with a queer little smile on her lips, told me that her mother considered me the most wonderful, the most forceful character she had ever encountered. I brightened up at that.

But Colingraft was not yet through with me. He sought me out just before luncheon. I was in the courtyard, listening patiently to Jasper junior's theories and suggestions concerning the restoration of the entire facade of the castle and what he'd do if he were in my place. Strange to say, I was considerably entertained; he was not at all offensive. On the contrary, he offered his ideas in a pleasantly ingenuous way, always supplementing them with some such salve as "Don't you think so, Mr. Smart?" or "I'm sure you have thought of it yourself," or "Isn't that your idea too?" or "You've done wonders with the joint, old man."

Colingraft came directly up to where we were standing.

"See here, Mr. Smart," he began austerely, "I've got something to say to you, and I'm not the sort to put it off. I appreciate what you've done for Aline and all that sort of thing, but your manner today has been intolerable, and we've got to come to an understanding."

I eyed him closely. "I suppose you're about to suggest that one or the other of us must evacuate—get out, so to speak," I said.

"Don't talk rubbish. You've got my mother bawling her eyes out upstairs and wishing she were dead. You've got to come off this high horse of yours. You've got to apologize to her, and quick at that. Understand!"

"Nothing will give me greater joy than to offer her my most abject apology, Mr. Titus, unless it would be her unqualified forgiveness."

"You'll have to withdraw everything you said."

"I'll withdraw everything except my ultimatum in respect to her putting a foot outside these walls. That still stands."

"I beg to differ with you."

"You may beg till you're black in the face," said I coolly.

He swallowed hard. His face twitched, and his hands were clinched.

"You are pretty much of a mucker, Mr. Smart," he said between his teeth. "I'm sorry my sister has fallen into your hands. The worst of it is she seems satisfied with everything you do. Good Lord, what she can see in you is beyond comprehension! Protection! Why, you couldn't protect her from the assault of a chicken!"

"Are you trying to insult me, Mr. Titus?"

"You couldn't resent it if I were. There never was an author with enough moral backbone to"—

"Wait! You are her brother. I don't want to have trouble with you. But if you keep on in this strain, Mr. Titus, I shall be compelled to thrash you soundly."

He fairly gasped. "Th—thrash me!" he choked out. Then he advanced.

Much to his surprise—and, strangely enough, not to my own—I failed to retreat. Instead I extended my left fist with considerable abruptness and precision, and he landed on his back.

I experienced a sensation of unholy joy. Up to that moment I had wondered whether I could do it with my left hand.

I looked at Jasper junior. He was staring at me in utter bewilderment.

"Good Lord, you—you've knocked him down!"

"I didn't think I could do it," said I nazily.

He sprang to his brother's side and assisted him to a sitting posture.

"Right to the jaw," shouted Jasper, with a strange enthusiasm.

"Left," I corrected him.

Colingraft gazed about him in a stupid, vacant fashion for a moment, and then allowed his glazed eyes to rest upon me. He sat rather limply, I thought.

"Are you hurt, Colly?" cried Jasper junior.

A sickly grin, more of surprise than shame, stole over Colingraft's face. He put his hand to his jaw, then to the back of his head.

"By Jove!" he murmured. "I—I didn't think he had it in him. Let me get up!"

Jasper junior was discreet. "Better let well enough alone, old"—

"I intend to," said Colingraft as he struggled to his feet.

For a moment he faced me uncertainly.

"I'm sorry, Mr. Titus," said I calmly.

"You—you are a wonder!" fell from his lips. "I'm not a coward, Mr. Smart. I've boxed a good deal in my time, but, by Jove, I never had a hit like that!"

He turned abruptly and left us. We followed him slowly toward the steps. At the bottom he stopped and faced me again.

"You're a better man than I thought," he said. "If you'll bury the hatchet, so will I. I take back what I said to you not because I'm afraid of you, but because I respect you. What say! Will you shake hands?"

The surly, arrogant expression was gone from his face. In its place was a puzzled, somewhat inquiring look.

"No hard feeling on my part," I cried gladly. We shook hands. Jasper junior slapped me on the back. "It's a most distressing, atavistic habit I'm getting into, knocking people down without rime or reason."

"I daresay you had reason," muttered Colingraft. "I got what was coming to me." An eager light crept into his handsome eyes. "By Jove, we can get in some corking work with the gloves while I'm here. I box quite a bit at home, and I miss it traveling about like this. What say to a half hour or so every day? I have the gloves in one of my trunks. I'm getting horribly seedy. I need stirring up."

"Charmed, I'm sure," I said, assuming an enthusiasm I did not feel. Put on the gloves with this strapping, skillful boxer? Not I! I was firmly resolved to stop while my record was good. In a scientific clash with the gloves he would soon find out what a miserable duffer I was.

"And Jappy, here, is no slouch. He's as shifty as the dickens."

"The shiftier the better," said I with great aplomb. Jasper junior stuck out his chest modestly and said, "Oh, piffle, Colly." But just the same I hadn't the least doubt in my mind that Jasper could "put it all over me." It was a rather sickening admission, though strictly private.

We made our way to my study, where I mildly suggested that we refrain from mentioning our little encounter to Mrs. Titus or the countess. I thought Colingraft was especially pleased with the idea. We swore secrecy.

"I've always been regarded as a peaceful, harmless grub," I explained, still somewhat bewildered by the feat I had performed and considerably shaken by the fear that I was degenerating into a positive ruffian. "You will believe me, I hope, when I declare that I was merely acting in self defense when I"—

He actually laughed. "Don't apologize." He could not resist the impulse to blurt out once more, "By Jove, I didn't think you could do it."

"With my left hand, too," I said wonderingly. Catching myself up, I hastily changed the subject.

A little later on as Colingraft left the room, airily feeling of his jaw, Jasper junior whispered to me excitedly, "You've got him eating out of your hand, old top."

Things were coming to a pretty pass, said I to myself when I was all alone. It certainly is a pretty pass when one knocks down the ex-husband and the brother of the woman he loves and quite without the least suspicion of an inherited pugnacity.

I had a little note from the countess that afternoon, ceremoniously delivered by Helene Marie Louise Antoinette. It read as follows:

You did Colingraft a very good turn when you laid him low this morning. He is tiresomely interested in his prowess as a boxmaker or a boxster, or whatever it is in athletic parlance. He has been like a lamb all afternoon, and he really can't get over the way you whacked him. (Is whack the word?) At first he was as mum as could be about it, but I think he really felt relieved when I told him I had seen the whole affair from a window in my hall. You see, it gave him a chance to explain how you got in the whack, and I have been obliged to listen to intermittent lectures on the manly art of self defense all afternoon, first from him, then from Jappy. I have a headache and no means of defense. He admits that he deserved it, but I am not surprised. Colly is a sporting chap. He hasn't a mean drop of blood in his body. You have made a friend of him. So please don't feel that I hold a grudge against you for what you did. The funny part of it all is that mamma quite agrees with him. She says he deserved it! Mamma is wonderful, really, when it comes to a pinch. She has given up all thought of "putting a foot outside the castle." Can you have luncheon with us tomorrow? Would it be too much trouble if we were to have it in the loggia? I am just mad to get out of doors if only for an hour or two in that walled in spot. Mr. Poopendyke has been perfectly lovely. He came up this morning to tell me that you have not sneezed at all and there isn't the remotest chance now that you will have a cold. It seems he was afraid you might. You must have a very rugged constitution. Britton told Blake that most men would have died from exposure if they had been put in your place. How good you are to me. ALINE T.

P. S.—I may come down to see you this evening.

* * * * * * *

I shall skip over the rather uninteresting events of the next two or three days. Nothing of consequence happened unless you are willing to consider important two perfectly blissful nights of sleep on my part; also I had the pleasure of taking the countess "out walking" in my courtyard, to use a colloquialism, once in the warm, sweet sunshine, again 'neath the glow of a radiant moon. She had not been outside the castle walls literally in more than five weeks, and the color leaped back into her cheeks with a rush that delighted me. I may mention in passing that I paid particular attention to her suggestion concerning my dilapidated, gone to seed garden, although I had been bored to extinction by Jasper junior when he undertook to enlighten me horticulturally. She agreed to come forth every day and assist me in building the poor thing up, propping it up to sneak.

Weighing Words.

An Advertising Expert says, "The man who weighs his words, says what he means and no more, is the one who gets a reputation for solidity in his community. Advertisers should remember this. Exaggeration is futile—it does not convince. Aside from the morality of the matter, it does not pay to insult the intelligence or stretch the credulity of your public. Get a reputation for truthful advertising, and people will go a long way out of their road to do business with you."

Good advice and fortunately followed by nearly all our local advertisers.

Too Many Thirsts.

A young Englishman came to Washington and devoted his days and nights to an earnest endeavor to drink all the Scotch whisky there was. He couldn't do it and recently he went to a doctor complaining of a disordered stomach.

"Quit drinking," ordered the doctor.

"But, my dear sir, I can't. I get so thirsty."

"Well," said the doctor, "whenever you are thirsty eat an apple instead of taking a drink."

The Englishman paid his fee and left. He met a friend to whom he told his experience.

"Bally rot," he protested. "Fawney eating forty apples a day." Saturday Evening Post.

A Crack Rifle Shot.

A good story is told of a certain colonel in connection with an inspection of a crack rifle corps which he commanded. The inspection passed off satisfactorily; there were no complaints, and the regiment was evidently in good order.

"But," said the inspecting general, "I am bound to tell you, colonel, that rumours have reached me of gambling being carried on extensively among your officers."

"That may have been the case, sir," said the colonel, "some months ago; but I can assure you that nothing of the kind is in vogue now, because I've won all the ready money in the regiment and I would not allow any gambling on credit."

FEARLESS WOMEN DIVERS.

How the Shellfish Hunters of Japan Work Under the Waters.

The women shellfish divers of Toba, Japan, perform the work that men elsewhere feel called upon to do. In fact, travelers claim that the women of Toba do nearly all the manual labor, the men being shiftless. Of the shellfishers in particular writes W. D. Cameron in "The Far East."

"Our sampan pushed off and was headed for a small island in the bay off which was a boat containing in addition to the boatmen two women. They were dressed in a costume representing an upper and a lower garment, and as we approached they jumped into the sea and swam toward us. I may mention the afternoon was bitterly cold, with a raw north wind blowing, necessitating our party turning up heavy overcoat collars and drawing up rugs. After a few preliminary strokes the two women turned turtle, as it were, and disappeared beneath the surface of the water.

"It being clear, we could see them swimming down into the depths until they completely disappeared, the water at that spot being at least twenty-five feet deep. They stayed down for a period covering anything from one and a half to three and a half minutes, reappearing bearing in their hands live shellfish, seaweed, etc., taken from the bottom. This spoil they dropped into our boat, resting a few moments by hanging on to its side, repeating the performance again and again.

"The most impressive and I may almost say awe inspiring feature of the whole performance was the remarkable sounds those women gave vent to while preparing to go under. The noises were like nothing more than moans starting at first softly and gradually increasing both in volume and scale until they reached a stage resembling the cries of a soul in torment. Between these sounds were emitted shrill whistles, all this extraordinary performance being apparently a preparation of the respiratory organs for the long spell under water.

"After repeated dives the women were picked up by their boat and rowed to the neighboring island, where presently we saw the smoke of a large fire, from which no doubt the 'mermaids' obtained a considerable degree of comfort after their prolonged immersion in the icy water."

Women and Hats.

"Aren't some of the hats women wear absurd?"

"Yes," replied Miss Cayenne, "and yet when some people put them on they do look so appropriate."

AMUSE THE KIDDIES.

How to Play the "Cut-Out" Game With the Youngsters.

Mothers are often at their wits' end to know what to do with convalescing children. During this trying time it takes much ingenuity to keep them interested.

One of the most pleasurable things to buy and girl alike is the cut-out game. It is as old as the hills and yet has kept its newness and interest to this day. The boy will scorn the ordinary cut-out play, but give him first a blank book, then a catalogue from a sporting firm, a pair of scissors and a bottle of glue and tell him to furnish you a summer camp in the Adirondacks, such as he would like to live in; then suggest that he fix up a scene in Canada in the winter time, with skating, skating, and so on.

The way to interest the little chap is to excite his imagination first. Describe to him in detail the interior, then the exterior, of a camp in the woods; then tell him to cut out from the catalogue all the pictures which have anything to do with tent life. These include guns, fishing rods, boats, cooking utensils, cots, etc. Clothing for summer camping will probably be illustrated by pictures of men or women dressed in these garments. These figures may be grouped round a fire or standing in a canoe or climbing the mountains.

When the child has a number of illustrations cut out let him use his ingenuity to furnish the scene. Much can be done if the mother can draw a bit. In such a case she could outline on the first page the inside of a bare tent, to be furnished by the child. On the second page could be the outside of the tent, with the mountain in the background and a lake at one side.

Further interest can be added to this game by giving the little one a set of crayons with which to color the pictured scenes. Water colors are a joy to children if they can be arranged in such a way that the water will not spill. An excellent way to do this is to give the child a sewing board. Where the board is cut out in a curve it will fit into the body, and the paints may be placed on its flat surface with no danger of upsetting them.

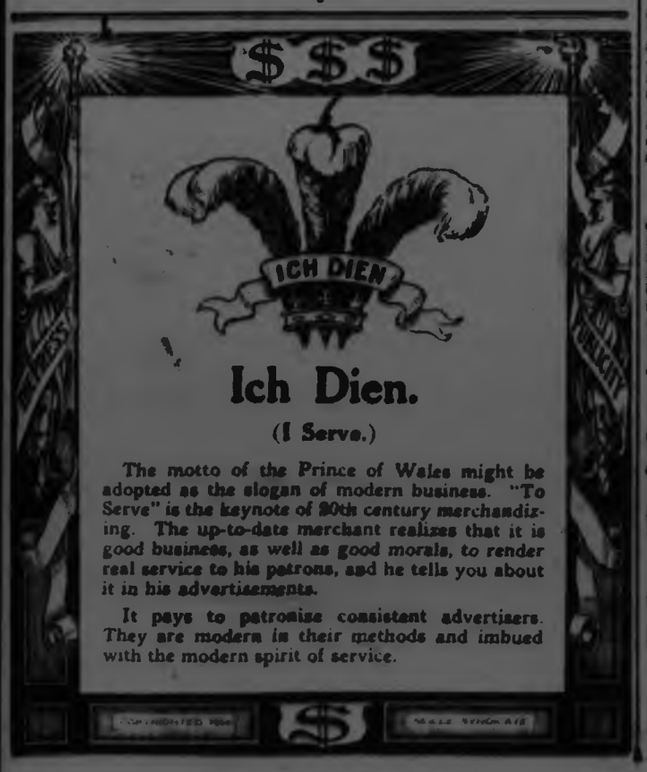
The wise mother saves her old magazines and catalogues for the time when her children may need them.

Marsh Fly Eggs a Delicacy.

The Indians of Mexico eat many curious foods. One of the most remarkable of these is made of the eggs of a species of marsh fly. This fly deposits its eggs in incredible quantities upon flags and rushes. The eggs are gathered and made into cakes, which are sold in the markets. The Indians call the eggs water wheat. They resemble fine fish roe and when mixed with cornmeal and fowl eggs form a staple article of diet, particularly during Lent. The insects themselves, which are about the size of the housefly, are captured, pounded into a paste, boiled in corn husks in much the same fashion as tamales and in this form are eaten.

When the Waiter Wins.

Two men were wrangling as to who should settle with the waiter for the luncheon. When the question had been finally decided and the contestants had gone the waiter said to one of his regular customers who was a witness of the scene: "That's what we like, for every time it happens we come in for an extra tip. The man who couldn't get the check has only one way to get even, and that is by giving the waiter something, and nine times out of ten he does it and makes the amount more than he would have given if he had paid the check. This one ordered extra cigars and left the change for me. We like the 'give me the check' quarrels."



Ich Dien.

(I Serve.)

The motto of the Prince of Wales might be adopted as the slogan of modern business. "To Serve" is the keynote of 20th century merchandizing. The up-to-date merchant realizes that it is good business, as well as good morals, to render real service to his patrons, and he tells you about it in his advertisements.

It pays to patronize consistent advertisers. They are modern in their methods and imbued with the modern spirit of service.

PRINCESS WAS FOOLED.

Wooden Soldiers Stood as Sentry at Her Door.

In 1805 Ferdinand IV. was driven from the throne of Naples. All the members of his family, except an aged half-sister, fled to Sicily. Of the lonely old Bourbon princess who remained in the land where her family had reigned, De Gubernatis Kamorad tells a touching little story.

The victorious French, who had driven Ferdinand from the throne, treated the old lady with every consideration. The new King, Joseph Bonaparte, left her property and her income virtually intact. But he did order that the sentry who always had stood before the door of the princess and had saluted when she passed, should be removed. And on this point, in spite of the princess' pleas, he remained firm. The Bourbons had ceased to reign, he said, and no royal honors could properly be accorded to a member of the family.

The loss of this mark of respect wounded the princess more deeply than many more serious losses had done. For the first time she felt herself an outcast, an exile in her own land. She grieved so steadily that her strength began to fail.

Finally the loyal servants who had stayed with their mistress, decided to resort to a subterfuge in order to restore the old lady's spirits. Accordingly they fashioned a great wooden soldier, of dignified and martial appearance; on this dummy they painted the gay uniform of the Neapolitan grenadier. They set the figure in a sentry box by the gate of the princess' residence, and waited for their mistress to drive out.

They counted on the nearsightedness of the princess, and on the fact that she always passed through the gate in her carriage, to make the ruse successful. And when at last the carriage did pass, they saw by the glad flush that came to the princess' face that she had not detected the deception.

From that time the princess revived. The sentry never left his post, and the princess never discovered the ruse by which her loyal servants had restored her spirits and her health. But occasionally she did complain that under the new regime soldiers did not present arms, as they had done in the days when her brother was King.

Live Minnow In Tube For Bait.

Of interest to fishermen is a novel contrivance recently patented for using a single live minnow for an entire day's fishing for muskinonge or bass. A strong, clear glass tube is equipped with metallic rings, to which are attached clusters of hooks, and a loop wire. A live minnow is placed within the tube, which is filled with water, and the fishline is attached to the wire loop. Upon casting the minnow into the water the tube magnifies the minnow and attracts the large fish. Fresh water is constantly admitted into the tube, and the minnow is not injured, mutilated nor hurt in any way, no matter how many times it is cast. The glass tube, filled with water, is invisible the moment it is submerged.

The Tragedies of Old Age.

With all its compensations, age has yet many tragedies hard to endure. The old man finds that many of his hopes have withered, that many of his ambitions are unsatisfied. He started out in life with great ambitions to become a Prime Minister, a president, to command the applause of listening senates, to achieve great riches. He slowly finds that his initial ambition can bear no fruit and that he must be content with little. He must learn to secure a degree of comfort in lowering his ambition to second place or to third place or to no place at all. But age brings the compensation of a better judgment of values.

Maddening Snuff.

On the Amazon river several Indian tribes use snuff, called pareca, which is made of the seeds of a species of plant. When a bout of snuff taking is determined on the people become highly intoxicated and then use the snuff. The effect of pareca is so violent that the taker drops as if shot and lies insensible for some time. Those more accustomed to it are highly excited, dancing and singing as if mad. The effect soon subsides. Other tribes use it to repel argue during the wet season.

Waste.

By habit and false pride we are a wasteful people. Public and private extravagance is a national vice in which we glory while sermonising about it. Honest thrift is an alien characteristic that we are apt to regard with lofty contempt. So we squander our resources heedlessly in the government of our cities and the conduct of the household and call ourselves a practical people with strictly modern business ideas.

In No Hurry.

A lecturer one torrential night addressed an audience which might have been much larger without taxing the seating capacity of the hall. Naturally he was willing to curtail his address, and, having reached what he considered the psychological moment, said, "I'm afraid I've kept you too long."

Whereupon a voice replied, "Go on; it's still raining."

Rubbing It In.

"Why does that lady grin so every time she sees you?"

"She knows I'm only getting $10 a week."

"But why the grin?"

"I was engaged to her once and broke it off, and she afterward married a millionaire."

Not Consistent.

"What was I saying when I dodged that automobile?"

"You were saying that life is not worth living. But if you think so why did you dodge?"

"I understand Smith and Jones had high words the other day." "Yes; and they're going to have higher ones. Each of them has engaged a lawyer."

What are Peps

Peps are the new treatment for coughs, colds and lung troubles. They are little tablets made up from Pine extracts and medicinal essences. When put into the mouth these medicinal ingredients turn into healing vapors, which are breathed down direct to the lungs, throat and bronchial tubes. The Peps treatment is direct. Swallowing cough mixtures into the stomach, to cure ailments and disorders in throat and lungs, is indirect. Peps are revolutionizing the treatment of colds, as their price is within the reach of all. 60c. box all druggists, or Peps Co., Toronto.

Uv course I is sorry for troubles uv odders,
I hates to see any one down on dey luck.
I knows dat de man uv de world are me brudders,
An' I helps 'em, if possible, out uv de muck.
But w'en it comes down to a question uv cases
I lays all my sympathies up on de shelf.
For uv all de fall guys wot's in trouble's embraces
De guy dat I'm sorriest for is meself.

I kin feel for de troubles uv friends an' relations,
But not half so bad as I does for me own.

I hates to see odder mugs short on der rations,
But to famish meself is wot loins me to groan
A guy wot's in love an' don't seem to be wimmin',
I'm sorry for him, but me sorrer is tame
To de way dat I feel w'en I'm havin' an innin'
An' losin' meself at de same kind uv game.

W'en some odder gieser makes haryels uv money,
I'm glad for his sake as a feller kin be;
But, say, it don't make me one quarter so sunny
As it wud if de same t'ing had happened to me!
I'm proud uv de t'ings dat me friends do, but pecouler,
A hull bloomin' lot, of de t'ings dat I do.
I laughs at folks' jokes, but I laughs a lot louder
At de jokes wot I makes all meself, an' dat's true!

W'at's more, I kin say dat I likes meself better
Dan any one else I has met wid so far.
I knows meself down to de last little letter,
An' I t'inks I'm as good as de best uv dem are.
I works for meself, an' I gives meself credit
Fer bein' de best uv me friends, old or new.
I'm strong for meself, an' now dat I've said it,
Say, cul, on de dead, ain't it dat way wid you?

SKIN SOFT AS A CHILD'S.

"I was a great sufferer from eczema and salt rheum for years," writes Mr John W Haas, Lansenburg, N S. "Five years ago three boxes of Dr Chase's Ointment cured me and the old trouble never returned. My skin is as soft as a child's now, and I shall always say a good word for this Ointment."

Punishment In Effigy.

Punishment in effigy was legally practiced in France and with great solemnity up to the time of the first revolution, e If the man condemned escaped a dummy was put up in his cell and the entire routine of the law allowed to take its course. The warrant was read to it, and on the day appointed it was conducted to the scaffold in the presence of all the legal functionaries and with all the circumstances of the law. Sometimes the same person was executed in effigy simultaneously in several cities, but that did not exempt him from actual punishment should he be afterward caught. The scaffold was always ready.

Cheerfulness and Cholera.

A cheerful disposition is held by some doctors to be the best protection against cholera. When this disease first visited Paris in 1832 a notice was issued advising the inhabitants "to avoid as far as possible all occasions of melancholy and all painful emotions and to seek plenty of distractions and amusements. Those with a bright and happy temperament are not likely to be stricken down." This advice was largely followed, and even when cholera was claiming over a thousand weekly victims the theaters and cafes were thronged. The epidemic was in panic-quarters treated as a huge joke, and plays and songs were written around it. Rochefort wrote a play, "Le Choléra Morbus," which proved a big success, and another production on the same lines, "Paris-malade," also had a long run.—London Chronicle.

Ether Vapors.

Ether is consumed by gallons to get drunk on in a small part of Scotland. The origin of this peculiar and limited abuse is strange. In 1848 a bad epidemic of cholera broke out in Glasgow. Among those flying from it were some who came back to Drapperstown, their native place. With them they brought a cholera mixture which they found "exceeding comforting." A rascally doctor, knowing that the comfort proceeded from ether, laid in a whole cask. He made his fortune and started the habit that lasts till yet. Ether is sold over counters in Scotland, the penny a drink. An old ether toper can drink two or three ounces a day, but one-half ounce is one big dram in water. The drinker gets hilarious in 6 minute. It is far wilder and more dangerous than alcohol.

How Tortoise Shell is Worked.

The soldering of two pieces of tortoise shell together is effected by means of hot pincheas, which, while they compress, soften the opposed edge of each piece and amalgamate them into one. Even the raspings and powder produced by the file, mixed with small fragments, are put into molds and subjected to the action of boiling water and thus made into plates of the desired thickness or into various articles which appear to have been cut out of a solid block.

MAKING WIRE.

Rolling and Drawing a Bar of Iron Into a Fine Thread.

Bars of metal four inches square are heated and passed while hot and plastic through rapidly revolving rolls, reducing them to wire rods which vary from one quarter of an inch to an inch or more in diameter, depending upon the finished size of wire wanted.

These rods, which are formed into coils as they pass through the rolls, are dipped in acid baths to remove loose scale and provide a lubricant for drawing. Drawing consists of pulling rods while cold through holes of gradually increasing diameter drilled in steel plates. During this process the particles of metal become elongated and strained, making the wire harder and more brittle. To restore it to a proper temper it is necessary to beat or anneal it.

When a fine diameter is required there must be repeated annealings and drawings. This may be done until the bar, which originally was four inches square and four feet long, becomes reduced to a diameter of a single thousandth of an inch and extended 13,000 miles in length. Before so fine a size is reached the wire will cut into the steel of the die plate, so the usual die plates must be discarded and the drawing continued through holes drilled in diamonds, the diameter of these diamond dies decreasing by fractional parts of a thousandth of an inch. This wire affords a striking illustration of a material made more valuable by the application of labor.

From the time the bar of metal enters the furnace nothing is added to it. All the work is done with one article, which is passed through rolls and drawn through die plates until it is finished

Lavender Water.—Put into a bottle and shake well one-eighth of a pint of spirits of wine, one-eighth of an ounce of oil of lavender and a quarter of a dram of essence of ambergris.

Eau de Cologne.—Half an ounce each of oils of lemon and bergamot, sixteenth of an ounce of oil of orange peel, quarter of a dram of oil of rosemary, twenty drops of oil of neroli, five drops of essence of musk or ambergris. Reduce this amount of ingredients in half a pint of rectified spirits of wine.

Numerous perfumes may be made by adding to a small quantity of rectified spirits of wine oils of geranium, sandalwood, rosemary or essence of bergamot, musk or ambergris, adding it drop by drop until the desired perfume is obtained. These ingredients may be obtained from any drug store.

To Fence In Italy.

Owing to the amount of smuggling of contraband goods from Switzerland and the consequent loss of revenue, the Italian Government has decided to fence the frontier with metal netting. The netting is about nine feet high, and to it is attached bells, which the moment the netting is touched or trodden on creates such a ringing that all the customs officials are immediately on the alert for some distance along the line.

It has also been decided to increase the number of posts and enclosures. These officials will be provided with police dogs, the animals also expected to attack and catch smugglers and to fight their dogs.

Chlorine and Its Discoverer.

Chlorine is perhaps the most important of all gases in commercial chemistry. It is the great bleacher, without which we could have no white linen or white straw hats. It is also the best disinfectant known. It is essential to the manufactur of chloroform, and it is used extensively for the extraction of gold from its ores. Chlorine's value to the world has been incalculable, yet Scheele, the man who discovered it, lived hungry and died a pauper.

IF KIDNEYS ACT BACK TAKE SALTS

Says Backache is sign you have been eating too much meat

When you wake up with the backache and dull misery in the kidney region it generally means you have been eating too much meat, says a well-known authority. Meat forms uric acid which overworks the kidneys in their effort to filter it from the blood and they become sort of paralyzed and lazzy. When your kidneys get sluggish and clog you must relieve them, like you relieve your bowels; removing all the body's urinous waste, else you have backache, sick headache, dizzy spells, your stomach sours, tongue is coated, and when the weather is bad you have rheumatic twinges. The urine is cloudy, full of sediment, channels often get sour water scalds, and you are obliged to seek relief two or three times during the night.

Either consult a good reliable physician at once or get from your pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days, and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to clean and stimulate sluggish kidneys, also to neutralize acids in the urine so it no longer irritates, thus ending bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is a life saver for regular meat eaters. It is inexpensive, cannot injure, and makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink.

ANCIENT MAKE-UP3.

Rouge and Flesh Colors Have Been Found in Classic Rome.

Thousands of years ago the art of "make-up" as practiced in the dressing-rooms of actors and actresses of to-day, was known to the Egyptians and Romans. For proof of this one only has to study the many interesting theatrical relics in the British Museum.

The Egyptians supply us with what is probably the oldest wig in the world—a wig, it is true, that was in no way connected with the drama, but one that will compare favorably with the finest creations of the theatrical perruquier. Strangely enough, the tresses are made of plaited crepe hair, exactly similar to that used by modern actors for moustaches.

In the Graeco-Roman department, says the 'Era Annual,' may be seen the cosmetic box of a Roman lady. The white and flesh-colored chalks and rouges are similar to those used for "making-up" in the days previous to the invention and manufacture of grease-paint. There are also two objects of the theatrical life of the past that have their replicas in the theatres of the present day. One is a thin, oblong slab of stone, bearing the Latin words, "Circus Plenus," which was occasionally to be found outside a Roman circus, and corresponded to the familiar modern notice, "House Full." The other is a plain ivory disc displayed in the Egyptian room, but which would hardly attract attention. This common-looking object is a theatre check or pass, but whether of a temporary or permanent character cannot be ascertained.

Much the richest department in stage objects, however, is the Graeco-Roman room, where one case of stage exhibits may be seen. Here are to be found specimens of the masks worn by actors, which were modelled according to strict rules. They were made of terra-cotta, and must have been very uncomfortable to wear. There are also numerous statuettes in bronze and terra-cotta of actors wearing their masks in the various characters they impersonated, in addition to models of masks of every description and kind.

Getting On.

"How did you come to buy that second-hand table?" exclaimed Mrs. Climber's husband. "We don't need it."

"That shows how much you know," replied his wife. "In one of the drawers I found a bunch of the most select visiting cards in the city. They will look lovely in our hall."

NEW NAPOLEON STORY

LATEST TRADITION SAYS HE WAS SHOT IN AUSTRIA.

Amazing Tale Is Now Unfolded to the Effect That a Devoted Double of the Emperor Gave Himself Up and Died on St. Helena—Napoleon Himself Died Visiting Son, It Is Said.

Every student of Napoleon is ready to declare on oath that the emperor died on May 5th, 1821, in his narrow chamber at Longwood, St. Helena. A storm was rolling over the island prison, and on its wings, muttering "France—Army—Head of the Army—Josephine!" the most dazzling genius of the modern world passed out of life. To this history posterity has adhered.

We have another and far stranger one to unfold.

Napoleon died, not at St. Helena, but in Austria. He died, not in his bed, with the faithful remnant of his followers beside him, but shot by an Austrian sentry. He died, not as Napoleon, but as an obscure refugee from Italy.

How can we make good a tale so extraordinary?

Napoleon had a double. This double, his very image, had more than once been employed by the emperor to pose for him in one situation or another; sometimes to test the truth of some new story of plot against the great man's life—plots more numerous than history in the main is aware of. To the imperial police the double was known both by sight and by name, though they were not always, of course, in the secret of his comings and goings.

Well, the day comes when, after Waterloo—and the drums of the Old Guard have rolled the dirge of the last march of the last army of Napoleon—the fallen emperor, the cup finally at his lips, must sail, an exile, to the rock in the Atlantic. But he does not sail! It is the devoted double who gives himself in charge to Captain Maitland of the Bellerophon (the Bully Ruffian of the sailorman); the double who settles down with Bertrand, Montholon, Las Cases, to the appalling dreariness of St. Helena.

And Napoleon? What becomes of him? Napoleon, more or less transformed in style and appearance, withdraws secretly to Florence. In Florence he purchases the shop and little business of an optician, and forthwith enters on the most extraordinary phase of the most extraordinary career in Europe. He gains the esteem of the neighbors. The disguise of the Man of Destiny must have lacked something, for they perceived in him a notable likeness to Napoleon, and familiarly bestowed on him that name which had shaken empires. Then, one day, on a sudden, Signor "Napoleone," optician, disappeared. The little shop was closed and shuttered; the little man so curiously resembling the victor of Austerlitz, the victim of Waterloo, no longer stood behind his counter or gossiped in his doorway. Florence, in brief, beheld him no more.

To the new King of France, however, Signor "Napoleone," before departure, had addressed a letter, the contents of which filtered somehow from the throne; and to buy the silence of those persons who had become aware of this missive Louis XVIII. distributed among them a large sum of money. Almost in the same hour a small and rather corpulent individual, fifty years of age or thereabouts, is fired at and killed by a soldier of the Emperor of Austria while attempting to scale a wall of the park of Schoenbrunn. It was at Schoenbrunn, readers will remember, that Napoleon's son and hope, the gentle young Duke of Reichstadt, languished—neglected by his careless mother, Marie Louise—in the most wretched of gilded captivities. Napoleon, always pining for sight and sound of the boy, had stolen to Schoenbrunn to see him.

Not unnaturally, the affair of the sentry's bullet made some stir at the French Embassy. Not unnaturally, the Embassy decided to say nothing whatever on the subject. There is yet a little to relate. The civil registers of the village in Lorraine where the emperor's double was born carry the following legend: "Died at St. Helena," and the date is precisely that of the death of Napoleon. Let it be added that an English lady of the aristocratic world, received in audience at St. Helena by the dethroned monarch of Europe (to whom, in his imperial days, she had been presented at the Tuileries), protested formally that she refused to recognize him in the prisoner of Sir Hudson Lowe.

This story has not, until to-day, been printed in English, and in only one other language in Europe has it ever seen the light. What a subject (were he still among us) for the pen of the elder Dumas, who gave us the most fascinating of all histories of the Man in the Iron Mask—though there is not a word of truth in it!

This most mysterious narrative of Signor "Napoleone," optician of Florence, and the Emperor Napoleon's thrice-attached double, who lies contentedly for his master on the rock in the Atlantic, is surely romantic enough for the most imaginative pen that ever yet has sought to transmute fable into fact. But there is at least one question to which, we fancy, the majority of readers would like an answer: Who, then, wrote the "Memorials of St. Helena"—Napoleon's testimony to mankind? Was it the work of his double?

The Dignified Course.

An army examiner once had a candidate before him who apparently was unable to answer the simplest question. At last the examiner lost his temper and, with sarcastic emphasis, lost on the youth before him, said:

"Suppose, sir, that you were a captain in command of a company of infantry; that in your rear was an impassable abyss; that on either side of you towered perpendicular rocks of untraversable height; that before you stood the enemy, a hundred men to each one of yours. What, sir, would you do in this emergency?"

"Sir," said the aspirant to military honors, "I should resign."—Pearson's Weekly.

The Aurora Borealis.

The aurora borealis, or northern dawn, is an electrical phenomenon which in high northern latitudes, especially in winter, illuminates the skies with streamers of light. As the streams of light have a tremendous motion, they are called in many places the "merry dances." They assume many shapes and a variety of colors, from a pale red or yellow to a deep red or blood color, and in the northern latitudes they serve to illuminate the earth and cheer the gloom of the long winter nights. The connection of the aurora displays with the disturbance of the magnetic needle is now regarded as an ascertained fact.

Early Methods of Curing Skins.

The original process of curing skins was probably the simple one of cleaning and drying them. Removal of the hair by maceration in water seems to have been common among the very early tribes, and one writer has suggested that the idea was obtained from the natural process of depilation. They must certainly have been familiar with it in the case of drowned animals, where maceration can be plainly observed. Following this smoke, sour milk, oil and the brains of the animals themselves were found efficacious. Many of these primitive methods are employed in remote places at the present time.

Great Shooting.

Smith and Jones were walking along the boulevard one afternoon when Brown was incidentally mentioned in the conversation.

"Speaking of Brown," thoughtfully remarked Jones, "I understand he is something of a shot."

"He is a wonder," was the prompt rejoinder of Smith. "We were out in a field practicing one day when he hit the bullseye at the first shot."

"Fine for Brown!" commendingly returned Jones. "Tickled him almost to death, I suppose?"

"Don't you believe it!" answered Smith. "He had to pay for the bull."

Growth of Eucalyptus.

In a period of ten years the eucalyptus tree will grow twelve inches in diameter and ninety feet in height, while it will take white oak and hickory 90 to 100 years to attain the same growth, and other hard woods, such as walnut, will take fifty to sixty years to attain the same size. This in itself is a tremendous advantage, and together with the fact that it reproduces itself from the same stump makes it of special commercial value.

A Tip to Mamma.

Little Rollo had been reproved for his table manners by papa and mamma. He trained his baby stare on mamma to ask, "When you was a little girl didn't y'ever dip your jelly roll in coffee?"

"No, my dear," with a tinge of acerbity.

"Y'ot to try it. Gee it's great!"

He Hit It Right.

"Now, Tommy," said the teacher, "what is a simile?"

Tommy hesitated visibly. "I—I—I fergit now," he finally answered.

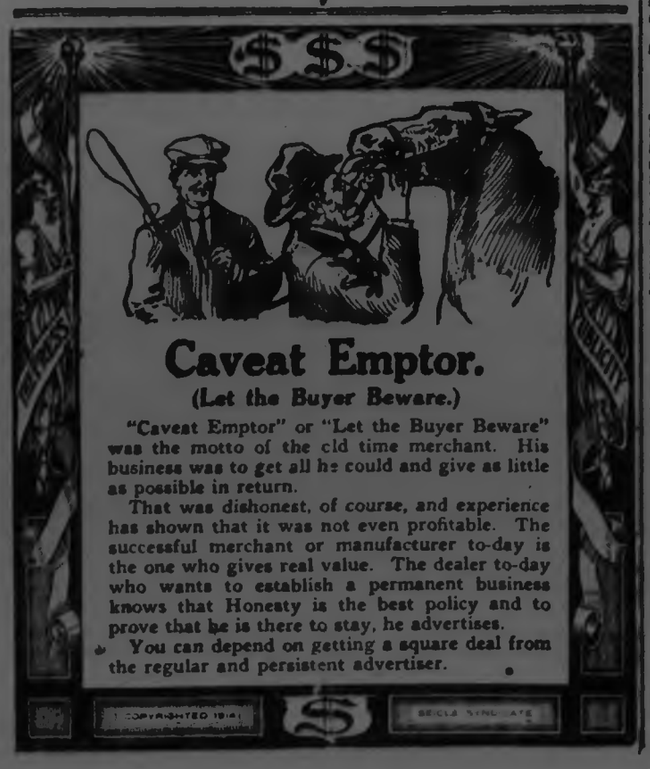
"But if you said, 'My hours at school are bright as sunshine,' what figure of speech would that be?"

"Irony," responded Tommy.

Expensive.

"Yes," said the young wife proudly, "father always gives something expensive when he makes presents."

"So I discovered when he gave you away," rejoined the young husband.



Caveat Emptor.

(Let the Buyer Beware.)

"Caveat Emptor" or "Let the Buyer Beware" was the motto of the old time merchant. His business was to get all he could and give as little as possible in return.

That was dishonest, of course, and experience has shown that it was not even profitable. The successful merchant or manufacturer to-day is the one who gives real value. The dealer to-day who wants to establish a permanent business knows that Honesty is the best policy and to prove that he is there to stay, he advertises.

PERILOUS CARGOES

Sailors Dread Ships That Carry Sugar, Coffee or Cotton.

ACIDS ALSO ARE DANGEROUS.

Dynamite and Other Explosives Are Tame in Comparison With Chemicals That Are a Constant Menace to the Vessels in Which They Are Stored.

"Deliver us from a cargo of sugar or coffee or cotton," is the prayer that many sailors send up when they are in doubt as to what fate will bring them next in the cargo line. They welcome, almost gladly, a cargo of dynamite or other explosive, but they dislike the positive discomfort and danger that come to them with the cargo of sugar, coffee or cotton.

At first sight it seems that dynamite would be a cargo to be carefully sidestepped, but from a sailor's point of view more things than the mere danger involved are to be considered. A cargo of sugar is bad. Put hundreds of tons of cane sugar in casks in the hold of a vessel and let the ship steam through a belt of hot weather. The odor is sickening. The sailors cannot get the sweet taste out of their mouths. They crave vinegar or lemon juice—anything sour. They lose their appetites and are always glad when a voyage on which the cargo was sugar is over.

Coffee is as disagreeable as sugar, in addition to being really dangerous. A cargo of green coffee is not at all unpleasant at first, but the odor rapidly palls on the olfactory nerves. In damp weather it becomes dreadful. It seems to impregnate everything in the ship and eventually the crew lose all appetite and sometimes become seriously ill.

Cotton is a really dangerous cargo. If a little oil happens to touch raw cotton the result is what is called spontaneous combustion. A single bale of cotton saturated with such an oil as boiled linseed, and lying at the bottom of a hold, can be compared only to a slow match attached to a bomb. In fact, it is even more dangerous, because while there might be ninety-nine chances out of a hundred that something might happen to prevent the explosion of the bomb, there are about 900 chances in 1,000 that the cotton will burn.

Onions also cause sailors much discomfort. The French steamer Yarra with a cargo of onions from Alexandria to England, lost one man and had three others rendered insensible by fumes rising from the tons of onions in her hold.

Acids and other chemicals form dangerous cargoes. Carbide of calcium, for instance, is more dangerous than dynamite. Acetyline gas is made from this chemical, and the gas is constantly given off if the product is exposed to air. Some time ago the Hamburg bark Hebe was towed into Plymouth sound, England, in a disabled condition. Her cargo was 200 tons of calcium carbide. When the commander in chief at Devonport learned the nature of the disabled bark's cargo he ordered all the war vessels in the sound to take refuge at Hamaze and forbade the Hebe to stand in for repairs until all her perilous cargo had been removed by a barge of the war department.

The Volturno, which burned at sea, had a cargo which included rags, peat moss, barrels of spirits, tar and oils, together with drums of various chemicals. Water could have little effect on the flames from such a combination when it had caught fire.

Nitric and sulphuric acids are dangerous cargoes and add to the dangers of the sea when carried aboard ships. Some years ago the Phoenix liner Michigan was caught in a gale while coming to this country. She had a deckload of sulphuric and muriatic acid in metal drums. A huge sea washed over the forward deck and broke a number of the acid drums from their lashings, sending them crashing around the deck. Volunteers were called for to heave the drums overboard. The crashing of the sea and the rolling on the deck had split some of the containers and the acid burned the flesh of the sailors who responded to the call for volunteers. The battle with the deadly acid drums waged for an hour. Men after man was forced to fall out from the line of battle and go below to have his wounds dressed. When the situation was becoming critical the danger was eliminated the way it had come—by another wave washing over the vessel and carrying away the unfastened drums and part of the lee rail.

Shipmasters dislike carrying drums of acid where they cannot be reached readily. A Chilean ship put in at the Falkland islands leaking badly. Her cargo was made up of drums of acid and chalk. The acid had leaked from the drums and mixed with the chalk, forming carbonic acid gas in the hold. This gas is deadly and the crew could not make repairs. Meantime the acid had gathered at the bottom of the hold and eaten away the iron frames of the ship.

The Honeymoon.

The honeymoon has no definite duration, but is longer or shorter according as the temper of the high contracting parties determines, or their relatives, or the weather, or the mode, or the comparative cost of traveling and staying at home. Briefly, it is that interval during which the man, going out in the morning, remembers his kiss and forgets his overshoes as distinguished from the interval during which he remembers his overshoes and forgets his kiss.

Quite a Change.

"Percy is getting used to public speaking, isn't he?"

"Oh, yes. I remember when you could hardly get him to stand up, and now you can hardly get him to sit down."

A Bird's Barbed Wire Fences.

There may be seen along the roadsides in Central America a brown wren about the size of a canary which builds a nest out of all proportion to its apparent needs. It selects a small tree with horizontal branches growing close together. Across two of the branches it lays sticks fastened together with tough fiber until a platform about six feet long by two feet wide has been constructed. On the end of this platform nearest the tree trunk it then builds a huge dome shaped nest a foot or so high with thick sides of interwoven thorns. A covered passageway is then made from the nest to the end of the platform in as crooked a manner as possible. Across the outer end, as well as at short intervals along the inside of this tunnel, are placed curving little fences of thorns with just space enough for the owners to pass through. On going out this opening is closed by the owner by placing thorns across the gateway, and thus the safety of the eggs or young is assured.—Brooklyn Eagle.

Penknives.

Nowadays we use penknives principally for sharpening pencils. There was a time, however, when they were used primarily for doing something else. They used to be just what their name would indicate—they were "penknives." The ancients used pens made of goose quills, just as our forefathers did up to about a hundred years ago. The quill pen was made by hand, of course, and whenever the point of one would break or lose its elasticity it was up to the penman to put a new point or "nib" on the quill. This was done with a small knife, and hence we have the word that has outlived the quill pen a hundred years—"penknife." In the olden times the penknife was a necessary accessory of the writing desk. When the clasp-knife came in the smaller sizes took their name from the little desk knife, while the bigger ones were called "jackknives," "jack" signifying anything masculine or big and strong.—Kansas City Star.

Saw It in a Dream.

For many years ivory manufacturers were trying to devise a machine for turning out a billiard ball as nearly perfect as possible and at the same time avoiding waste. Among those who strove to perfect such a machine was Mr. John Carter of the firm of John Carter & Son, well known ivory manufacturers of half a century ago, whose premises will stand in Bishopsgate. One night after Mr. Carter had been striving to solve the problem for some time he suddenly awoke his wife by shouting out, "I have got it!" and rushed downstairs into his study, where he made a drawing of the last knife, for the want of which he had been so long waiting in order to complete his machine. It appears that he had fallen asleep and dreamed about the machine, and in the dream the solution of the difficulty was revealed to him.—London Standard.

Brown Eyes and Color Blindness.

Color blindness is one of the great drawbacks to a large percentage of men who would enlist in the United States marine corps, according to the recruiting officers.

"We have a box filled with different colored yarn," said an officer of that branch of the service. "We ask the prospective recruit to pick out green, for instance. If he is color blind he will invariably pick all the red yarn. We place it all back in the box again and ask him to pick out the red. In nine cases out of ten out will come the green.

"Another strange thing I have noticed is that most persons who are color blind have brown eyes. Once in awhile a person with eyes of a different color is afflicted that way, but as a general rule they are persons with brown eyes."—Kansas City Star.

How Jimmie Kept His Horse

By F. A. MITCHEL

"Jimmie, there's nothing to eat in the house. You've got to sell Ginger."

"Maw, I can't do it. That horse and me is like brothers."

"But we can't starve, and the horse is all there is left."

Jim and his mother lived in a new town on the bank of the Mississippi river. The population was variegated, excitable and believed in the future of the town, which was called Jones City after its founder. Jim was fifteen years old and born with a predisposition to horseflesh. Some one had given him a colt, which he had traded for a mare, and after a number of other trades Ginger, the apple of Jim's eye, was acquired.

Jim left his mother and went out to the river bank, exceedingly sorrowful. The mighty stream rolled fifty feet below. Jim was so disconsolate that he thought of ending his troubles by jumping into the water. But it couldn't end them, because he could swim like a duck and was sure that when it came to drowning he would paddle ashore.

Anyway he was opposed to the jump without taking Ginger with him. Ginger would back. But he might blindfold the horse and he would go over without knowing it. The more the boy thought of the matter the stronger grew in him a desire to take that leap on Ginger's back—not now for suicidal purposes, but because it would be a daring feat. If he announced his intention of doing so what a crowd would collect to see the leap! Every one in Jones City would turn out.

There were 3,000 persons in the town. Now, suppose every man, woman and child could be made to pay 50 cents to see the show. That would be $1,500. Ginger wouldn't bring more than $150 at most.

What an idea!

Having got into Jim's head, he couldn't get it out. It buzzed and sizzled, but it stuck. Jim thought he would try to see what he could do with Ginger blindfolded. He tied a handkerchief around the horse's eyes, mounted him and tried to make him go. The experiment for awhile failed, but so great was the animal's confidence in his master that he soon became reconciled to walking in the dark while Jim guided him. Then he would consent to trot slowly. And so by degrees Jim got him to move quite rapidly under the handkerchief.

By this time the idea had bloomed in the boy's brain. The bluff from which he thought of jumping was perpendicular and the water beneath it forty feet deep. Jim considered the danger to be that the horse in his struggle might injure his rider. He didn't think much of any other danger. It was entirely a matter of nerve.

One day Jim appeared in a pool room and shoved a paper under the nose of the proprietor. It contained a statement that Jim Hawkins proposed for $1,000 to jump on his horse Ginger off the bank into the river in front of the town." The proprietor moved at Jim as if making a mental estimate for his coffin, then, taking up a pen, signed for $25. Jim left the place with subscriptions for over $200, and before night the whole amount had been subscribed. It was stipulated that the money was to be placed in the hands of Mr. Jones, to be paid to Jim's mother, for it was not considered probable that Jim would come out of the stunt alive.

The only person in Jones City who did not know of the approaching entertainment was Jim's mother, and he had persuaded her to visit her sister on the day it was to take place. The approach to the jumping point was roped off to keep back the crowd on either side, and every one had been cautioned to do no shouting till after the leap, lest it should cause the horse to balk.

At 3 o'clock in the afternoon Jim, wearing his birthday suit and a pair of spurs, mounted Ginger bareback, the only equipment being a bridle. Jim was a trifle pale, but his mouth indicated resolution. The handkerchief was tied carefully over the horse's eyes, and Jim rode him back and forth for awhile as a preparatory measure. Finally he took a position about a hundred yards from the bank. A number of persons crowded around him to bid him goodby, and when they were put back behind the ropes Jim, at the signal of a pistol shot, gave Ginger the word.

By the time they reached the edge of the bank the horse was loping, and at the right moment Jim lifted him with the bridle and gave him the spurs. He cleared the bank, and down, down, down went rider and horse, Jim clinging to the horse's mane, Ginger pawing the air.

Every man, woman and child rushed to the bank. There was a whirl of waters where they struck, and after what seemed an interminable time Jim came up, swimming lustily. The horse soon after appeared some twenty feet from Jim. The handkerchief had been arranged so that Jim could pull it off while between the bank and the water. Nevertheless the horse seemed dazed, not knowing at first which way to go, so that Jim, who struck out for him, was in time to catch hold of his tail.

The crowd followed the exhibitors down the river to a place where they could land, and they were received with a clamorous welcome.

When Jim's mother returned that evening and he poured a thousand dollars into her lap, telling her how he had earned it, she fainted.

EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

GIRL'S DRESS.

By Anabel Worthington.

The idea of an overblouse is well adapted to the dresses of children. In the illustration we show a frock which has a plain guimpe or underwaist, with a turn-over collar and long sleeves finished with cuffs. The sleeves and body of this guimpe are in one and there is a seam in the centre of the back and the closing is the centre of the front.

The outer dress is in the nature of an overblouse, made with sacque cut, closed at the side of the front and sleeveless. It is cut out at the neck to show the front of the guimpe just below the collar. A belt holds in the material at the waist.

These frocks are excellent for school wear. The outer portion may be of a warm woollen goods as serge or chariot, while the guimpe is something washable.

The dress pattern, No. 7,831, is cut in sizes 6, 8, 8, 10 and 12 years. Medium size requires for dress, 1⅞ yards of 44-inch material; for the guimpe, 1⅛ yards of 40-inch material, with 2⅝ yards of edging.

This pattern can be obtained by sending 10 cents to the office of this paper.

When ordering remember to give your name and address as well as the number and size of pattern required, and age of a child.

Price 15 cents, or 2 for 25c.

ANNUAL MEETING OF THE SHAREHOLDERS

umn in the four provinces west of Lake Superior, will yield per capita to the rural population of these provinces more than twice as much money as the rural population of the eight States directly south of them received per capita, for their field crops in 1914. With agriculture as the most important pedestal of our prosperity, any substantial addition to the income, and therefore, to the buying power of the agricultural community, is reacted in every line of trade, so that we have reason to anticipate a decided betterment of the west bound merchandise traffic.

A substantial improvement in your land sales, 77,000 acres in the last three months, as compared with 41,000 acres in the same months last year, increased activity in the mining and smelting industries of the South and British Columbia. Large shipments of lumber from the western mills to the interior, are all encouraging signs indicating as they do a partial restoration of confidence and a step in the direction of normal times. It is to be hoped that in anticipation of the close of the war and the new conditions that will come with it, an organization will be perfected for unity of action by the Dominion and Provincial governments and the important business interests of the country, looking not only to the largest possible immigration of agriculturists, but to the development on a more comprehensive scale than ever before of the vast natural resources of the country, so that the position of Canada may be strengthened to meet the financial obligations of the country resulting from the war and from other causes with which everybody is familiar.

Until the market improves, no special effort will be made to dispose of any portion of the four per cent. consolidated debenture stock amounting to about $40,000,000, representing the advance made from your treasury for the construction of additional railway mileage, as there is in hand at present sufficient money to meet all your requirements for a considerable period.

The company has suffered severe loss by the death of two of its most valued and esteemed directors. Sir Sandford Fleming who died July 22 was associated with the Canadian Pacific before the organization of the present company as chief engineer of the Dominion Government, and he became a member of the Board of Directors of the company in 1885. He attended the meetings of the Board with great regularity and took keen interest in the company's affairs until he was seized with the illness that finally proved fatal. Sir Wm. Van Horne, who passed away Sept. 11, joined the company as general manager at the end of the year 1881, and from that time until he retired from presidency in 1899, he devoted himself to the administration of the company's affairs with a whole heart and with unbounded confidence.

During the period that the through line of railway was under construction, and when its early completion was a matter of vital importance, his energy, ability and indomitable courage, were of a value that could not be overestimated. He loved to see the enterprise attain proportions quite beyond the most ambitious anticipations of the earlier days. The shareholders, as well as his associates of the Board of Directors will, I am sure, always cherish his memory.

At a meeting of the Board subsequently held, Sir Thomas Shaughnessy was re-elected President, and George Bury, Vice-President, of the Company, and the Executive committee appointed as follows: Richard B. Angus, George Bury, Sir Herbert Holt, Sir Edmund B. Osler, Sir Thomas G. Shaughnessy.

MOTHER! GIVE CHILD "SYRUP OF FIGS" IF TONGUE IS COATED

If cross, feverish, sick, bilious, clean little liver and bowels.

Children love this "fruit laxative," and nothing else cleanses the tender stomach, liver and bowels so nicely.

A child simply will not stop playing to empty the bowels, and the result is, they become tightly clogged with waste, liver gets sluggish, stomach sours, then your little one becomes cross, half-sick, feverish, don't eat, sleep or act naturally, breath is bad, system full of cold, has sore throat, stomach-ache or diarrhoea. Listen. Mother! See if tongue is coated, then give a teaspoonful of "California Syrup of Figs," and in a few hours all the constipated waste, sour bile and undigested food passes out of the system, and you have a well, playful child again.

Millions of mothers give "California Syrup of Figs," because it is perfectly harmless; children love it, and it never fails to act on the stomach, liver and bowels.

Ask your druggist for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which has full directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups plainly printed on the bottle. Beware of counterfeits sold here. Get the genuine, made by "California Fig Syrup Company." Refuse any other kind with contempt.

Safe, Home Treatment For Objectionable Hairs

(Boudoir Secrets)

The electric needle is not required for the removal of hair or fuzz, for with the use of plain delatone the most stubborn growth can be quickly banished. A paste is made with water and a little of the powder, then spread over the hairy surface. In about 2 minutes it is rubbed off and the skin washed. This simple treatment not only removes the hair, but leaves the skin free from blemish. Be sure you get genuine delatone.

THIEF HUNT ENDED IN JEWEL ROBBERY, RUMOUR

NEW YORK, Oct. 7.—Private detectives of two agencies were still working on the $77,000 jewel robbery at the home of Mrs. James McMillan at Manchester-by-the-Sea, Mass., although the firm of Samuels, Cornwall & Stevens, who insured $50,000 worth of the jewels, announced that it would pay the claim of $50,000 at once.

There were rumours that the thief hunt was ended and that the detectives had dropped the case at the request of the family because developments had pointed to an arrest of sensational nature.

W. J. Burn said his detectives were still at work, being directed from the Boston office of that agency. From the Ascher Detective agency, 225 Fifth avenue, the announcement was made that detectives were still operating on the theory that the robbery on the night of Aug. 7 was "an inside job."

On the night that the robbery occurred, Mrs. McMillan and her granddaughter, Mrs. Preston Gibson of Washington, who began suit for divorce last May, and the entire staff of servants were at home. The jewels were stolen, together with two insurance policies belonging to Mrs. Gibson, from a safe in a bathroom immediately adjoining Mrs. McMillan's bedroom.

Mrs. McMillan is the widow of United States Senator McMillan of Michigan. During the summer months there are many visitors at her home including members of the family, as well as their friends.

The Austro-Germans Invade Serbia

BERLIN ADMITS DEFEAT AT TAHURE

AUSTRO-GERMAN TROOPS IN SERBIA; ARE STRIKING FOR THE RAILWAYS

Bulgaria is Expected to Invade Serbia's Eastern Frontier Cutting the Salonika-Nish Railway and Thus Shutting Off Serbia From Railway Communication With the Outside World---New French Success Maintained Against Desperate Counter Attacks.

ALLIES SERVED NOTICE ON GREECE

LONDON, Oct. 7.—The Austro-German troops have invaded Serbia, according to despatches received here this afternoon. The Austro-German forces have crossed the Drina, Save and Danube rivers. This indicates that larger forces have been concentrated against the Serbian frontier than has been intimated in the recent London despatches.

For several weeks the Austro-German artillery have been continuing an intermittent bombardment of the Serbian positions on the south bank of the Danube near Semendria, east of Belgrade, and early this week one division attempting to cross the Danube was annihilated by the Serbian defenders.

The Austro-Germans, in all probability, will strike quickly for the railway leading through Nish and Sofia to Constantinople. Bulgaria is expected to invade Serbia's eastern frontier, cutting the Salonika-Nish railway, and thus shutting Serbia off from railway communication with the outside world.

It is believed here that Austrian troops form the army marching on Serbia from the West, and that they are following the path of the Austrian invasion of last November.

The Germans, under Von Mackensen, are believed to be moving down the Morava Valley.

Serbian forces have been massed along all three rivers for several weeks, ready to meet the invaders.

The Allies are hopeful that they may withstand the Teuton assault until the success of the Anglo-French offensive forces the Germans to withdraw from Serbia.

An entire French army corps, it was reported this afternoon, has reached the Serbian frontier, and is being hurried to the Serbian border postions, threatened by the Bulgars.

BERLIN, Via Wireless, Oct. 7.—The War Office admitted in an official statement this afternoon that the new French attacks in the Champagne region have driven the Germans from their positions around Tahure. It was stated that at every other point the French attacks have been repulsed.

The War Office also announced the capture of Russian positions on a three-mile front before Dvinsk.

PARIS, Oct. 7.—The Germans threw line after line of troops against the Tahure Height positions in Champagne, captured by the French on Tuesday, but were repulsed in each attack with heavy losses.

The Germans were hurled back along the French front in desperate attempts to win back positions taken by the French in recent attacks, the War Office reported this afternoon.

Four successive enemy attacks were directed against the works taken by the French west of the Socchez-Angres road. In each instance the Germans were caught by heavy fire and compelled to flee, suffering heavy losses.

An intense bombardment by both sides south of Somme, north of the Aisne, around Tracey-Le-Val, and the St. Mard Forest, and on the sectors of Andechy Dancourt and Canney, was reported in this afternoon's communique.

ATHENS, Oct. 7.—The Allies have served notice on Greece that all merchandise consigned through Greek ports to Bulgaria will be treated as contraband of war and confiscated.

The British Minister, as representative of the Allies, made public this announcement to-day, though no formal declaration of war has passed between Bulgaria and the Allied powers.

The Allies, it is understood, propose to establish a blockade on Bulgaria, similar to that decreed in the British Order-in-Council against Germany.

The British Minister was received by King Constantine yesterday, but was in conference with the King only a few minutes.

The composition of the new Greek Cabinet has not been announced by the new Premier, Alexandre Zamais.

BERLIN, Via The Hague, Oct. 7.—A gigantic offensive movement with the Russian, French and British armies, delivering simultaneous blows against the Germans, was planned by the Allies' general staff, according to information reaching here to-day.

Though it is fully realized here that the Allies have not made their final efforts in the West, Berlin is certain that the next massed onslaughts would be repulsed more easily than were the first.

"It is hell on earth to endure that avalanche of artillery," admitted one officer just back from the Western front, "but everywhere officers and men are optimistic and certain that the French and British can never break through."

LONDON, Oct. 7.—The Dutch steamer Texelstroom was sunk by a German submarine. Twenty survivors are reported landed.

LONDON, Oct. 7.— Several of the crew of the British steamer Arabian, torpedoed by an Austrian submarine in the Mediterranean, are reported missing. News of the sinking of the Arabian was received here on Monday night.

PARIS, Oct. 7.—Terrific hammering by French artillery has worn down the German power of resistance in the Champagne region, according to despatches received here to-day The German second line trenches are crumbling under the heavy pounding shells and there are indications that the enemy's line is about to give way along a wide front.

The east with which the capture of Tahure accomplished convinced military men here that are Bazancourt Chalerange railway, now less than two miles from a French advanced works, will be pierced within the next fortnight of fighting, perhaps before.

MEMBER FOR WEST PETERBORO' GOING OVERSEAS

J. H. Burnham, M.P., Recommended For Position as Quarter-master or Paymaster and Has Signified His Intention of Accepting

SALARY TO RED CROSS

At the beginning of the war the local Federal member wrote to the Minister of Militia placing his services at the disposal of the Minister in connection with the war. As Mr. Burnham was over age and had no previous military training the Department was unable to avail itself of his offer, but referred him later on to the O. C. at Kingston. Mr. Burnham then wrote to the O. C. at Kingston, offering his services in any capacity whatever. To-day, in reply to that offer the O. C. sent Mr. Burnham the following letter:

"Kingston, Ont.,
6th Oct., 1915.

My Dear Mr. Burnham,—I have your note of the 27th September last, and in reply I might inform you that if you would care to accept a position such as Paymaster or Quartermaster of an Expeditionary Force Unit, I would be very pleased to recommend you for such an appointment, as soon as a vacancy occurred.

Of course I am sure you realise that not being a qualified officer, I could not recommend you for a combatant appointment, as such would be manifestly unfair to you, and to the unit you might be appointed to, but if either of the non-combatant ranks, as stated above, would suffice, I am sure your services could be efficiently utilized.

Please let me hear from you in this regard.

Yours very sincerely,

TO-MORROW NIGHT'S CONCERT WILL BE ENJOYABLE EVENT

Public is Cordially Invited to Brock Street Rink to See New Drums Presented to the Band of the Peterborough Battalion---More Recruits in Line for Local Company ---To-day's Military News.

Arrangements have been completed for the military concert in the Brock Street Rink to-morrow night, when the new drums for the Peterborough Overseas Battalion Band will be presented. The event is open to the public with no charge for admission, the only restriction being that children unaccompanied by an adult, will not be admitted. A splendid programme has been arranged as in addition to the presentation of the drums, there will be an address by Lieut. Haultain of the Royal Field Artillery, invalided home from the front, music by the Overseas Band, an exhibition by the Physical Drill Squad of the Peterborough Battalion, and other features. The concert will commence at 8 o'clock.

Bombardier Howard Crowe was presented with a solid leather wallet belt, yesterday morning, from the members of St. John's Choir of which he was a member for many years. The presentation was made by Mr. R. J. Devey and the young soldier asked that his thanks and appreciation be conveyed to the choristers.

Recruits continue to come in for the Peterborough Battalion, and the Company will be nearly completed by Saturday night. There were 230 rank and file, on the roll this this morning. The first supply of uniforms has been exhausted and this morning there were 25 recruits drilling in civilian clothes.

Corp. Wicker is in charge of the Guard at the Armouries to-day. Corp. Manley was yesterday's Corporal of the Guard.

Several promotions were announced in the orders read this morning. Ptes. Austin, Tobin and Geo. Coleman of No. 1 Platoon, are appointed Lance Corporals, provisionally.

Ottawa, Oct. 6.—A review of the 8th Battalion, C.M.R., will take place on Parliament Hill on Friday. The Battalion which is now at Barriefield, will parade before H.R.H. the Duke of Connaught, Sir Robert Borden and Sir Sam Hughes.

Kingston, Ont., Oct 6.—Lieut.-Col. J. B. Munro, officer-commanding the 8th Regiment, Canadian Mounted Rifles, which leaves shortly for the front, was this afternoon presented with the sum of $1,000 by W. J. Crothers acting for a group of public-spirited Kingstonians. The money will be put into the 8th Regimental fund, and it goes to one of the best military units that has been at Barriefield Camp in training for overseas service.

Mr. Jack Moore of Keene, well known among local curlers as a capable and enthusiastic skip, came up to Peterborough this morning for medical inspection, preparatory to joining the 80th Battalion. "Jack" found himself in a ticklish position last night. The Battalion Band and Squad were putting on a little impromptu concert in the town hall from 6.45 to about 7.20, and as 7.30 was approaching he realized that the audience for the Red Cross entertainment would be soon arriving. He was enjoying the entertainment, but nevertheless he was a Director of the Fair. However, about that time the men were called out and Mr. Moore was saved the necessity of inviting the men outside.

On the road to Keene Station last night, from the village, were puddles of mud that neglected to announce themselves through the dark to the approaching "Tommies." However, when the first men felt the soft spots the rear ranks would hear the warning "Mud, mud," and to a certain extent, would be prepared for it.

"I'll have to get up half an hour earlier to-morrow to clean these boots" several men were heard to remark and they expressed the squad's expectations.

However, as an illustration of Col Johnston's fatherly consideration for the men who had been to Keene, before they were dismissed at the Armouries, that they would be excused from parade until 11 o'clock to-day. The regular hour each morning is 8.30 a.m. It is little things of that kind that count with the men.

Four recruits for the Peterborough Battalion were passed yesterday afternoon. They were Samuel Montyomery, 261 Water Street; Wm. Whitworth, 95 Water Street; John McTaggart, Haliburton; and Wm. MacMillan, Haliburton.

The officers and men of the Peterborough Battalion have been invited to the Y.M.C.A. sports at Riverside Park on Thanksgiving Day. There will be a special Red Cross race for active service men.

SEPARATION ALLOWANCE

Beyond question the fine rally and enthusiasm aroused by the meeting held in the armouries a few weeks ago has stimulated beyond expectations recruiting. It helped to bring to the ranks many who were hesitating. Hesitating because they realized the serious state of affairs for themselves and in many cases for those left behind. It is no slight thing for a mother to give up the son who has been her main support or for the wife to spare her husband. That all over the country the call has been heard and realised, is seen in the impetus given to flock to the ranks. Over four thousand of the enlistments for the month of August were of married men. True, all did not leave behind children, but they did wives. While the state of unemployment may have had something to do with this phenomenal enlistment of married men there is no doubt that a sense of duty did and will continue to be the impelling motive. Now the young and single men are flocking to the ranks. This is as it should be. The time to keep the machine in motion is when the power is on. Less will be required than to let it stop and start it up again. Just as the locomotive engineer will tell you that it costs in fuel and steam nearly eighty cents every time a train stops and starts. So the recruiting movement must be kept on the jump rather to let it decline. Its very success helps to augment the movement.

So we have another recruiting rally. This time on the evening of Tuesday next, Oct. 12th, and in the armouries. There will be speakers. An able and inspiring address may be expected from Hon. George P. Graham, M. P., who is devoting his time to the movement. He is a noted platform speaker, a man who talks horse sense on most questions. A newspaper man of long experience and ability and between times a member of the late cabinet at Ottawa. Thoroughly in touch with the country and Empire and its needs in the emergency we may expect to hear words of import and as well confidence in the triumph of the allies if the men are forthcoming. Come to the armouries and hear him, and hear others.

The drill hall will be seated and made comfortable for the audience. Men, young and old are wanted that evening. The ladies too, for they are a large determining factor in the ultimate result. Another speaker will be Capt. Ponton, of Belleville. He is back from the trenches along with Haultain, Ackerman, Langley and other heroes of the first line. Capt. Ponton will tell of the fearful experiences and of his assurance that the winning of the freedom of the world is beyond question. Will tell them of the urgent need of men to take the places of those out of service by the dangers and fatigues of the battle field.

Lieut. R. Haultain, R.F.A., will also be on hand. When we ask for testimony as to affairs at the front we prefer to have it at first hands, from some one who has been in the lines and participated in the struggle. This gallant young officer will tell us of the daily strife and beyond all that our men in the trenches are heartened as in no other way to know that the men they left behind are fast flocking to the ranks to come to their assistance. The new band of the Peterborough Battalion will form the musical feature of the evening, while it is arranged that one or more vocal solos will intervene between the speeches. Of these details more will be advised.

Even if you cannot enlist, through circumstances, come out and lend to the occasion the value of and support of your attendance. Numbers count for so much. A good big rally, same as at the Foster meeting will do much to hold up the hands of those who are behind the movement, and it will help most really to inspire the men to go.

Separation Allowance.

Here is an announcement that might as well be made here as anywhere else in print. It concerns the enlistments in a practical way. That vexed question of the separation allowance to the wives and mothers of enlisted men. The prevailing idea is that the allowance is made because the wife is separated from her hus-

Enver Pasha Boasts That He Killed More Armenians in Thirty Days Than the Red Sultan Did in Thirty Years

HORRIBLE MASSACRES

Special to The Examiner:

NEW YORK, Oct. 7.—It is Enver Pasha's boast that he killed more Armenians in thirty days than Abdul Hamid did in thirty years.

Abdul Hamid was known as the "great butcher" and the "Red Sultan."

This statement was made to-day by Miss Emily C. Wheeler, Secretary of the National Armenia and India Relief Association, an organization which since 1896 has been active in mission work in Turkish Armenia.

The information on which her statement was based was given her by a missionary, an American physician, just returned from Turkey.

Miss Wheeler, herself, spent sixteen years in Armenia, and was there during the massacre of 1895.

"German officers are active in Armenian persecutions," continued Miss Wheeler, according to stories told me by my missionary friends.

Certain classes of Turks are not in sympathy with horrible outrages, but they dare not protest as the movement is being directed from Constantinople.

Out of the Armenian nation of one million five hundred thousand people, 800,000 have been killed or deported.

The Ottoman Government is waging a campaign of extermination. They have succeeded so well that in some villages there is not even a sign of life left.

REMEMBER.

The young men of Peterborough and Canada should not forget what crushing German militarism and curbing German ambitions means. If so, is their declared aim, the Germans should succeed in their plan of world denomination, Canada would be one of the first countries to come under German rule. When they hesitate to enlist, they should remember that if they came under German rule, they would not be asked to enlist; they would be commanded to enter the ranks, and if they didn't at once proceed to shoot somebody else, they themselves would be stood against a wall and shot. Canadian young men are asked to enlist to save not only our own liberties, but to fight against conditions that would destroy human liberty everywhere, and all the happiness that comes from the enjoyment of the blessings of freedom and free self-government. Our young men should remember that they have a duty to do in preventing the sacrifice of all that makes life worth living.

THE REASON WHY.

The Toronto News, speaking of Canadian recruiting, gives the chief glory to the English-speaking provinces—"even the appeal of France has not been very effective in Quebec." Why? Isn't there a reason? Ontario and other provinces are represented in the Government by loyal men, who have urged the duty of recruiting on the platform and elsewhere. Quebec is represented in the cabinet by members of a faction that has "no use for Britain and the British," a faction that has been sowing dissension in Quebec; has been poisoning the minds of the innocent habitant, by the German method of lying—spreading the lie that, enlisting was only another form of British perfidy and sacrifice of French-Canadians to fight Britian's wars. Yet with all these drawbacks, fair analysis of recruiting results will show that Quebec, has pretty well done her bit even in comparison with other parts of the Dominion.

CABINET CHANGE WITHOUT CHANGE.

Sir Robert Borden has again disappointed the country, even his best friends and staunchest admirers. He has certainly showed great interest in promoting Canada's share of participation in this war. He has gone abroad, gone down even into the trenches to see the needs and be better prepared to guide his government and the country in meeting them. He has been backed in this attitude of helpfulness to Canadian and Imperial interests by the solid support of the people of Canada without regard to the party interests and party differences that divide the country under normal conditions. While he has done all he can do in making his government effective in prosecution of war measures; while he has had the universal support of the country outside his cabinet; while the unity of the people has helped his work, the only impeding element is found in his own cabinet. Loyal Canadians, and among them are to be counted the best of Sir Robert's party following, have deplored the presence in the cabinet of the Nationalist element which has preached the doctrine of "not a dollar, not a ship to help Great Britain." At the beginning the inclusion of the disloyal and anti-British elements in cabinet composition, had some faint colour of excuse from considerations of party advantage; but that only served for the moment. When the necessity of conciliating such an element passed entirely away; and when Premier Borden found himself safely seated in power with one of the strongest party followings of loyal Canadians ever given a Canadian premier, he was in a position to weed out the shoot-the-flag element in his cabinet.

Unfortunately, he has not seized the opportunity. When one after another Nationalist cabinet minister have had the grace to recognise the incongruousness of their presence in the cabinet of a British dominion, as advisers of the King, to whose person and policy they were not loyal, and took refuge in fat judgeships, their places were not filled by loyal French-Canadians, but the Nationalist traditions was followed. Mr. E. P. Blondin, whose highest claim to the distinction of notoriety, lies in a speech in which he declared to French-Canadians that it had been necessary "to shoot holes through the British flag to breathe the air of liberty," is advanced to the cabinet position of Secretary of State. In this capacity he will have custody of the Privy seal, and deal with the correspondence between the Imperial and Canadian governments. The regrettable thing about Sir Robert Borden's official recognition of undesirable and un-national Nationalism, in his actual retention and promotion of the most offensive of Nationalists is, that at a time when there is a general submergence of party spirit in the spirit of national cooperation, consideration of party interests should lead to an outrage upon the loyal people of Canada, by putting them under the government of the representative of a disloyal element hostile to British ideals and interests. The King's advisers should be men of known loyalty. The people of Canada want Canada to do her best at this time of crisis; they want to have it made easy instead of hard to back the government in the efforts it is making with general energy and success in promoting the cause that embodies realization of the spirit of British institutions.

BACKING 'EM BY PRAYER

Details of the recent Zeppelin raids over London tell how the Germans kill mothers asleep with babes in their arms. The slain were as defenceless as the massacred victims of the Lusitinia and Arabic. It should be the prayer of every true American that the Allies will stand up bravely and save the world from this terrorism.—Brooklyn Eagle.

THE BRITISH ARMY.

Kitchener's army is being, and is now on our soil with all the requisite services and provided and equipped in a manner which excites our admiration. It has often been said that the Britisher is slow to move, but once he has come to a decision he goes forward with an energy and resolution which are altogether incomparable. The Germans fully recognize this, and are well aware of the invincible force against which they are breaking themselves; that is the chief reason for their hate.—Petit Journal, Paris.

THE COMING TIDE OF IMMIGRATION.

Whatever the cause, whoever may be responsible in the premises, a far greater proportion of mechanics and of general laborers than Canada is capable of absorbing, with respect to its economic system, and a far smaller proportion of farmers and farm laborers than is necessary to the settlement and development of its millions on millions of fertile but idle acres, are two conditions made evident by analysis of Canada's immigration statistics and emphasized by surveys of work conditions in its urban and rural districts. The United States and Canada have so many interests in common along this line that they might, we should think, up to a very advanced point, work in cooperation to prevent industrial balances from being upset, and perhaps destroyed by the immigration tide that threatens both countries on the cessation of European hostilities. —Christain Science Monitor.

SIR WILFRID'S RECOVERY.

The recovery of Sir Wilfrid Laurier from his tedious experiences in the hospital will be a matter for genuine rejoicing throughout the Dominion. Sir Wilfrid is a great, a potent and a striking figure in our public life. Even the temporary incapacity of so important a factor in our national affairs creates a feeling of uneasiness—a sense of something lacking—which has been happily relieved by Sir Wilfrid's return to health.

Sir Wilfrid's attitude during the war has been a subject of especial pride to his friends and of comfort and satisfaction to the whole country. Whatever lesser men have said or done, Sir Wilfrid has laid aside all party feeling or manoeuvring during this menacing crisis in our history. He has stood squarely and publicly behind the Government in its preparations to put Canada with the fighting forces of the Empire, and he has raised his eloquent and persuasive voice, again and again, to assist recruiting—even at times of keen physical suffering on his own part. He may be said to have gone straight from the firing line on the recruiting platform to his hospital bed.

As a life-long lover of liberty and a devotee of democracy, Sir Wilfrid was constitutionally prepared to fight Prussianism with all his strength. He put the case in a nutshell at Sherbrooke. "This war is," he said, 'a contest between German institutions and British institutions. British institutions mean freedom. German institutions mean despotism. That is why we as Canadians have such a vital interest in this war." At the very outbreak of the war, speaking in the House of Commons, he described the Allies cause as a fight for freedom and democracy against tyranny and autocracy. The whole Canadian people will be glad that so valiant a soldier for constitutional liberty is once more able to bear arms.—Montreal Star, Conservative.

Relation of British Underwriters To Naval Policy of German Pirates

You can trace the path of the Kaiser through the fields of his defeat by the generals he has dismissed. Whenever he gets an extra bad licking he fires a couple of generals as a public acknowledgment of the punishment. He doesn't always call down the general who is responsible for the calamity. For instance, when the Crown Prince made a stupid blunder, he doesn't fire him. That would be to acknowledge the fallibility of the Hohenzollerns. But he selects the best general he can find to serve as a whipping boy. That is what makes the German generals so anxious to restrain His Imperial Highness from making a bigger ass of himself than nature made him.

Curiously His Imperial Majesty does not follow the same course with his naval administrators. Every time Grand Admiral von Tirpitz makes a mistake he gets another decortion, and naturally that encourages him to make some more mistakes. In the department of mistakes he certainly is a grand admiral. His blunders will be remembered when Jellicoe's victories are forgotten. In justice to Admiral Jellicoe it must be admitted that he has had much less time to win victories than von Tirpitz had to win defeats; because while the Admiral's victories have all been scored during the war, the Grand Admiral's mistakes commenced long before the war, and he has kept up his record wonderfully.

The net result of the great naval war inaugurated by Germany to snatch the trident from Britannia is shown by the report of the Liverpool & London War Risks' Association from the opening of the war to the end of July. The total loss in the twelve months on the vessels carried amounted to 4.08 per cent., and the total loss on cargoes was something less than half of one per cent. As the shipowners have been making fabulous profits out of the high freights, sometimes a single voyage paying for the whole cost of the ship, they must bless von Tirpitz every night, and pray that the wind may long continue to blow gently through his whiskers. We do not know whether the Kaiser has any stock in British shipping companies. If so, it may account for his complacent attitude towards the Grand Admiral, who, for a whole year, has been doing nothing in particular (except murdering a few women and children, for advertising purposes), and doing it very well. The whole value of the cargoes destroyed was $37,000,000 (nearly the entire cost of the war for three days to Great Britain) out of a total carried of $7,150,000,000. The number of ships entered for insurance in the association under the British State Insurance scheme was 4,421, and the values entered came to $767,345,349. The number of merchant ships captured or sunk each week, from the week ending August 4th to the week ending September 8th were as follows: Week ending August 4, 7; August 11, 9; August 18, 13; August 25, 20; September 1, 4, September 8, 10. The arrival and sailings in the same weeks were: August 4, 1,453; August 11, 1,326; August 18, 1,490; August 25, 1,389; September 1, 1,358; September 8, 1,438.

Where von Tirpitz really shines is in his brilliant record for sweeping the sea of merchant shipping—German shipping, that is to say; and in navalysing the second greatest navy in the world—the German navy. He ought to wear enough of the laurels of defeat to look like a "Jack in the Green," and enough iron crosses to sink a ship. Yet with it all he wears the decorations bestowed upon him by his grateful sovereign with most becoming modesty; and he is said to be as amiable and affectionate an old pirate as ever employed another man to cut a throat, or to sink a ship.

Perhaps the best evidence of the contempt in which the lordly British underwriter holds von Tirpitz and all his works is to be seen in the tariff of insurance rates now in force on war risks. American ships bound to the west coast of England pay 1-2 to 7-8; other neutrals 3-4 to 1; British, French, Belgian, Japanese and Italian, 1 to 1 5-8. British ships bound to London pay 1 to 1 3-4; to Havre, 1 5-8; to Europe, between Brest and Bayonne, 5-8 to 3-4. American and neutral ships going to Stockholm pay 15 per cent., not on account of danger from German molestation, but because the British regard cargoes bound for Stockholm with particular suspicion. American and other neutrals pay 7 and 10 per cent. respectively on ships going to Denmark, Sweden and Norway, not south of Stavanger and not beyond Malmo. British ships going to Holland can get insurance for 2 per cent., and to many of the South American ports for half of one per cent. In view of von Tirpitz's past performances it is almost like taking money from a child to accept any premiums at all for most of the so-called war risks. But how glad Tripits must be to think that he went into the German navy, instead of the German army.—Montreal Herald-Telegraph.

WHAT WHEAT GROWERS MAY DEMAND.

To encourage wheat growing in Great Britain, the authorities are considering the advisability of guaranteeing a minimum price, below which it will not be allowed to fall. We do not need encouragement of that kind in Canada; but it may be necessary for the Canadian Government, to save the farmer from being robbed of his just reward, to guarantee a minimum ocean freight rate on wheat with rates at 30 cents to 33 cents a bushel for ocean carriage, the Western farmer is working for only his bread and lodgings.—Manitoba Free Press.

BULGARIA "KULTURED."

The Berlin school of diplomacy has found another pupil. It now has two, Turkey and Bulgaria. When the crisis came last summer, Germany gave repeated assurances to the nations that her greatest desire was for peace. They kept up these assurances until her preparations for invading France were complete, and then the war was started. A little later on, under German tutelage, Turkey attempted the same game. While she was procuring German warships and assisting Germany in various ways, and while German officers were assuming command of the Turkish army, the Turkish government was busy informing the diplomats of the allies that she was peacefully and friendly inclined towards them.

And now Bulgaria has followed in the footsteps of her future allies. M. Radoslavoff, Bulgarian Premier, has not been content with expressing false friendship directly to the allies, but he has made use of the press in his attempts to deceive. Officially and unofficially efforts have been made to convince the allies that Bulgaria had no intention of joining their enemies, and meanwhile Bulzaria was preparing to do just this. She was importing German officers, making arrangements with Germany, and placing herself in readiness to strike. The Bulgarian government has been "kultured." And it is such kultur, the kultur of deception and trickery, that Germany was so anxious to spread over the world as a correction to the present "false civilization."—Ottawa Free Press.

"IN THE HOLLOW OF OUR HANDS."

Lord Kitchener has never made any pronouncement on the war without emphasizing the gravity of it. He shocked the British public at the outset by telling them plainly of the colossal character of the task with which the nation was confronted. He was regarded as altogether too pessimistic when he said that it would probably take the Allies at least three years to bring the war to a victorious conclusion.

During the past year there have been many occasions when the slowness of the progress which he himself foretold has resulted in attacks on him and on the Government for blundering and lack of foresight. Not one criticism has he replied to. He has gone ahead quietly and grimly with the preparations, meeting every exigency as it rose with quiet confidence, but always urging the necessity of even mightier efforts if defeat were to be avoided.

The fact that Lord Kitchener has from the first been planning measures on a gigantic scale which he never expected would meet with full success in less than three years, renders the announcement he has just made one of great importance. It is little over a year since the war began, yet Lord Kitchener, speaking from the fullness of his knowledge, and expressly staking his personal reputation upon the words, declares that there is no room for pessimism—that if he is given the men and the munitions he wants, he will guarantee that we have the war in the hollow of our hands. Such a statement from such a man must be taken as its full value, as the careful and calculated utterance of one who known whereof he speaks. It is the most hopeful and weighty utterance that has yet been made by which we can take the measure of our progress. It means that victory is already in sight, if the British will but do their part.—Montreal Herald Telegraph.

"O'LEARY IS THE NAME."

You my talk about your Irish names galore,
But O'Leary is the name I do adore.
He's the man that made the enemy fly;
There's not a man that can say I lie;
That O'Leary is the name for evermore.
Now take a talk with Mary, across in Tipperary,
And plain Mary will say sure O'Leary's won the day,
For the man that's won the fame
Is the man that's made a name.
O'-L-E-A-R-Y, O'Leary is the name.

O'Leary, O'Leary is a name you can't forget,
O'Leary is the man that won the famous cross you bet,
For his king and country he does fight,
And loved Erin's dear, with Briton's might;
Talk about your O'Reilly's, your O'Briens, and them all,
But O'Leary is the name that makes them look mighty small.
Hurrah! For this hero (conquered the enemy) bold,
Who fights for the old flag, worth its weight in gold,
When the Tommies go marching by you will hear me cry,
"O'Leary, O'Leary, why there goes O'Leary."

O'Leary fights for England, the darling of them all,
Whose flag has battled for thousand years, yet will never fall.
Now who would not be Irish, when the Irish are so gay,
O'Leary, O'Leary, let me speak of you in praise;
Sure O'Leary and Tipperary has got the people crazed,
Sure it's a long way off to Tipperary,
Oh, my hat's right off to you,
And the dear old red, white and blue;
O'Leary, you're Irish right through and through.

A Costly Curio.

A Scottish lady, who was spending her holidays in London, entered a bric-a-brac shop in search of something odd to take home to Scotland with her. After she had inspected several articles but had found none to suit her, she noticed a quaint figure, the head and shoulders of which appeared above the counter.

"What is that Japanese idol over there worth?" she inquired of the salesman.

The salesman's reply was given in a subdued tone.

"Worth about half-a-million, madam; that's the proprietor!"

What She Meant.

"When I proposed to Blanche she asked me if I was a new recruit."

"What did she mean?"

"She wanted to know if I had ever participated in an engagement before."

Germans Expected to Spend the Winter in Their Fine Dug-outs

BRITISH HEADQUARTERS, Oct. 5.—The scene of the British attack in the Lens region is a flat mining country—slag heaps, mine pits, ruined buildings, splintered and felled trees and earthworks churned by explosions—with slightly rising ground toward Loos and Lens.

Nothing is visible except the soft puffs of shrapnel bursting and volumes of black smoke from British and German high explosive shells, marking positions where the British troops are organizing their gains and the Germans are preparing a new defensive line.

It is with infinite satisfaction to the British, who had long looked at the eyesore twin towers of the mining works at Loos, that they now have in their possession this German position. The church at Loos, which had been used as an observation post, is a heap of stone as the result of the bombardment preceding the attack.

The normal population of Loos is 10,000 poor miners and their families. Three hundred of these remained during the battle, taking shelter in the cellers of their wrecked, miserable homes. One old woman who cooked for the Germans is now cooking for the British.

Women Rushed Into Lines.

As the skirmish line approached the town it saw six women and a child coming toward it in the midst of the battle. Some of the British soldiers turned from the fierce business of the charge to rescue them, but before they could get the women under some sort of shelter two of them were wounded.

The elaborateness and permanency of the German trenches indicate the apparent conviction of the Germans in the security of their line. Dugouts, often 30 feet deep, were cemented and contained electric lights and armchairs. Some of them were impenetrable even to high explosive shells of big calibre.

The British bombardment cut the wire in front of the German trenches to bits and battered the firing trenches and traverses into irregular piles of earth. Under such a hailing of shells it was suicidal for the Germans to attempt to remain outside the dugouts or to try to man their machine guns or use their rifles.

When the artillery work was perfected, the British infantry sprang over the parapet at a given moment. Sprinting toward the German trench they arrived almost without opposition. Then the German trench was theirs, with the Germans, who were huddled in their caves. Some of the dug-outs had been demolished and had in them fragments of German bodies mixed with the debris. Others had their openings blown in by shell explosions, and their occupants were either buried or suffocated.

Capturing the Dug-outs.

When a dug-out had been unharmed the British soldiers, with bayonets fixed or bombs in hand, appeared at the entrance to find the Germans still inside or perhaps just starting out. All in the dug-out might surrender, or, on the other hand if a British soldier started to enter or even showed himself he was received with a fusillade. In case of refusal to surrender, bombs were thrown into the dug-out without the thrower of them exposing himself. The Germans surviving the explosion usually gave in, though not always, for some of them died to the last man.

Some incidents had a humorous, as well as tragic side. In these sudden encounters at close quarters, where the charging Briton met a German emerging from his dug-out, the bayonet, bombs and even fists were sometimes brought into play in the ensuing melee.

One difficulty was the gathering and guarding of prisoners in such a confined space as the irregular wrecked trenches. With rifles and bombs flying about, the Germans even after capitulating were likely to seize them and rush to the cover of a traverse trench or into a shell crater and renew the fight.

The British are keeping to the tactical plan undertaken by them to gain a certain amount of ground at each attack.

Regret Their Lost Holes.

The Germans fought desperately and the viciousness of their counter-attacks apparently was due to rage over the loss of their comfortable dug-outs, which had cost them so much painstaking labor, and the unpleasant prospect of a Winter in the mud, building new caves.

The rear of the army during the action presented a wondrous varied scene, which was the more concentrated because of the narrow front of the operations. There were the slightly wounded walking back, the steady tramp of fresh regiments going forward, processions of swift, whose burdens would be back in England in twenty-four hours, longer and seemingly endless processions of powerful motor trucks loaded with shells to feed the hungry, ever thundering unseen guns troops of the reserves in the fields or beside the gorged roads waiting their call, while the French population stood in their doorways and asked for the latest news from officers and men who knew nothing except concerning their own parts in the big scheme of things.

Rain Succeeds Battle.

Sunday after the attack succeeded a chill Autumn rain fell, covering the field with mist and making artillery observation difficult. The troops fighting in the new line were drenched to the skin. Dead and wounded British and German lay side by side where there had been eddies of fierce conflict. The canvas rifle sheaths of the soldiers moving up in reserve ran little streams of water and the soldiers who came back from the front were white with the chalky mud of the ground where they had dug themselves in as they fought.

At a place near the front a park of captured guns, guarded by a pacing British sentry, seemed an attraction more symbolic of success to the inhabitants than the parties of German prisoners.

The distances of the last ranges at which they were fired before the British infantry engulfed them are chalked on some of the gun shields. Perhaps the most interesting trophy is a Russian machine gun, taken by the Germans from the Russians on the eastern front and now retaken by the British.

The German prisoners were well clothed, neat and fresh in their comfortable dug-outs, where they were caught by surprise, but evidently they appreciated the generosity of the British rations. Three thousand prisoners were taken by the British, which was a small percentage of the German loss.

The captured German trenches still continue under shell fire.

To-morrow Night's Concert

Barrieffield Camp, will be staged in the athletic grounds one week from Saturday when Queen's and the Barrieffield Squad will line up.

The soldiers will be able to present a strong front as in the recent arrivals at Barrieffield are five men from the Argo II. team, some of whom figured in senior games also for the scullers. The soldiers will be additionally strengthened by the presence of "Gamey" Stratton, the Peterborough boy, who showed such good form as quarter-back for last year's Toronto 'Varsity team.

Gunner Gerald D. Graham of the 33rd Battery, C.F.A., Barrieffield, is home on a visit to his mother, at 675 Stewart street.

Two street railway men have forsaken the blue uniform of the Peterborough Radial Railway Co. for the khaki of the Canadian forces. Yesterday Motorman Sam Montgomery, 361 Water street, and Conductor Wm. Whitworth, 345 Water street, enlisted in the Peterborough Battalion.

The band and drill squad of the Peterborough battalion, returned from Keene fair at 9 o'clock last evening, after having an enjoyable outing. Lt.-Col. Johnston commended them on their conduct and on the manner in which they had carried out their duties during the day.

The Overseas Band has so many engagements just now that the doctors can't find an opportunity to innoculate the balance of the musicians. Nearly all the other members of the battalion have been innoculated.

The band is taking part this afternoon in the matinee at the Empire Theatre, the proceeds of which will be devoted to the Band Fund.

80th BATTALION SQUAD AND BAND AT THE KEENE FAIR

Men in Khaki Made a Fine Showing—Musical Programme During Afternoon Indicated Possibilities of the Band—Large Entry List

FAIR ANOTHER SUCCESS

The Band and Drill Squad of the 80th Battalion provided the entertaining features of the Keene Fair yesterday. Col. Johnston, Lieut. Stuart, Sergt. Miller and Bandmaster Hughes, with their men, made a great showing. Their squad's drills were smoothly performed and the Band exceeded its promises with a fine programme. This was really their first concert appearance. They included, among other numbers, three overtures which they played very satisfactorily. If there was a passage or two which were not brought out as confidently as the leader and players, themselves, would have desired, it is safe to say that future concerts will steadily improve. When one considers the short time the 80th Battalion Band has been working together they deserve a compliment on what they have already achieved.

Certainly it was the best concert Keene Fair has had in many years, and the large attendance appreciated the music. Had the sunshine of the first hour of the afternoon continued to light up the grounds the comfort and pleasure of the visitors would have been considerably increased. The township agricultural exhibitions are an admixture of agricultural produce, sociable afternoon for old and new friends, a horse race or two, and the parade of driving turnouts. There are other incidentals which are more personal than general. And Keene Fair supplies all these essentials, combining with them the fair view of the Indian River Valley, which, to appear at its best, requires the flashes of the sun's rays to light up the Autumnal tints.

The directors of the Fair were delighted with this year's success, and if the disappearance of jars of fruit from that display diluted their satisfaction they could lay the disappearance in the direction of Peterborough.

Splendid Behaviour.

An outing with the 80th Battalion's special squad is an object lesson in the camaraderie and unfailing genial relations which seem the basis for the soldiers' relations with one another. The Keene directors sent a big waggon to the station to transport them over the two miles to the Village; but one and all, the officers and men preferred to tramp it. The Band had gone down in the morning, and the soldiers made the trip in the afternoon. As they swung along the road singing "Good-bye My Bluebell," "Fall in and Follow Me," "We'll Never Let the Old Flag Fall," "Who's Your Lady Friend" and other songs, it was frequently heard—"if we only had that band." On the return trip, through the dark the Band led the way, and put life into the marching that could not have been otherwise provided. It is a fact that the Band which the citizens are undertaking to provide is not a luxury, but a necessity, and if those able to give generously could spend an afternoon with them on and off the march, there wouldn't be even a shade of hesitation in deciding that not only do these boys need the band but they deserve it.

Their conduct in Keene was all that could be desired. Off duty they put on their own games and impromptu concerts, with Privates Chris Jay, Tom Smith, and others the life of the party. They provided good, healthy amusement for themselves and for the crowd.

After supper, while waiting to depart for the train, they occupied the town hall, and here again they gave evidences of the abundance of talent with which the 80th is supplied. They sang songs with Bandmaster Hughes, Herb. Payton and Will Leader and other bandsmen improvising accompaniments. A young chap from Keene, named Proctor, the possessor of a good falsetto, made a hit, with Private Smith accompanying him.

In the meantime, the officers were not overlooking the matter of securing recruits, and results of their efforts will doubtless be shown within the next week or so.

GRAFTON & CO—OLD TIME CLOTHING FAVORITES

The ever active and popular clothiers of Peterborough, Messrs. Grafton & Co., who have many patrons in the Township of Otonabee and Village of Keene, made another strong and characteristic exhibit at this Fair. With a keen eye for publicity, they secured a prominent position on the grounds, directly in line with the main entrance, and were "the observed of all observers." Their conspicuous quarters were distinguished for its patriotic display of flags, gay bunting and colored lithographs as well as for its exhibit of the new Fall and Winter styles of men's and boys' clothing. Along the village streets and occupying the best positions throughout the Fair Grounds were to be seen numbers of Grafton & Co's. handsome [illegible] and striking material displaying their high-grade clothing. And as the visitor entered the grounds, the successful make-up of their clothing display, inspired the observer with the desire to learn what were the authoritative styles of the season in male attire.

The exhibit was a reflex of the very heavy stocks of men's and boys' tailor-made and union-made overcoats, suits, waterproofs and haberdashery contained in Grafton & Co's. branch store, at No. 361 George Street, Peterborough. It seemed as though Fashion and Economy were hand in hand this season to increase the already deserving popularity of these worthy models of clothing. Certainly styles and novelties were never quite as pleasingly accentuated as those displayed, while prices seemed never so low for clothing of quality, in many instances less than last season, according to the remarks of visiting admirers. The representatives in charge of the exhibit were kept busy during the day, answering questions and giving out information. The Peterborough Manager, Mr. W. Conway, was present at the Fair, greeting friends and renewing business associations.

Another attractive feature in connection with the Grafton display, was the excitement created in another section of the Park, by their balloon ascensions. A barricade was constructed of Grafton & Co's. fancy, coloured lithograph designs, where experts "touched the button" to the inflated aerial advertisements that shot up and floted away over the horizon amid the hearty cheering of the crowds.

WE MUST HAVE MORE FORDS, AS WELL AS RECRUITS.

Mr. Jos. J. Duffus, of the Duffus' Garage, Peterborough, sent an exhibit of the Ford Motor Car to the Keene Fair. It was a practical demonstration of the expansion of the automobile, in its new relations to residents in rural sections. It was a new 1915 machine that was shown, and being represented by an Otonabee boy "to the manor born," who had made his mark as the Ford salesman, who had sold the largest number of automobiles in the Province, the rally of his friends was quite encouraging.

This smart, economical car combines the popular features of a handy inexpensive, easy driven machine, and its simplicity is one of the big reasons why it is the car for the farmer. "Buy a Ford and leave the balance in the bank," is one of the strongest appeals made on behalf of this car. Just the other day it sold a Ford car to a lady who had decided to buy a more expensive car.

An old neighbour of Mr. Duffus approached with the salutation: "Well, Joe, how are Fords. Two of my boys begin to get restless and want a car. I don't blame them; for by the end of the day all the horses are tired out and they can't have a run out for an evening."

"You can save $50 on the price of a Ford this year. Why not buy a car for the boys?"

"Well, I don't want them to begin to think that farm life is monotonous, and perhaps I will, Joe. We must have more Fords, I suppose, as well as recruits."

"Well, you'll enjoy the car as much as the boys. You've worked long enough and hard enough to enjoy some of the Ford car comforts as many more farmers are now doing."

With such promises and prospects the Ford car representative and his assistant, Bert Duffus, were encouraged during the day.

CHEAP POWER FOR THE FARM.

The farm is a machine shop—a factory for the production of crops by power. But its implements and tool are not so handy as the equipment of other shops and factories, and the farmer do a not get so much profitable work out of his machinery as he should.

And now comes the ideal combination for every farmer who has an automobile. Science has converted the motor car into a machine for pleasure and at the same time a machine for work. Think of having a car, ready at a moment's notice, to take you and your family to town or for a refreshing ride after a hard day's work, and yet just as ready to turn in and fill your silo, saw wood, grind grain or do any one of a dozen jobs you may have for it to do. "That's my idea of an auto," you say, "that's what a farmer's car should do." Certainly it is. And the Ford car, when equipped with Autopower Attachment, is the car that will do all this.

This Autopower Attachment was on exhibition on the Keene Fair grounds, and was in charge of Mr. Charles R. Banks of the Banks' Garage, Charlotte street, Peterborough, and Mr. J. M. Howland of Toronto, and both gentlemen were kept busy explaining the modus operandi to the interested crowds.

The new power attachment was shown on a Ford car, demonstrating how the power is taken direct from the engine crank and not through the gears and transmission; it fastens to the front of the car with bolts already there. It requires no alterations, and does not disfigure the car to which it is attached in any way. It can be attached in much less time than it takes to harness a horse. The car can be driven with the attachment in place. It is claimed that the Ford car has power enough and more than enough power, to operate all these machines, and to operate them cheaper and better than they were ever operated before, by wind, steam or gas engine.

"I'm going to get back to my poor old mother," whined the tramp. "She ain't seen me face for ten long years." "I believe you're speaking the truth," muttered the old gentleman. "Why don't you give it a wash."

IMPROVEMENT FOR AN AUTOMOBILE

The latest automobile is equipped as follows: Speed of 10 miles per hour shows white bulb. Speed of 20 miles per hour shows green bulb. Speed of 30 miles an hour shows red bulb. Speed of 40 miles per hours shows a music box under seat, which plays, "Nearer My God to Thee." That is surely an improvement over the old method of ushering people into the next world without any ceremony whatever.

Asphodel Township Must Pay Damages

Judge Huyeke's judgment on June 30th, awarding Wm. J. Sampson and his daughter Jennie Sampson $350 damages and costs in their suit against Asphodel township has been sustained by Osgoode Hall. The township's appeal against the decision was dismissed with costs.

The Sampsons live in Percy township a few miles from Hastings. The Osgoode Hall report follows:

Sampson v. Township of Asphodel.—F. D. Kerr (Peterborough) for defendant. J. A. Humphries (Campbellford) for plaintiff. Appeal by defendant from the judgment of County Court of Peterborough of 30th of June, 1915. Action to recover $400 damages for injuries received by plaintiff's daughter by being thrown from a buggy, alleged to have been caused by horse taking fright at steam stone crusher of defendant's.

At trial judgment was given plaintiff, William J. Sampson, for $50 and to plaintiff Jennie Sampson for $300 and costs of action.

THE PRESIDENT TO MARRY

will gladly accept any post you assign me to; my salary to go to the Red Cross. I am at your service.

(Signed) J. H. Burnham.

Mr. Burnham says that while there is steadily increasing work for him to do at Peterborough for the wives and children of soldiers, with the Government, involving an average of ten letters a day, and considerable investigation, he has it now in shape to hand over to another. The work of the constituency and of constituents will have to look after itself in the event of his receiving orders to go, which he hopes to receive at an early date. He feels sure, however, that his constituents will agree with him.

Don't Forget To Send Your Papers

Citizens of Peterborough are reminded that to assemble old papers and magazines, are being collected to-day and to-morrow by the Ashburnham Patriotic League for the purpose of raising money for Red Cross work. This league, which has done splendidly on behalf of the sick and wounded soldiers, deserves the hearty cooperation of every citizen in their effort to increase their funds. The city has been divided into sections, and people will greatly facilitate matters by having their papers and magazines tied in bundles with strong twine. The entire city will be covered in the two days. The business men of Ashburnham are giving their waggons and automobiles to assist the ladies in the collection. Everyone has his or her share in this great conflict, and here is an opportunity where all can do something to help the wounded soldiers. Get your old papers together and have them ready when the collector calls.

band. This is not the case. It is given because the husband is separated from his work, or from what means by which he earned a support for his wife and family. The allowance is not made on sentimental but on practical grounds.

There has been doubt among the married men who have enlisted and who are living and drilling in Peterborough as to whether this separation allowance would be made and paid while they remained, so to speak, at home. Up to the present, or to only recently, men were enlisted and sent away so promptly that there was no question of it being paid. So enquiry was made to settle the point and the reply is as follows:

"Replying to your further letter of the same date, I would say that separation allowance is payable to the wives of all men from the date of enlistment, no matter whether the men spend the first few weeks of their training in their home town or elsewhere."

The effect of this ruling is seen, and to the benefit of the married men and wives for it means that the pay to the enlisted man, $1.85 per day, is supplemented with an additional $20.00 per month. The total amount received per month will be $75.50, to those who remain and drill in the city. The lists stating that the Department has passed the allowance are received from time to time at the Patriotic Branch office, here, and enquiry may be made at any time as to whether the allowance has been made and entered. The cheque will come direct from Ottawa, and not through the Patriotic office. The matter is one purely military and is dealt with by the Department having this in charge.

EPRXESS EMPLOYEE IDENTIFIES BANDIT

COLUMBUS, O., Oct. 7.—Edward Loftus, who gave himself up to the police here last Saturday, was identified as the bandit who held up and robbed the express car of a Lake Erie & Western passenger train near Indianapolis on the night of Sept. 15, according to an announcement by the police.

Identification was made by Ralph William, the messenger of the car. The robbery netted the bandit two packages of jewelry and $2,500.

The police said Loftus confessed to the robbery of the express car.

"Can you tell me what the Golden Rule is?" asked the Sunday school teacher. "Yes'm," promptly replied the jeweller's offspring. "It's 24 grains make one pennyweight, 20 pennyweights one ounce, 12 ounces one pound."

TOBACCO A HEAVEN SENT SALVE FOR THE BOYS IN FIRING LINE

(By R. Macdonald Hastings. Author of "Love, and What Then?" "The Happy Ending," etc.)

Tobacco is a luxury. Never believe people who say that it has become a habit as to be at length a necessity. Tobacco can always be abandoned. How many men and officers in training have given it up altogether? How often have you, suffering temporarily from throat affliction, put nicotine in any and every form resolutely from your lips? Present me to anyone who regards himself as a confirmed smoker and I'll wager that I'll break him of the habit in an hour—for a time. There is practically everything to be said against nicotine—and what for it?

The outstanding benefits that the use of tobacco can confer are a soothfulness. We, living life at high pressure, as we thought we did in the piping days of peace, considered a plentiful usage of nicotine justified by the frenzy of our labours.

Mentality stretched from ten to one—lunch and liquor—mentality stretched from two or two-thirty to five or six—that rattling train homeward—domestic problems—theatre (silly plays)—music hall (coarse comedians)—restless bed hours—surely God sent us, so ridden, the salve of tobacco.

The Hard-Bitten Pipe.

And now? Where are the problems of yester-year? Where are the worries that hurt and strained at the vitals, stabbed rustily into the temples, brought hot pains to cool eyes? You and I know how little these were, how trivial as all pain before August 1914.

We, whose unhappy fate it is to watch and wait, to hear only what it is good for us to be told, and never to know and see—we at last realise what pain is. That dreadful, empty ache which springs from the publication of the news of the Allies' bad fortune, that helpless hurting fury which suffocates the soul as one reads of the torture of Belgium and Poland, that dry-eyed misery which we endure in the death of a son, a brother, or a friend—these are four novelties.

Every year brought us something new and often beautiful in the days of peace. 1915—year of the Devil—has satirised his predecessors. For the first time all the world is pained and ugly. This is new.

What would we all have done without that blackened pipe that resisted our teeth so generously, that cheeky white cigarette that sacrificed itself to our anxious chewing? Tobacco has been given the benediction of Someone over humanity in these dreadful days.

When you have to tell about Dick or Bill—you were his brother and his chums wanted to know—do you dare to tell me that the hard-bit pipe which kept the unmanly tears from your eyes is an invention of the Devil? Rather let it be regarded as a gift from Someone infinitely pitiful.

The Gorgeous Thing.

So much for us—here. What of the Army in France and Asia? A little helplessly I quote this letter from one of my brothers:

Very many thanks for the cigars. They are a great boon to our mess, everyone enjoying them greatly. We are back in the trenches again. It is very hot in the day time and chilly at night. To add to our troubles wasps have started a busy season. Rats and mice abound also. In fact, as you may imagine, all sorts of animals breed in these trenches. This means a lot of work for us. In wet weather the place is a quagmire—but one thing the rain does do is to keep the wasps, flies and bluebottles away. N.B.—So do the cigars.

I admit that as I finished that quotation I let loose one "brief topographical ejaculation," as Mr. Wells has it.

In the name of all that's fine and generous, are these glorious, fly-ridden, lion-hearted, angel-tempered, wasp-stung heroes to go without a smoke?

Whack out a quarter or dollar, or, bless you, a five spot—(Thank you, sir!)—and put it on the mantelpiece.

Send it off to-day to The Examiner. No more bother.

Just you get rid of it. And the gorgeous thing is that The Examiner will get more than twice the value that you would have got if you'd bought the "baccy" yourself. You've done it!

GRAND! You'll get some good news at the office to-morrow and something more, you'll enjoy that next—SOME!

Greek Situation Is Most Peculiar One

People Are in Favour of Venizelos' Policy But King Constantine Has Absolutely Rejected the Diplomacy of His Premier—Revolution May Be the Result

LONDON, Wednesday, Oct. 6.—An Athens despatch to the Havas Agency says: "Premier Venizelos has resigned, the King having informed him that he was unable to support the policy of his Ministry."

Earlier despatches from Athens told of the triumph of the Greek Premier in the Chamber of Deputies After an all-night debate, in which the Opposition protested against the Premier's policy, which they declared was forcing Greece into an unnecessary war, Venizelos succeeded in getting the Chamber to pass a vote of confidence motion by a majority of 40.

A Menacing Situation.

To-night the Greek situation is one of the most peculiar as well as the most menacing that has arisen out of the war. The resignation of Venizelos will necessarily mean the dissolution of the present Greek Cabinet and the Ministry, which is appointive by the King, must be ratified by the Chamber of Deputies, and the Greek Chamber is radically in favor of Venizelos.

As the situation is outlined by the political commentators to-night, King Constantine has absolutely rejected the diplomacy of his Premier, whose party has returned to power last Spring on a platform which openly advocated a normal, if not an active, support of the Entente powers. Furthermore, the policy of the Premier which has brought forth the King's disavowal was based on the platform which resulted in his resumption of office.

It would appear from the scanty news so far at hand that King Constantine, always a sympathizer of the German cause, has determined to stake everything on the support of that cause and to prevent Greece from aligning itself with the allies, even at the risk of losing his throne.

Revolution Expected.

It is pointed out here that a break between the King and Venizelos is likely to throw the country into revolution. The London commentators, making certain reservations, are inclined to believe that the Chamber of Deputies will stand by Venizelos, and will decline to support the King. At the last election there was an overwhelming majority for the party of Venizelos, and only the scantiest vote for the party of the then Premier M. Gounaris, who was in effect the candidate of the King. The Venizelos Government has attempted to estrange Greeks from Germany definitely and for all time by countenancing the landing of an Entente force at Salonica and tacitly agreeing to the use of the Vadar railway for transportation of this force to Serbia.

Convict Allowed to View Mother's Body

OSSINING, Oct. 7.—For the first time in the memory of those now connected with the Sing Sing prison, the body of the mother of a convict was brought to this village so that he might see her for the last time. Warden Osborne had refused permission to let the prisoner, Richard Dugan, go to New York.

When Dugan's mother died Warden Osborne was asked to let the prisoner go to New York for the funeral, but he had to refuse. Then a member of the Mutual Welfare league suggested that the body be brought to Ossining, on the way to Boston, and it was arranged through a local undertaker.

The league members sent a large wreath that was placed upon the coffin when it arrived and Dugan, in charge of Principal Keeper Dorner, went to the village. He was allowed to remain with his mother's body for a short time and then went back to the prison.

Dr. Strong, Who Led Fight on Typhus in Serbia, Returns

NEW YORK, Oct. 7.—Dr. R. E. Strong, of Washington, D. C., who has been the head of the American Red Cross Commission for Sanitary Affairs in Serbia, returned on board the steamship Duca degli Abruzzi, of the Italian line, after having spent many months in Serbia. He declared the death toll in that country since the European conflict began numbers from 135,000 to 150,000 persons, for the greater typhus victims.

"Typhus has been the real enemy," said Dr. Strong. "We have been challenged from all sides by the fever, but I believe that sanitary conditions are as near perfect as can be attained and the typhus ravages are on the wane. There will always be typhus in Serbia, but the Serbian physicians who have been working with and under the instructions of the American physicians have progressed and have things well in hand.

"The Serbian government gave us all the aid possible. A special train which took us through all zones and enabled us to fight the menace in all of the Serbian territory was the least of their efforts. There still are fifty physicians in charge of Dr. Thomas Jackson, in Serbia. I am on my way to Washington to state the advisability of having these physicians remain there to continue the work that has put Serbia on a living basis."

Dr. Strong received the medal of St. Sava and the first class Red Cross medal from the Serbian government. The medals were pinned on his breast by the Crown Prince.

Mrs. Arabelle Chapman Angelini, of No. 79 Park avenue, wife of an Italian clergyman, also was a passenger. Mrs. Angelini is here to seek funds for the destitute families of Italian soldiers. She showed credentials from Mr. Thomas Nelson Page, American Ambassador at Rome.

Professor Fernanda Maggioli, teacher of Italian in the New York public schools, returned after several months in Italy. He passed most of his time in Venice. Professor Maggioli declared every effort is being made in Venice to protect the art treasures of the city. The famous Lions of San Marco are being encased in plaster and steel, according to Professor Maggioli, in order that they may not suffer from aeroplane attacks. He was in Venice during the aeroplane attacks of July, but said there was little damage done.

Captain Wainman, Who Wedded American Girl, Is Killed

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., Oct. 7.—Captain Philip Stafford Gordon Wainman, who married Miss Christine Leslie Wheeler, of this city, was killed in action during the recent drive of the Allies in France, according to a cable message received to-day by Charles Wheeler, Mrs. Wainman's brother.

Captain Wainman came of an old Yorkshire family. His grandfather, the late Major Wainman, was an aide-de-camp to the Duke of Wellington. The Captain was graduated from the Edinburg Military College and was an officer in the Royal Worcestershire regiment.

Mrs. Wainman is a daughter of Mrs. Charles Wheeler, of Pembroke, Bryn Mawr, one of the handsomest country residences in the vicinity of this city. Her marriage took place on January 12, 1904, in the Church of the Redeemer, Bryn Mawr, the ceremony being witnessed by a notable assemblage of society folk from this and other cities.

Mrs. Wainman is a sister of the Countess Pappenheim, who has a villa on the Isle of Wight and who attended the wedding, of Mrs. Richard McCall Elliott, Mrs. George Thayer and Mrs. Henry Norris. She was introduced to society at a large ball in Horticultural Hall in 1901 given by her mother, who before her marriage was Miss Farnum.

REEVE OF OTONABEE SUGGESTS $125 FOR 80th BATTALION BAND

Mr. W. A. Anderson at Red Cross Concert Last Night in Keene Invited Generous Support—Mr. Gillespie Gave Fine Address on the Demands of the Hour.

Reeve W. A. Anderson's suggestion at the Red Cross concert in Keene last night that Otonabee give the 80th Battalion Band $100 was well received and it is likely to be acted upon. The town hall was crowded, showing door receipts of $83 for the Red Cross Society. Quite a number of Peterborough visitors remained over for the entertainment, among them Mr. Geo. A. Gillespie who spoke at length upon the various phases of the war. He congratulated the ladies upon their persevering work for the Red Cross and other funds. He also solicited generous support for the Canadian Patriotic Fund.

Reeve Anderson suggested the gift of $100 from the township Council to the 80th Battalion Band, and also $25 from the Agricultural Society.

Among those taking part in the programme were Miss Margaret Bryce, Miss Ella McFarlane, Mrs. Lower, Mrs. McIntyre, Mr. McFarlane, Mr. J. John of Peterborough, Miss Estelle Cuffe and other girls of the Villier's Red Cross Society. The concert was under the auspices of the Keene and Villiers Red Cross.

HUSBAND WAS FOUND GUILTY

NEW YORK, Oct. 7.—Mrs. Frances M. McCormick won a separation from Robert C. McCormick, a Deputy Assistant District Attorney, by a decision of Justice Blanchard in the Supreme Court. He decided that there was evidence of "cruel and inhuman treatment" of his wife. The Justice found that Mr. McCormick had forced his wife out of bed. Alimony was fixed at $25 a week.

In determining that the alleged cruelties had been sufficient to warrant the signing of a separation decree Justice Blanchard took into consideration the temperament of the wife. He said:—"Whereas a certain course of conduct toward a person of phlegmatic temperament may occasion little suffering, the same course when inflicted wilfully upon a sensitive person may cause most poignant anguish."

Mr. and Mrs. McCormick were married in 1912 and lived together for two years. The husband is found guilty of "two acts of violence." Referring to his evidence, the decision says of Mrs. McCormick:—"She described a course of conduct by her husband consisting of periodical drunkenness, abuse and profane language, driving her with violence from his bed, compelling her to sleep in other portions of their dwelling and refusing to permit her to occupy the bed with him. She describes his unnecessary or unexplained absence from home for periods of more than a week in some instances and an unnecessary and excessive parsimony in her support considering the circumstances.

"While it is perhaps true that mere drunkenness, abuse and other acts of ill-treatment other than the unprovoked violence alleged, when taken by themselves, fail to furnish legal ground upon which the Court may render a decree of separation, it cannot be said that, when regarded in the light of a general and continuous course of conduct, they may not attain that degree of wrong which the law views as cruel and inhuman treatment."

PAPER COLLECTED TO-DAY AND TO-MORROW ALSO

Citizens having paper to be collected by the Ashburnham Patriotic League are requested to have it ready to-morrow if it has not been collected to-day. It is likely parts of the city may not be covered to-day by the collectors, but the work will continue to-morrow.

Heavy Fine Was Imposed On Milkman

Harold Sanderson Was Fined Fifty Dollars and Costs by Police Magistrate Dumble—Milk Was Below Standard

THE JUDGMENT

The appended judgment concerns a case that was heard in Police Court a week ago to-day in which Sanitary Inspector Spence prosecuted Harold Sanderson, a milk man, for selling milk that was below required standard. The judgment follows:

This information charges the defendant, a vendor of milk, with adding water to his milk before it was taken away by the milk vendor for sale to his several customers.

The evidence of Mr. Spence, the Sanitary Inspector, shows that in July last he warned Mr. Sanderson that his milk was below standard.

On Tuesday the 28th of September last Mr. Spence brought samples of Mr. Sanderson's milk to Mr. Walker of the Peterborough creamery, who tested it. Mr. Walker in his evidence showed the test of the milk by him with a actometre, and also as to butter fat and that the milk had been watered to the extent of 16 per cent. of its bulk.

The milk tested was taken from the previous night's milking after being thoroughly mixed. There was no doubt as to the results of the tests. The milk was taken at Mr. Sanderson's house before it reached the milk vendor and I have no doubt as to the correctness of the tests, as the instruments by which it was tested are recognized by the Government as correct.

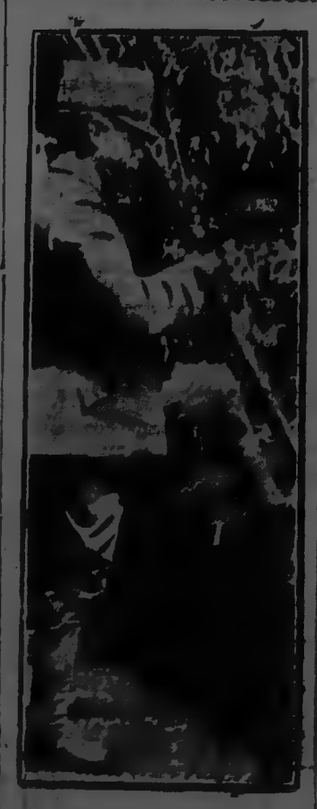
The offence is a serious one, for it is of first consequence that people who pay for good milk should get what they pay for. In this case they did not. When put the milk in the can was not made plain. It was made plain that the previous night's milk was very inferior to the morning's milk and there was no explanation why they should differ.

Mr. Sanderson said he did not water the milk, but Mr. Sanderson must be responsible for what he sells and if any one of his household or employees water his milk he must bear the consequences.

That this evil which is complained of by so many should be put an end to I impose a heavy fine in the hope that it will help to put an end to this fraudulent practice.

I adjudge that the defendant do pay within 10 days a fine of $50.00 and $4.60 costs, and that in default of payment he be imprisoned in the common jail of the County of Peterborough for 30 days.

D. W. DUMBLE,
Police Magistrate.



Italian Commander-in-Chief at the front—General Cadorna observing operations of the enemy from an elevated position.

WHAT THE VICTORIES IN THE WEST PRESAGE

It is now old history that none of the Allies were in the East prepared for such a gigantic war, whereas Germany had been planning, equipping, and training for many years with the one aim of dominating the world. The first blow proved the nearly total unpreparedness of all of the Allies, as compared with their common enemy. Fortunately the naval branch of Great Britain has successfully competed with the German naval programme. So, when the war clouds so suddenly enveloped Europe the Allies immediately eliminated all danger from the German fleet. Then followed the anxious months of preparation. This enormous preparation had to be conducted thoroughly and systematically to meet and overcome— months, or even a year later—the same armies at that time marching with but little check to apparent victory through Belgium, France and into Russia. It required the ablest strategy and skill of all of the Allies, acting in concert, to turn the tide of the German advance and avoid disaster long enough to get together their forces and equipment for a serious offensive which must lead to final success to them and crushing defeat to the German forces. So, as the German forces rushed on toward Paris, the great hordes of the Russian army, hurriedly and not too well equipped came down upon them from the north driving them back from their first dash into Russia and forcing steadily toward Berlin. The Russian forces seemed irresistable. They kept continually rolling the Germans back upon themselves. The Germans had then to draw from their western forces relieving the pressure on the French and British. Just at this point, and while the Germans were at the very gates of Paris, the French army and a small number of British were able to check the Germans. Then as the Russians continued to hammer the eastern front and the French and British slowly but gradually increased their strength, the Germans were forced back to the Aisne where they had prepared enormous fortifications. Beyond this point the Allies did not attempt to force them, the time had not yet arrived. While the Allies held the Germans to this line, in the west, the Germans turned their attention to the Russian steam roller, concentrating every effort on it and using every possible means to split the large Russian army and destroy it. But, the brilliant strategy of Grand Duke Nicholas not only saved the Russian army but has gradually drawn the main German army into a very difficult position. The lack of ammunition which so badly handicapped the Russian army in its retreat is no longer felt in the present position of the armies on the Eastern front the circumstances are exactly reversed in favor of the Russians. The positions are close to base in familiar country, better supplied with ammunition, and ready for winter weather. The Germans are far away from base, in hostile country, their lines of communication are getting long, they are in very difficult and difficult ground, and the early winter will, admittedly, be a severe handicap on them. The reversal of conditions is already telling. The German advance against Russia has not only been halted throughout almost the entire Eastern front within the past month, but the Russians have started an offensive which is steadily increasing and has already resulted in a number of considerable captures and smaller victories.

With the turn of the Russians against the Germans, after drawing them far into the north and east, has come the long awaited opportunity for the Allies on the Western front. During the long anxious retreats of the Russian Army, the Allies in the West have accumulated great stores of ammunition, guns, and supplies of all kinds, and recruited and trained an army of three million men and more. So the minute the Russians checked the Germans and started successful offensive movements, the Allies in the West were ready to strike, and have struck with a terrible force. The Germans have now two enormous armies very widely separated—one in the East against Russia, and one in the West against the Allies. Because of the distance between them, and the terrific hammering they are getting, neither can assist the other. There is no reason to believe that there will be any let up on the Western front now. Germany can not materially strengthen her Western armies because her forces are all mighty busily engaged. Some of the most strongly fortified positions along the western front have been taken by the Allies and there is nothing to indicate that it will not be possible to take all that remain. The hardest of all efforts—the initial breaking of the German lines is to-day a practically accomplished fact and one of the most vital spots of the German western front is in great danger. In all probability we shall soon hear of its fall. Then, the whole western front of the German army will be compelled to retire to straighten its line. But this time the Allies will be right on their heels continually driving through any weak spots and biting off large captures of men and guns. As the western drive moves slowly along against the most stubborn fighting the moral effect on the German forces will have its weakening influence. The news of victories on each front will strengthen and increase the fighting power of the Allies on the other front and at the same time weaken the German morale.

It is hardly possible to doubt that the present brilliant victories on the Western front are but the fore runners of the final and lasting crushing of the enemy through the concerted action of all of the Allies, working together.

The crushing of two enormous, well organized and splendidly equipped and trained armies as those of Germany and Austria is a long and difficult task, even with all of the resources of all of the Allies. So, we must be patient while it is being accomplished. But there is great encouragement for us all in realizing that these present brilliant victories are almost certainly the fore runners of the enormous crushing operations which are to bring lasting peace, and we hope prosperity to a waiting world.

Youth Was Found Guilty

Corporal Punishment Will Be Inflicted on Lakefield Youth Who Was Convicted of Stealing a Watch

A Lakefield youth of tender years was found guilty this morning in the County Police Court of stealing a watch the property of Albert Rowe. With the consent of the Crown and the parents, the boy will be whipped under the jurisdiction of the Court, Magistrate Langley gave an order for restitution and return of the watch to the owner. His Worship intimated that the parents were almost as much to blame as the boy who, in the witness box, declared he had not been sent to school. He showed considerable business acumen in that after obtaining possession of the watch, he turned it over to a Lakefield jeweller for repairs, and then secured a job for the purpose of earning money to pay for it.

Crown Attorney Hatton appeared for the prosecution, and Mr. Strickland represented the Children's Aid Society.

The members of the band and Peterborough Battalion will parade to the grounds and their presence will add interest to the programme.

The athletic meet is the only event in the city on Thanksgiving Day afternoon. The proceeds are to be devoted to the Y.M.C.A. work among the soldiers.

The entry lists, which close on Friday night are filling rapidly. The scoring will be according to the points system, every competitor getting credit for his performance.

WANDERERS WON'T TAKE A CHANCE ON PERCENTAGE PLAN

Players of the Wanderer hockey team prefer straight salaries to a percentage of the gross receipts.

The co-operative plan did not meet with favour from the players at the annual meeting, and it was decided to send out new contracts to the fourteen players on the reserve list offering them a straight salary and a ten per cent. bonus if the team wins the championship.

Charlie McCarthy, the goal-tender of last year is now living in Quebec, and may be traded to the Quebec team, which has no spare goaler to replace Paddy Moran. Trades for Carl Kendall and Leo O'Grady are also likely. Wanderers have a western goal-tender in view, as announced in The Herald some time ago. The Wanderer officers elected are:

President—S. E. Lichtenhein.
Vice-Presidents—Ernie Russell and Dickey Boon.
Directors—Odie Cleghorn and Art. Boyes.

GROVER CLEVELAND ALEXANDER.—Star pitcher of the Philadelphia Nations, champions of the National League, who will be contenders for the World's Championship. Alexander practically won the pennant for his team by winning a very high percentage of games he pitched.

Was Removed In An Automobile

Isaac Dormer Ran Foul of the Police —Was Fined Five Dollars

Mr. J. J. Turner, Sr., and Mr. H. Rush occupied the bench this morning in the absence of Police Magistrate Dumble. For some weeks past Mr. Turner has been a close student of Police Court procedure. The knowledge thus gained was given practical effect this morning when he imposed a fine of five dollars, or twenty days in gaol on Isaac Dormer. The latter pleaded not guilty to a charge of drunkenness. The officer who garnered Dormer in, said the accused had to be removed to the station in an automobile.

"I am not a criminal," volunteered Dormer.

"You're not a good citizen," countered Mr. Rush. Further observations were interrupted by Dormer's hasty removal from the Court Room.

Changed His Plea.

Tony Routania faced a similar charge against which he entered a plea of not guilty. When he discovered that he was to be remanded until further evidence could be produced he suffered a change of heart and decided to plead guilty. This cost him five dollars with the option of a meal ticket good for twenty days.

Man Chose Death With Wife in Fire

DETROIT, Oct., 7.—Mr and Mrs. Louis Robidoux were burned to death in their home when they were trapped in a room on the second floor by flames that cut off their escape.

"Jump, Ethel, it's your only chance!" shouted Mr. Robidoux, standing with his wife at the head of the rear stairs.

"I can't jump, I'm afraid," replied his wife.

"We will go together, then," remarked Mr. Robidoux, drawing his wife to him and kissing her.

Firemen found their bodies in the ruins. A jump of less than 20 feet would have saved their lives.

COLLEGIATE FIELD DAY

The annual sports of the Peterborough Collegiate Institute will take place to-morrow afternoon at Riverside Park and the friends of the school are cordially invited. The jumps were held yesterday and some good performances were given, one record being broken.

Stock Markets

In its annual pamphlet report, issued yesterday, the Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe Railway shows for the fiscal year ended June 30th, last, net revenues equivalent to a return of 5.40 per cent. on the property investment. E. P. Ripley, president of the Company, said:

"The striking fact is that earnings on the entire investment are now not much more than five per cent. per annum, and it must be borne in mind that of those earnings it is necessary to appropriate a considerable amount each year for additions and betterments to preserve the company's credit.

"The ability of the company to pay six per cent. on the common stock is due to the fact that it pays an average of only slightly more than four per cent. on its bonded debt, much of the bonded debt having been created when money could be obtained at or near four per cent."

Market Opinions of New York Houses.

J. B. Bache & Co.—Copper stocks are more in favour and become more and more active. Railroad stocks are a purchase on slight recessions.

Post and Flagg—Prices are likely to react further, but there is no real cause for alarm or precipitate action in throwing over stocks from well-protected accounts Rallies are sure to come from time to time and on such strong spots, sales can doubtless be made to advantage for the time being at least, more priticularly in the industrial specialties where such sharp advances have recently taken place.

Blue Blood Alone Isn't So Valuable

Although too many young men start life under the impression that because they come of a "good family" they can get along in the world without much effort. It is an impression that may prove very costly to them.

No man's ancestors can win for him a real success in life. It is not what they have done, but what he can do that is the vital question.

If he sticks to his ancestry fallacy, and refuses to exert himself, he will not progress either fast or far. Only when he dismisses it from his mind and strikes out manfully for himself, can he make headway.

Some years ago the superintendent of one of the biggest building enterprises ever undertaken in New York introduced to me a young Englishman who had applied to him for a position. I had not been talking long with the Englishman when I discovered that he was badly afflicted with the ancestry delusion.

He boasted—quite unconsciously—of his relationship with a famous general. He let me know that Lady So-and-So was a close connection. And he gave me plainly to understand that he came from a "most excellent" family.

"That young cub," the superintendent later told me, with a twinkle in his eye, "thinks that I'll give him an easy job because of his family tree. Well, I'll give him a job, but it won't be an easy one."

In fact, it was extremely disagreeable, involving long hours of work in a narrow space, among workmen who could not speak a word of English. There was an immediate but futile, protest.

"I understand you wanted to learn the business," the superintendent coldly remained the angry scion of a noble house. "There's no way to learn it like beginning at the bottom. Yes, I know who you are, well enough. But what of it? You've got to show for yourself. That's all. You can quit or hang on, as you please."

To the credit of the young Englishman, he did not quit. He said no more about his family connections, and he went back to work.

Three months later, when a strike had taken place, he played a leading part in compelling the would-be strikers to stay at their posts until a hurried settlement could be effected with the leaders. Next day he was given his first promotion.

No doubt the young Englishman was justified in being proud of his ancestors. Possibly the fact that he proved equal to the emergency was due to some quality he had inherited from them. The point is that he had to prove the possession of this quality by his own actions.

It is not what your father did, or what your grandfather did. It is always what you yourself can do.

That is the acid test of life. That is the test which the world applies to every man, and by which it judges him.—H. Addison Bruce.

Lincoln's Strategy.

While walking along a dusty road in Illinois in his circuit days Lincoln was overtaken by a stranger driving to town.

"Will you have the goodness to take my overcoat to town for me?" asked Lincoln.

"With pleasure. But how will you get it again?"

"Oh, very readily! I intend to remain in it," was Lincoln's prompt reply.

NO ONE TO BLAME BECAUSE NO RECEPTION WAS GIVEN SOLDIER

A number of people, of the kind that usually do not do anything to help anything along themselves, but who are always ready to find fault with others, are complaining because a local man invalided home from the front did not receive a reception such as was accorded Lieut. Ackerman last week. Pte. Langley, of the 21st Battalion, who resides on Union street, is the man in question, and it is unfortunate indeed that a reception could not have been given him. But how in the name of common sense any of the local authorities are to be blamed under the circumstances is hard to see. A Montreal paper mentioned that a Pte. Langley of Peterborough was among the soldiers who landed there on Sunday from England. City Clerk Armstrong, with a view to arranging a reception tried to find out something about Pte. Langley. A search of the list of soldiers leaving Peterborough for the 21st Battalion did not show his name, but the nominal roll of the 21st Battalion gave his address as Lindsay. At the Armouries nothing was known of Pte. Langley, and it was natural for the authorities to suppose that the Montreal paper had been mistaken and that the soldier in question belonged to Lindsay. As a matter of fact he was a Peterborough man, who had gone to Lindsay to enlist, but that fact was not known either to the civic or military authorities. How then can any one be blamed? To show how little known was the arrival of Pte. Langley, it might be mentioned that The Examiner was informed by a Union street man only yesterday that he did not know of any soldier on that street coming back from the front. And Union street is only a block long. The authorities are watching for the men coming back, but the same thing is liable to happen again unless the relatives give warning. Families in Peterborough who have relatives on their way home from the firing line should notify the city clerk and the officers at the Armouries.

VOICE OF THE PEOPLE

Editor, Examiner:

Sir,—With others, I was appointed to attend the meeting last Monday night in the interests of the temperance cause. I also was appointed to attend the greatest gathering ever held on Canadian soil. Think of $100,000 (one hundred thousand dollars) given by ten men to make it possible. Free ticket to Toronto from any point in the Dominion, free accommodation while there for seven days; also free street car service. I refer to the Pre Assembly Congress. Also Rev. John McNeil holding service from 12.30 to 1.30 each day nearby; a rare treat.

I wish at this time to refer to some things which were said there about this terrible liquor business. Rev. E. A. Henry, B.A.: We charge against the trade the financial burden laid upon our country, over one billion and a half dollars of a liquor bill in the United States, $830,000,000 in Great Britain, $81,320,000 in Canada, are figures that stagger us. Think of what an average of $11.30 per capita in Canada represents. A candid barkeeper in Saskatchewan admitted to a Godly woman worker that while he had never known a frequenter of his bar to have been helped by his habit, he had known scores who had lost self respect, made ragged their garments and destroyed the promise of their lives.

Rev. Andrew T. Grant, M.D.: I want to tell you as a man who has pioneered the country that God will not save Canada until the Christian men of Canada say regarding the liquor traffic, 'Get off the map.' I am not saying that he cannot do it, but it is my humble judgment that He will not because there is in our camp that sin which we have fostered, and which to-day is our great national sin. I once heard the late B. T. Jacobs say: God has skimmed the churches and put the cream into the Sunday school. This was at a S. S. convention. As I have been a member of a Christian church for over 53 years, I say fellow members, Roman Catholic and Protestant, we each have our perference. We cannot live without it; we are all helped by it on our way to our home on high in our Father's house. I would call up n each and all members and adherents, let us lay aside our political leanings, or anything else that stands in our way, and rise in our might and put down this terrible business in this, our fair city I stopped a friend on the street a few days ag and said: You are as grey as I am We are not going to stop here long. What is the prospects on ahead? A glorious hope, was the reply. Will the liquor business give in?

One more let us rise in our might in this our serious time and many examples and put it down.

J. H. TAYLOR, 500 Bolivar street.

New Liquor Law An Aid to Labour

Mr. Tom Gorman Observed Saskatchewan's Legislative Control of Liquor Sales

Mr. Thomas Gorman, Reid Street, has returned home from a trip to the Western Provinces, where he states about half the crop has been threshed. Rain in some parts of Manitoba has seriously hindered this work. In fact in some districts he saw, on his return trip, threshing machines in the same place he had seen them on his outward trip. However, it is not expected that there will be serious results unless rains continue this month and the grain suffers from the effects of rain and frost.

The new liquor law in Saskatchewan, Mr. Gorman observed to be generally popular. It was certainly proving a help to the farmers who, during the harvest season, had to depend on men in gangs. Heretofore, on a wet day or otherwise, when the men were idle they sought the bars in nearby towns. Sometimes they did not return to the farmer, but generally they simply incapacitated themselves for a few days and returned after a spree. Now the men remain around the farm buildings during enforced idleness. When trains approach the Saskatchewan border train men hang in the cars cards bearing notice of the liquor laws of the Province, especially the heavy fine for simply being drunk.

The Speakers' Patriotic League held a meeting last evening and decided to send a deputation to the Council this evening to advocate the necessity of making a grant to the fund. As many of the citizens as can find it convenient are asked to be present.

Leaders That Don't Lead

History Finds Where They Were Deposed

Napoleon III. believed, perhaps with justice, that his crown rested on his emulation of the military feats of the great Emperor, but his soldiers found him out, and when he announced that he was going to the Crimea to put himself at the head of the allied forces the soldiers intimated plainly that they did not want him. The end came just before Sedan, when he announced that he had handled over the command to his marshals and should serve in future as a comman soldier. Francis Joseph wisely allowed others to bear the shame of the abortive campaigns of his earlier days by keeping a good deal out of the limelight, and Victor Emmanuel without a Garibaldi might have waited long for the accomplishment of his ambitions. In the present was it is generally said that the Kaiser has long ceased to exercise more than a nominal control over military operations, and it is even whispered that Hindenburg retains his great command in spite of the royal desire to get rid of a man of inconvenient frankness.

Chicago Saloons To Be Closed

CHICAGO, Oct. 8. Chicago for the first time in forty-four years will be "dry" next Sunday.

The order that 7,152 saloons, cafes and gardens were liquor is sold shall obey the Illinois Sunday closing law will go into effect at 12 o'clock Saturday night. It was announced today. No liquor will be permitted to be sold or given away between that hour and 12 o'clock Sunday night. As the city ordinance permits the sale of liquor until 1 o'clock in the morning, saloon interests pointed out today that they might open their places for business for one hour, between 12 and 1 o'clock Sunday night.

The closing order read to the city council by Mayor Thompson last night came as a shock to the liquor interests. Counsel for the Brewers association announced that a meeting of all saloon interests would be called to discuss the order which, they said, would force many small saloons out of business.

Wholesale arrests of saloon keepers who violate the closing law was promised by Chief of Police Healey. Conviction carries with it a fine not to exceed $200. The mayor, it was pointed out, has power to revoke licenses for violation of the law.

Throws Alimony On Porch Of Wife's Home

Man Now Instructed in Proper Way to Pay Money

AKRON, O., Oct. 8.—Probation Officer Switzer gave Harry P. Hood instructions as to the proper way to pay $5 a week alimony he was ordered 10 days ago to give his wife.

The first payment came due yesterday. Hood tied up $4.50 in a small package and threw it upon the porch of his wife's home.

Mrs. Hood asked Switzer to make Hood give up the additional 50 cents and added that it would be more satisfactory if in future the money was paid through the courts.

Senator Hollis Sued For Separation

Couple Had Not Lived Together Since Spring of 1912

CONCORD, N. H., Oct. 8.—Attorneys for Mrs. Grace B. Hollis entered in the superior court for Merrimac county, under a special order granted by Judge Oliver W. Branch, a petition for legal separation and maintenance against her husband, Honorable Henry F. Hollis, Jr., United States senator for New Hampshire, and it has been made returnable on Nov. 15.

Mr. and Mrs. Hollis were married in Norwood, Mass., June 14, 1893, her maiden name being Grace Bruerton Fisher. They have made their home in Concord, where Mr. Hollis was prominent in the practice of the legal profession, as well as prominent in Democratic politics.

Early in the spring of 1913, to the surprise of Senator Hollis' friends, he left Mrs. Hollis with her two children, Henry, French Hollis, Jr., and Miss Anne Hollis, and has since lived apart from her. Not even his father, Major Abijah Hollis, who resided in West Concord, nor any member of his family had any idea as to the cause of his act.

On his return to Concord early in July he suddenly dropped out of sight of his family and friends. At present his whereabouts are unknown to any member of the family. Any mail for him is sent to the senator office building in Washington and what matter comes from him is mailed from the same place.

MAGIC BAKING POWDER

Italy's King In Dire Peril

Shrapnel Splinters Injure His Horse —Austrian Shell Explodes Where He Had Been 5 Minutes Before

UDINE, Italy, Oct. 8.—King Victor Emanuel has had two narrow escapes from death while at the battle front.

The King, desiring to assist in the direction of operations, was proceeding toward the front on horseback, having left his automobile because of the lack of a road. He rode in among his troops although he had been warned that the Austrian projectiles were claiming a number of victims.

As he passed a certain point a shell exploded so near to him that splinters struck and injured the King's horse. The King's companions was not disturbed, and when his suite urged him to retire he called for another horse, exclaiming: "Here we must win or all die." Then he rode in again among the troops, who, with shouts of "Savoy," took the Austrian position by storm. The spot is now called the "King's Knoll."

Shell Was Too Late.

On another occasion when near Monte Nero he passed a small detachment that was exposed to bombardment by the Austrians from a mountain opposite the position. The King stopped his automobile and inquired whether there had been any casualties. On being informed that only one gunner had been slightly wounded the King drove on. The royal automobile was scarcely out of sight when the Austrian artillery fire was resumed, a large shell falling on the exact spot where the King had stopped, the explosion tearing a hole several yards deep.

Escaped by 5 Minutes.

The King, hearing the sound of the bombardment, returned to the scene, saying as he photographed the smoking cavity where the automobile had just stood: "Had I stayed five minutes longer it would have been necessary to invent an elaborate story to account for the excellence of the Austrian aim."

SHE GAINED 16 POUNDS.

Mrs. George Bradshaw, Harlowe, Ont., writes: "I was troubled for many years with weak, watery blood and dropsy. I had nervous headaches, dizziness and sinking spells, and was in fact, a semi-invalid. Doctors told me my heart and kidneys were diseased and gave me up but by using 10 boxes of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food I have been cured of many of my old complaints and gained 16 pounds in weight."

Appointed chief of the Imperial General Staff at army headquarters in London.

"THE EMPRESS OF BRITAIN" BADLY DAMAGED BY FIRE

Blaze of Unknown Origin Broke Out as Big Steamer Used as a Troopship Was Passing Out of the Mersey Last Night---Was Towed Back Into Liverpool

LIVERPOOL, Oct. 8.—The Empress of Britain, the former Canadian Pacific liner, but commandeered by the Government at the outbreak of war, was towed back to port to-day, badly damaged by fire of unknown origin that broke out as she was passing out of Mersey late last night. She carried no cargo.

The Empress of Britain was in use by the British Government as a troop ship. The statement that she was outward bound and carried no cargo makes it appear probable that she was carrying troops when the mysterious fire was discovered.

LONDON, Oct. 8.—The British army has lost seventeen thousand officers since the beginning of the war, including five thousand killed, ten thousand wounded, and the remainder missing.

NEW YORK, Oct. 8.—Sir Johnstone Forbes Robertson, the British actor, arriving here to-day says conscription in England is inevitable.

LONDON, Oct. 8.—The Greek Cabinet as named to-day are all strong advocates of Greek neutrality.

LONDON, Oct. 8.—The Bulgarian ministers at Rome, Paris and London will be handed their passports to-night.

LONDON, Oct. 8.—Gen. Hamilton last night reported an average gain of 300 yards on the Sulva front during the past month in the Gallipoli Peninsula.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON QUESTIONS

Elijah taken up into Heaven. 2 Kings 2:1-12a.

Golden Text: In thy presence is fulness of joy; in thy right hand there are pleasures for evermore. Psalm 16:11.

Verse 1. Where is heaven?

Which would you say, and why, that heaven is a place, a condition, or both?

It is possible here, for two persons to live together, in the same outward circumstances, one enjoying heaven and the other suffering the pangs of hell; will the same be possible, in the future life? Why?

What reasons can you give, for or against the belief, that heaven is peopled by beings with material bodies?

What reason is there to believe that Elijah's material body went to heaven?

Why should we suppose that Jesus has a material body in heaven?

Has God got a material body? Give your reasons.

Verses 2-8. Why did Elijah act as if he wanted to get rid of Elisha?

Why would it not be right or in good taste for a man of God to-day, when he starts for another place to say like Elisha: "The Lord hath sent me?"

What qualities did Elisha display in refusing to leave Elijah? (See verses 2, 4, 6, 9.)

What is the chief reason why so many men are unlike?

Did Elisha know that his Master was going to heaven in the near future, and if so how did he learn of it?

Why did God choose Elisha for Elijah's successor?

What reasons is there, if any, to believe that a man of God will never fail to get the position and the work which God has planned for him?

[illegible] as Elijah [illegible] Elisha [illegible] will be [illegible] Verse 9 to We[illegible] Elisha [illegible] than [illegible] did I mean [illegible] what [illegible]

Verses 11-12a. What is represented in plain Elijah's translation to heaven. Set Death be miracle.

Lesson for Sunday, Oct. 17, 1915. Elisha heals Naaman the Syrian. 2 Kings 5.

British Pastor's Wife Imprisoned As Spy

LONDON, Oct. 8.—Mrs. Louise S. C. Herbert, German wife of a British pastor at Darlington, has been sent to jail for six months as a spy. Outwardly a staunch British subject it was proved that she obtained from her servant girl information concerning a munition factory, and moreover, made sketches of streets where troops were quartered. These activities, together with the fact that the addresses of a number of Germans were found among her belongings, brought about her conviction.

As for Mrs. Titus, that really engaging lady made life so easy for me that I wondered why I had ever been apprehensive. She was quite wonderful when "it came to a pinch." I began to understand a good many things about her, chief among them being her unvoiced theories on matrimony. While she did not actually commit herself, I had no difficulty in ascertaining that, from her point of view, marriages are not made in heaven and that a properly arranged divorce is a great deal less terrestrial than it is commonly supposed to be. She believed in matrimony as a trial and divorce as a reward, or something to that effect.

My opinion seemed to carry considerable weight with her. For a day or two after our somewhat sanguinary encounter she was prone to start, even to jump slightly, when I addressed myself to her with unintentional directness. She soon got over that, however.

We were discussing Aline's unfortunate venture into the state of matrimony, and I, feeling temporarily august and superior, managed to say the wrong thing and in doing so put myself in a position from which I could not recede without loss of dignity. If my memory serves me correctly I remarked with some asperity that marriages of that kind never turned out well for any one except the bridegroom.

She looked at me coldly. "I am afraid, Mr. Smart, that you have been putting some very bad notions into my daughter's head," she said.

"Bad notions?" I murmured.

"She has developed certain pronounced and rather extraordinary views concerning the nobility as the result of your—ah—argument, I may say."

"I'm very sorry. I know one or two exceedingly nice noblemen, and I've no doubt there are a great many more. She must have misunderstood me. I wasn't running down the nobility, Mrs. Titus. I was merely questioning the advisability of elevating it in the way wo Americans sometimes do."

"You did not put it so adroitly in discussing the practice with Aline," she said quickly. "Granted that her own marriage was a mistake, a dreadful mistake, it does not follow that all international matches are failures. I would just as soon be unhappily married to a duke as to a dry goods merchant, Mr. Smart."

"But not at the same price, Mrs. Titus," I remarked.

She smiled. "A husband is dear at any price."

"I shouldn't put it just that way," I protested. "A good American husband is a necessity, not a luxury."

"Well, to go back to what I started to say, Aline is very bitter about matrimony as viewed from my point of view. I am sorry to say I attribute her attitude to your excellent counseling."

"You flatter me. I was under the impression she took her lesson of Tarnoway."

"Granted. But Tarnoway was unfit. Why tar all of them with the same stick? There are good noblemen, you'll admit."

"But they don't need rehabilitation."

"Aline, I fear, will never risk another experiment. It's rather calamitous, isn't it? When one stops to consider her youth, beauty and all the happiness there may be"—

"I beg your pardon, Mrs. Titus, but I think your fears are groundless."

"What do you mean?"

"The countess will marry again. I am not betraying a secret, because she has intimated as much to my secretary as well as to me. I take it that as soon as this unhappy affair is settled she will be free to reveal the true state of her feelings toward"— I stopped, somewhat dismayed by my garrulous turn.

"Toward whom?" she fairly snapped.

"I don't know," I replied truthfully and, I fear, lugubriously.

"Good heavens!" she cried, starting up from the bench on which we were sitting in the loggia. There was a queer expression in her eyes. "Hasn't—hasn't she ever hinted at—hasn't she mentioned any one at all?"

"Not to me."

Mrs. Titus was agitated. I could see that very plainly. A thoughtful frown appeared on her smooth brow, and a gleam of anxiety sprang into her eyes.

"I am sure that she has had no opportunity to"— She did not complete the sentence, in which there was a primary note of perplexity and wonder.

It grilled me to discover that she did not even so much as take me into consideration.

"You mean since the—er—divorce?" I inquired.

"She has been in seclusion all of the time. She has seen no man—that is to say, no man for whom she could possibly entertain a—. But, of course, you are mistaken in your impression. Mr. Smart. There is absolutely nothing in what you say."

"A former sweetheart, antedating her marriage," I suggested hopelessly.

"She has no sweetheart. Of that I am positive," said she with conviction.

"She must have had an army of admirers. They were legion after her marriage, I may be pardoned for reminding you."

She started. "Has she never mentioned Lord Amberdale to you?" she asked.

"Amberdale?" I repeated, with a queer sinking of the heart. "No, Mrs. Titus. An Englishman?"

She was mistress of herself once more. In a very degage manner she informed me that his lordship, a most attractive and honorable young Englishman, had been one of Aline's warmest friends at the time of the divorce proceedings. But of course there was nothing in that! They had been good friends for years, nothing more, and he was a perfect dear.

But she couldn't fool me. I could see that there was something working at the back of her mind, but whether she was distressed or gratified I was not by way of knowing.

"I've never heard her mention Lord Amberdale," said I.

Her eyes narrowed slightly. Had I but known, the mere fact that the countess had not spoken of his lordship provided her experienced mother with an excellent reason for believing that there was something between them. She abruptly brought the conversation to a close and left me, saying that she was off for her beauty nap.

CHAPTER XXII.

The Duel.

ALONE, I soon became a prey to certain disquieting thoughts. Summed up they resolved themselves into a condition of certainty which admitted of but one aspect—the charming countess was in love with Amberdale. And the shocking part of it all was that she was in love with him prior to her separation from Tarnoway! I felt a cold perspiration start out all over my body as this condition forced itself upon me. He was the man. He had been the man from the beginning. My heart was like lead for the rest of the day, and very curiously for a leaden thing it was subject to pain.

Just before dinner Britton, after inspecting me out of the corner of his eye for some time, advised me to try a little brandy.

"You look seedy, sir," he said, with concern in his voice. "A cold setting in perhaps, sir."

I tried the brandy, but not because I thought I was taking a cold. Somehow it warmed me up. There is virtue in good spirits.

The countess was abroad very early the next morning. I discovered her in the courtyard, giving directions to Max and Rudolph, who were doing some spading in the garden. She looked very bright and fresh and enticing in the light of an early moon, and I was not only pleased, but astonished, having been led to believe all my life that a woman, no matter how pretty she may be, appears at her worst when the day is young.

I joined her at once. She gave me a gay, accusing smile.

"What have you been saying to mother?" she demanded as she shook hands with me. "I thought you were to be trusted."

I flushed uncomfortably. "I'm sorry, countess. I—I didn't know it was a secret."

She looked at me somewhat quizzically for a moment; then she laughed softly. "It is a secret."

"I hope I haven't got you into bad odor with your"—

"Oh, dear me, no! I'm not in the least worried over what mother may think. I shall do as I please, so there's the end of it."

I swallowed something that seemed to be sticking in my throat. "Then it is true that you are going to marry?"

"Quite," she said succinctly.

I was silent for a moment. "Well, I'm—I'm glad to know it in time," I said rather more gruffly than was necessary.

She smiled too merrily I thought. "You must not tell any one else about it, however."

"I can promise that," I said, a sullen rage in my soul. "Devils could not drag it out of me. Rest easy."

It occurred to me afterward that she laughed rather jerkily, you might say uneasily. At any rate, she turned away and began speaking to Max.

"Have you had your breakfast?" I asked stupidly.

"No."

"Neither have I. Will you join me?"

"Isn't it getting to be a habit?"

"Breakfast or—you?"

"Breakfast and me."

"I confess, my dear countess, that I like you for breakfast," I said gallantly.

"That is a real tribute," she said demurely and took her place beside me. Together we crossed the courtyard.

On the steps Collingraft Titus was standing. I uttered an audible groan and winced as if in dire pain.

"What is it?" she cried quickly.

"Rheumatism," I announced, carefully raising my right arm and affecting an expression of torture. I am not a physical coward, kind reader. The fact that young Mr. Titus carried in his hands a set of formidable looking boxing gloves did not frighten me. Heaven knows, if it would give him any pleasure to slam me about with a pair of gloves I am not without manliness and pluck enough to endure physical pain and mental humiliation. It was diplomacy, cunning, astuteness—whatever you may choose to call it—that stood between me and a friendly encounter with him. Two minutes' time would serve to convince him that he was my master, and then where would I be? Where would be the prestige I had gained? Where my record as a conqueror? "I must have caught cold in my arms and shoulders," I went on, making worse faces than before as I moved the afflicted parts experimentally.

"There," she exclaimed ruefully; "I knew you would catch cold! Men always do. I'm so sorry."

"It's nothing," I made haste to explain—"that is, nothing serious. I'll get rid of it in no time at all." I calculated for a minute. "A week or ten days at the most. Good morning, Collingraft."

"Morning. Hello, sis. Well?" He dangled the gloves before my eyes.

My disappointment was quite pathetic. "Tell him," I said to the countess.

"He's all crippled up with rheumatism, Colly," she said. "Put those ugly things away. We're going in to breakfast."

He tossed the gloves into a corner of the vestibule. I felt a little ashamed of my subterfuge in the face of his earnest expression of concern.

"Tell you what I'll do," he said warmly. "I know how to rub a fellow's muscles"—

"Oh, I have a treasure in Britton!" said I hastily. "Thanks, old man. He will work it out of me. Sorry we can't have a go this morning."

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

MRS. DOLBY'S TALKS.

The Deacon Hears Further Comments on His Failings.

BROKE THIRD COMMANDMENT.

Language Used by the Good Man When Johnson's Calf Butted Him in the Stomach Causes Him a Bad Half Hour—Seeks Solace in Geography.

[Copyright.]

Deacon Dolby was replacing a hinge on the smokehouse door and wondering if it was going to be a hard winter or not when he looked toward the house and saw the widow Haskins just leaving it with a pitcher in her hand. He at once laid aside his tools and prepared for the worst. He had not long to wait. Within ten minutes he heard Mrs. Dolby's voice calling, and he started for the house. She had been as chirpy as a cricket all the morning and laying plans for ten years ahead, but he realized what would follow the call of the widow.

Deacon Dolby entered the kitchen to find his wife stretched at full length

"YOU WERE KNOCKED ABOUT TEN FEET."

on the floor. In one hand she clasped a yellow bowl that had been in the family for twenty-one years and in the other a wiping cloth that was not quite so many years old. Her eyes were closed, and the breath seemed to have left her body.

The deacon went over to the sink and got a drink of water.

Then he lifted the boiling teakettle on the back side of the stove.

Then he gently removed the bowl and the wiping cloth from the hands that would fondle them no more.

Then he picked Mrs. Dolby up as he would a bag of potatoes worth 90 cents a bushel and carried her into the sitting room and dropped her on the lounge. In doing so he took no precautions to see that her head was higher than her feet, and as a result she seemed to be sliding down hill on her back. When she had been arranged the deacon sat down and opened an old school geography that had somehow found its way to a place beside the family Bible and Sankey's Gospel Hymns on the center table and opened it to be greeted by the announcement that the Mississippi river was the longest river in the world. This gave him no shock of surprise. He had suspected the fact for several years. He was wondering if it made the Amazon jealous to play second fiddle when there was a movement at his elbow and a voice asked:

"Samuel Dolby, have we both died and gone to heaven?"

Mrs. Dolby Comes to Life.

Mrs. Dolby had got through sliding down hill on her back and had got up and turned herself around. The deacon had no answer ready. He knew that both were on earth and that the hinge on the smokehouse door was still waiting to be fixed, but what was the use in getting up an argument? Besides, he was interested in the statement that James K. Polk could never bear to inflict pain on even a grasshopper.

"I see now that we are still on earth," said Mrs. Dolby after awhile in answer to her own question. "Yes, I remember calling to you, Samuel. I did not dream of fainting away, but somehow when I thought—thought of—thought of what the widow"—

There were tears and sobs at this juncture. Some husbands would have gone after the kitchen towel and spoken soothing words, but Mr. Dolby had been caught by the statement that the Hudson river emptied into New York bay instead of the Pacific ocean.

"Mrs. Haskins came over to borrow a quart of cider vinegar," resumed the dying woman after a bit, "and I lent her that pitcher with the nose knocked off to carry it home in. I didn't notice anything strange about her until just as she was going out. Then I saw tears in her eyes and asked her if she had heard bad news. With that she busted out crying and dropped into a chair, and for five minutes I couldn't get her to say a word. Then she told me all. She felt it her duty to do so. I called to you, and then all became dark. I thought the blow had killed me, but it seems that it hasn't. It seems that I have got to live on."

No Huckleberries in Turkey.

Mr. Dolby had some little curiosity, but he held it in leash. The geography made the statement that the huckleberry was to be found in every country on earth except Turkey, and he wondered why Turkey was left out when a good thing was going around. Mrs. Dolby sobbed four sobs and then shed fourteen tears and then asked:

"Don't you want to know what the blow was, Samuel? You are going to say you do, but I shall tell you. One day last week you went over to Mr. Johnson's to borrow a hoe to dig taters with. You came back without the hoe, and you were looking as pale as a ghost and not saying anything. I didn't pester you with any questions. I just waited. Now I know all. Samuel, do you want to go down on your knees and say that it was the sudden surprise that made you do it and ask my forgiveness?"

The question was direct, but the deacon paid no attention to it. He had found the geographical statement that the rivers of China supported a population of 2,000,000, and he was not to be switched off on any side issues. He was given two minutes to answer in, and then Mrs. Dolby said:

"Mr. Johnson has a calf about a year old. You were crossing the lot when the calf took you for his father and came bounding at you and struck you in the stomach with his head. You were knocked about ten feet, and Mrs. Johnson, who was looking on, threw up her hands and fainted away. She thought you had been killed stone dead. While you were down the calf tried to bite your ears. You can't deny this, Samuel, for Mrs. Johnson is a woman that won't lie. She was offered a yoke of oxen when she was a girl if she would tell a falsehood, but she refused. She says you were unconscious for at least ten minutes. Her faint lasted her at least seven or eight, and you hadn't moved when she came out of it. You were lying in the same place, and the calf was fumbling for your ears. You were the same as dead, Samuel, and perhaps it would have been better had the Lord taken you then and there. Don't you want to press me to your heart and say that it shall never happen again?"

The deacon didn't. Every incident in the tragedy under discussion rose up before him as clear as day, but he had no forgiveness to ask for. Besides, he was interested in the statement that John Smith settled Jamestown instead of Henry Smith, as he had always been led to believe, and he wanted to work it out in his mind.

"You lay there one moment, Samuel, with Mrs. Johnson thinking you dead and remembering how many pickled peaches I had put up for the winter, and the next you was on your feet. The calf stood there looking at you out of his innocent eyes, and you jumped up and down and abused his father.

"Then you called his mother a wretch.

"Then you called him forty different names as fast as you could speak.

"Then you threatened to knock his blamed head off and to break every bone in his blasted body.

What the Deacon Told the Calf.

"Then you said that any infernal calf that didn't know better than to come frolicking around and bat a man in the stomach with his —— head ought to be murdered on the spot, and blast your eyes you were the one to do it! You said that, Samuel—you said every word of it.

"And then, not even looking around or caring who heard or saw, you picked up a club and basted and swatted and pounded that poor calf all over the lot, and every time you swatted him you shouted out something. That something made Mrs. Johnson faint away again, and when she came to you were gone and the calf was looking so homesick that she never expected it to live. Oh, deacon, are you going to stick it out like Captain Kidd did or are you—you"—

The deacon read from the geography that the soil carried down by the Missouri river every year was equal to that of the state of Rhode Island and then closed the book and rose up and returned to where the hinge awaited him. During the next hour he found himself whistling and singing at intervals, and he had just got the door up when a voice called from the kitchen door again:

"Samuel! Oh, Samuel, supper is all ready, and I have got hot biscuit and honey for you!"

Mrs. Dolby had been drawn back from the grave again. M. QUAD.

HOMES OF THE NAVAJOS.

Study Winter Hogans and Light and Airy Summer "Cottages."

The Navajos are the least gregarious of native American tribes, never congregating in towns and villages and never forming permanent communities. Their homes, called hogans, are more hovels, built of stones or the trunks and limbs of trees, with roundel roofs thickly covered with earth. A smoke vent in the roof and a doorway in the side are the only means of ventilation. In cold weather these cavelike structures are kept tightly closed, so that no one but an Indian could live in them at all.

But when springtime comes the Navajo squaw constructs a summer cottage, sometimes consisting of no more than a windbreak of sagebrush around a circular clear space. Sometimes the summer hogan is a shady bower under a desert cedar tree, with leafy branches piled around as a measure of protection against winds and sandstorms. Sometimes it is a shelter formed by the utilization of old pieces of canvas, sheet iron and other cast away material picked up around the refuse dumps of the railroad towns. In any event, the dwellers in the summer hogans are practically in the open all the time. Fresh air is never for a moment excluded.—Christian Herald.

Birds in Winter.

Though birds have a much higher temperature than a man's—man's is 98, while theirs is 107—they suffer cruelly from the winter cold. In a mutton country it is not uncommon to find sheep with dead birds fastened on their backs. The little, cold creatures snuggle in the sheep's wool to get warm, their feet become entangled in the fleece, and they starve to death.

The Typewriter Girl.

See the busy typist girl
As she pounds the keys,
Printing other people's thoughts
With apparent ease.
Sometimes printing other things
Because of lack of care,
And thus producing in her boss
A strong impulse to swear.
See her with her guileless face,
Making her excuses:
"I had it in my notes, you see."
The boss. "Oh, what's the use?"

The Best Treatment For Constipation

The Experience of One Who Knows and Places Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills First

It is not difficult to secure a medicine that will effect movement of the bowels. To cure Constipation and the complications which arise from it is another matter.

Constipation of the bowels is usually preceded by torpid action of the liver. Hence it follows that if Constipation is to be cured the liver must be set right. And here lies the secret of the success of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. They awaken the action of the liver and insure a good flow of bile, which is nature's cathartic. The liver, kidneys and bowels are invigorated and regulated, and the troubles with the digestive system disappear.

Mr. H. M. Bell, Innisfail, Alta., writes: "For some considerable time I have been using Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, which I have obtained through your firm. I suppose during my life I have used nearly all the best-known pills, as I have been subject to Constipation and Biliousness. A friend recommended Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, and I can honestly say that of all the pills I have tried nothing has suited me better—no griping—action always insured, and fine for the kidneys. This is how I have found them after a thorough test, and you may use this statement if you like."

This letter should convince you of the merits of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, but there is nothing like personal experience. If you do not feel like risking 25 cents for a box, write to us for a free sample box, mentioning where you saw this advertisement. Put this medicine to the test when you have indigestion, constipation, biliousness, backache or kidney derangements. The results will soon prove to you the superiority of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. One pill a dose, 25 cents a box; all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto.

EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

LADY'S FOUR GORE SKIRT.

By Anabel Worthington.

The illustration shows one of the favorite designs for a plain walking skirt. It is one which is as becoming to the stout figure as to the slender one, and it is therefore to be had in the larger sizes of the pattern.

Both gores are shaped so as to be considerably wider at the lower edge than at the top, and this gives a neat fit around the body. The front has an overlapping extension which may be used on one side and cut off from the other or removed from both. The bias line which it forms breaks the extreme plainness of the skirt, and with stylish buttons and loops of silk or cord makes a pretty trimming.

The height of the waistline must be determined according to what the figure looks best in. The same is true of the lower edge, which can be made to show the entire shoe, or only the foot. A skirt less than three inches from the ground looks actually antiquated to day.

Whatever materials are used for suits serve also for these skirts, and these include many attractive checks and stripes in tailor fabrics and also a number of novelty weaves, poplin, gabardine, whipcord, Venetian and the like in plain colors.

The skirt pattern, No. 7,324, is cut in sizes 22 to 34 inches waist measure. Medium size requires 2¼ yards of 54 inch material without a nap.

This pattern can be obtained by sending 10 cents to the office of this paper.

When ordering remember to give your name and address as well as the number and size of pattern required, and age of a child.

Price 15 cents, or 2 for 25c.

Address—The Examiner Pattern Service, The Examiner, Peterborough.

JAPAN WOULD EXERT HER WHOLE STRENGTH

How War Looks to Nipponese Poet and War Correspondent—All Depend Upon England

Gonnoski Komai, the Japanese poet and author, writes: I do not know that any of you in Canada fully realize what a keen interest we easterners are now taking in the great European struggle. We had foreseen the crisis in Europe long ago. Personally, I watch every move of the campaign on the eastern front with ten times the interest which I felt in the famous Russo-Japanese War, when I was one of the correspondents with the Manchurian forces. The first year was merely the end of the beginning. Our victory in Manchuria, like England's victory at Waterloo, was a "damned near thing," everything, even the Battle of Mukden, was decided in the last five minutes, and so, I expect, will be the great struggle in Europe. To me it is like the contest of wrestlers we have here in Japan. Germany is the strong, big man who has momentarily foiled his enemy; but, like these contests, there are no rounds or pauses, and for this reason, it may be doubtful whether Germany has the reserve strength to keep the initial mastery or whether, like a strong, rash wrestler, she has expended all her forces on the first onslaught.

Can Trust Britain

One thing, however, is certain in my mind, and that everything is upon the shoulders of England. England alone has the necessary qualities, too, upon which the world can depend in the great struggle. Happily England has the money, the men, and the manufacturing centres, and in addition she controls the sea. But, what is far more important, to my mind, she has the bull-doggedness which alone can bring the struggle to a successful issue, and the spirit of liberty which guarantees that such successes will be honorably used. None of these can Germany take or give.

The task, however, is not going to be an easy one; we know the Germans far better than Canadians do, for, remember, we owe nearly all our military strength and organization to Germany; but though we "hired" them as our tutors we never trusted them as "friends," and not a few of us strongly suspected that the whole of the Manchurian campaign was instigated by them against us. England, on the other hand, we always trusted. We had the first experience of modern warfares, so to speak, and we realize all it means. We had to advance in Manchuria inch by inch, and take trench by trench, and for this reason we in Japan anticipate a long war—a very long war, in fact—tedious, dull and uninteresting.

Japan's Great Work Done

We in Japan are ready—the people are enthusiastic to a man—we have already fulfilled more than our share by driving Germany from the east forever—and China will live to thank us. But we are willing to help in the west as well, if it comes to a pinch. In England they talk a lot of conscription as if they were afraid of it, or as if it were something ignoble or shameful. Well, I wonder whether the English realize that we in Japan are ready to place our whole national army at their service, if once our rulers but give the word of command, and go and fight the great battle of civilization on the battlefields of Europe, to fulfill the spirit of our alliance to England. Would England do the same by us, I wonder? Yet in this crisis everything depends on England and the whole world's future as well.

FIGHT FOR FREEDOM.

(By F. Fry, 471 Albert street.)

From English shores comes tales of pain;
From France, sad tales of slaughter;
From Russia, alas, we receive no comfort,
And murders on the waters.

What can be done to stop those things?
What should I do to help them?
The fight for liberty is on,
This slaughter's now for freedom.

Father, husband, brother, son,
Go—their country calls them;
Others stay at home and work
For those who have and need 'em.

Ought we not to kneel and pray
First, to our Heavenly Father,
To ask His guidance in the war,
And bring us peace hereafter?

Alas, I feel the secret is,
Lack of prayer to Our Redeemer.
We have trusted too much in our strength,
And been led by the deceiver.

Now, we'll pray to Him who rules the waves,
Who can save the sailor, soldier, sinner;
And when this war is to its close,
The Allies will be winners.

For God is on our side we know,
And while he's there we are certain
That victory is ours, at last.
So, we'll not pull down the curtain—(flag).

But stand and face the foe till death,
Whatever be our service;
The Lord He faced the Cross for us,
So, lads, don't you be nervous.

The victory's ours, so cheer up men;
Trust God and do what's right;
If you live you gain, if you die you win—
Britons never shall be slaves.

TRENCHES BEAT PANAMA

Staggering Statistics of Digging on West Front

A statistician has figured that the French soldiers in building their many lines of trenches have excavated twice as much dirt as was taken from the Panama Canal. This dirt would cover the Great Sahara Desert to a depth or two and a half feet and convert this barren region, with the necessary water, into one immense garden. These figures are supplied by an officer who spent many dull hours in a front line trench on the necessary computation.

Germans and allies have both dug rows of sets of trenches for full five hundred miles from Switzerland to the sea. In each set of trenches are perhaps eight separate individual ditches, while between the sets are stretches of barb wire said often to be a mile in width. The trenches are about six feet deep. Besides these parallel lines there are an enormous number of cross, or "communicating" trenches, besides bomb-proof shelters, and big underground caves used for many purposes—as dining rooms, first aid dressing stations for the wounded and sleeping places.

All this digging has been done by the labor of pick and spade. When it is remembered that large steam shovels were used on the Panama Canal, the vastness of the work here is understood. Much of this earth has been put in bags about the size of the ordinary flour sack and used as parapets for the trenches. It is figured by this same statistician that if all the earth thus dug were put in such receptacles 936,000,000,000 sacks would be needed. Of course, no such number of sacks has been used.

In Roubaix the German invaders started the French factories making such trench bags. The patriotic women and children refused to work on the bags. The general in command as a result arrested the Mayor and more than a hundred leading manufacturers and sent them to a concentration camp in inner Germany. By international law no enemy has a right to force a captive population to fight or work against their country.

The earth thrown from the trenches would form a parapet five feet high long enough to enclose the whole French frontier of the north and east and leave enough over to close Italy and encircle the republic of San Marino. If thrown into the Dardanelles, the dirt would fill them up.

When your vegetables become wilted and stale before you have an opportunity to use them place them for an hour or so in a gallon of water to which a teaspoonful of soda has been added. They will then be just as crisp and fresh as when gathered from the garden.

Here is a delightful summer dish. Stew enough rhubarb until you have a pint and a half of juice, then strain the juice off, put into a pan and add a teacupful of small sago and boil with the rhubarb juice instead of milk or water. Then pour this into a mould to set, and when cold turn out and serve with a custard sauce. This makes a pretty summer dish, and nice and cool. For custard take two teacupfuls of milk, one dessertspoonful of sugar and one egg. Heat milk and switch up egg and sugar, then stir in egg until it comes to boiling point, and let it cool, then pour it round the mould.

TO DARKEN HAIR APPLY SAGE TEA

Look Young! Bring Back its Natural Color, Gloss, and Thickness.

Common garden sage brewed into a heavy tea with sulphur and alcohol added will turn gray streaked and faded hair beautifully dark and lustrous, remove every bit of dandruff, stop scalp itching and falling hair. Just a few applications will prove a revelation if your hair is fading, gray or dry, scraggly and thin. Mixing the Sage Tea and Sulphur recipe at home though, is troublesome. An easier way is to get the ready-to-use bottled product about 50 cents a large bottle at druggists, known as "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," thus avoiding a lot of muss.

While wispy, gray faded hair is not entitled we all desire to retain our youthful appearance and attractiveness. By darkening your hair with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur, no one can tell, because it does it so naturally, so evenly. You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning all gray hairs have disappeared, and, after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully dark, glossy, soft and luxuriant.

BANK CASHIER CONFESSES BANDIT STORY IS HOAX

FORT WORTH, Texas, Oct 7—Found locked in a bank vault and telling a story of an attack by two robbers which netted them $8,312, J. T. Adams, cashier of the State bank of Keller, early to-day confessed, according to County Attorney Spoontz and Chief of detectives Montgomery, that he himself had appropriated the cash missing from the vault. About $4,700 of the money was recovered. Adams is held in jail under bond of $2,000 on a charge of embezzlement.

TRY THIS IF YOU HAVE DANDRUFF

There is one sure way that never fails to remove dandruff completely and that is to dissolve it. This destroys it entirely. To do this, just get about four ounces of plain, ordinary, liquid arvon; apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

By morning, most if not all, of your dandruff will be gone, and three or four more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it, no matter how much dandruff you may have.

You will find, too, that all itching and digging of the scalp will stop instantly, and your hair will be fluffy, lustrous, glossy, silky and soft, and look and feel a hundred times better.

You can get liquid arvon at any drug store. It is inexpensive, and four ounces is all you will need. This simple remedy has never been known to fail.

QUICK UNDERTAKING THERE.

Before the Belfast magistrate Margaret Hoey sued A. Andrews, agent for the Salvation Army Assurance Society, Limited, for $24, balance on an insurance policy on the life of her daughter.

Shortly after the death of her daughter, Mrs. Hoey said she received $15 and when she asked the defendant for the balance, he placed the money on the counter but kept his hand on it until he had obtained a receipt, and then pushed the money over to the undertaker's representative. The magistrate said the money should have been paid to the plaintiff, and gave her a verdict for the amount claimed.

URIC ACID SUFFERING.

Uric acid is an accumulation of poison which finds lodgment in the system when the kidneys fail to remove it from the blood. In the kidneys and bladder it formed stones, in the joints and muscles it causes rheumatism. In any case the pain and suffering is almost beyond human endurance. Uric acid is promptly removed from the system when the kidneys are kept healthy and active by using Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills.

BULGARIA'S DECLARATION OF WAR ONLY MATTER OF HOURS

Bulgarian Government Issues a Manifesto to the Nation Announcing its Decision to Enter the War on the Side of the Central Powers---Bulgaria Would Commit Suicide if She Did Not Align Herself With Germany and Her Allies

BULGARIAN MINISTER GETS PASSPORTS

BERLIN, Oct. 8.—The Frankfurter Zeitung asserts that the Bulgarian Government has issued a manifesto to the nation announcing its decision to enter the war on the side of the Central Powers. This manifesto states that Bulgaria would commit suicide if she did not align herself with Germany and her allies. The Bulgarian aviators again bombarded Nish to-day. The manifesto as given out by the News Agency says: "The Central Powers have promised us parts of Serbia creating an Austro-Bulgarian border line which is absolutely necessary for Bulgaria's independence of the Serbians. We do not believe in the promises of the Quadruple Entente. Italy, one of the allies, treacherously broke her treaty of thirty-three years. We believe in Germany which is fighting the whole world to fulfill her treaty with Austria. Bulgaria must fight at the victors' side. The Germans and Austro-Hungarians are victorious on all fronts. Russia soon will have collapsed entirely. Then will come the turn of France, Italy and Serbia."

ATHENS, Oct. 8.—King Constantine to-day declared he intends no conflict with any belligerent. The Greece-Serbian treaty of 1913, he said, does not oblige Greece to aid Serbia under present circumstances.

NISH, Serbia, Oct. 8.—The Bulgarian Minister received his passports to-day. The declaration of war was deemed a matter of hours.

OTTAWA, Oct. 8.—Orders are being sent out to officers in charge of registration and internment of alien enemies throughout the Dominion to prepare to place Bulgarians under terms of regulations of an enemy nation. There are upwards of 35,000 Bulgarians in the Dominion, mostly labourers.

PARIS, Oct. 8.—Heavy cannonading raged throughout the night about Souchez and Hill No. 140 in La Folie in the Artois district, the official communication here announced to-day.

German cannon were reported very active near Roye, on the Aisne, toward Tracy Le Val and at St. Mard Forest.

The Germans bombarded heavily and got a hot response between the St. Hilaire-St. Souplet and Souain, Somme-Pyour roads in the Champagne region.

A sharp trench battle raged southeast of Tahure. Otherwise, said the announcement, the night was rather quiet.

ATHENS, Oct. 8.—The Greek Government decided to-day to declare Greece's attitude one of benevolent neutrality towards the British Allies.

PARIS, Oct. 8.—Desperate resistance to the Austro-German drives into Serbia across the Danube, Save and Drina rivers was reported to-day in despatches from Nish and Rome.

Nish claimed the Save invasion has been repulsed.

The Bulgarians were described as already active in Southern Servia.

The accounts of Russian naval attack on the Bulgarian Black Sea port forts to assume the ocensive have all failed.

of Varna, also unofficial, were believed true.

The French maintained their Champagne aggressive. The German efforts to assume the offensive have all failed.

THE SITUATION SUMMARIZED.

PARIS, Oct. 8.—The Balkan campaign was expanding to-day. Terrific artillery fighting continued in the Artois and Champagne regions of France. From the Russian front and the Dardanelles little fresh news came. The Germans were pressing the Czar's forces hard. Against the Turks the Allies were making some little progress. Besides giving its reasons for aligning Bulgaria with Germany and Austria, the Sofia Government made public its rejection of Russia's ultimatum. It denied that Bulgaria had employed Teutonic officers, but maintained the right to employ them or any other it chose. It was also asserted the Bulgarians might borrow from whom they chose, and make any political affiliations they wished. The message was deemed intentionally insolent.

ATHENS, Oct. 8.—The new Grecian Government to-day officially announced there was no foundation for rumours that it would protest against the landing of the Allied troops in Greece going to Serbia.

BERLIN, Oct. 8.—The War Office claims the Teutonic invasion of Serbia is proceeding favourably. Progress in crossing the Drina, Save and Danube rivers by the German and Austrian armies under Field Marshal Von Mackensen is being reported by the German army headquarters.

The capture is announced of three hundred men and thre cannon opposite Rame in Serbia, on the Danube River, about 40 miles east of Belgrade.

UNDINE, Italy, Oct. 7.— It is reported that Lieut.-General Count Cadorna, chief of the Italian general staff, is strongly opposed to the participation of Italy in an expedition in the Dardanelles or Salonica, he maintaing that it would be a mistake to divide the military and naval forces of the country while the campaign in Isonzo, which has a national character, is still unsettled.

As a result, General Cadorna has sent General Perro, under-chief of the general staff, to Rome to explain verbally General Cadorna's opinion to the Premier and the Ministers.

The Cabinet, however, considers that Italy must further extend her participation in the war. Two projects to assist Serbia have been studied. One consisted of landing troops at Durazzo, from which point they could reach Serbia across Albania. This was abandoned because the expedition would need to traverse a hundred miles over an almost impassable road.

The other project—to reach Serbia from Aviona—is considered more practicable owing to the splendid ancient Roman roads from Avlona to Lake Ochrida.

CANADA'S FINANCES.

OTTAWA, Ont., Oct. 8.— Canada's net debt at the end of September last totalled 486 millions, an increase as compared with the debt a year ago, of 141 millions. During the month of September alone the net debt increased by 12 millions. The revenue from all sources for the month of September totalled 13 millions as against 9 millions for September, 1914, or an increase of 3 millions, mostly in customs duties.

The total revenue for the first six months of the fiscal year ended September 30 was 73 millions as compared with 70 millions for the same time last year. September contributed the whole increase.

The ordinary or consolidated expenditure for the month totalled 7 1-2 millions, compared with nearly 12 millions, a decrease of over 5 1-2 millions. The total decrease for the first six months is a little over 9 million dollars.

The expenditure for war during the month of September was 14 millions and for the first six months of the fiscal year it was 44 millions.

The statement for the month is most satisfactory, which has been published since the war commenced.

HIS STARTLING ADVENTURE.

Back from a day in Lunnon" with the missus the old man was relating his startling adventures to a group of admiring cronies, while his wife stood by to corroborate all that he said. "An' then we went round a gurt big shop," narrated the old man, "an' we went up in one o' them there things that whizzes ye right up to the top. What did they call it, mother?" "A shop lifter, Josiah," prompted the old lady, with a proud air of knowledge

THE PROGRAMME FOR TO-NIGHT'S BIG CONCERT

The Peterborough Battalion will march to Brock St. Rink at 7.30 o'clock this evening for the big patriotic concert at which the drums and cymbals subscribed for by the officers and men of the Battalion will be presented to the band by Lt.-Col. Johnston.

A most enjoyable programme has been arranged for the occasion, and the citizens generally are invited to participate. There is no admission fee. There will be plenty of seats, and ladies will be given the preference in this regard.

The drums arrived this morning, and are "beauties," as one bandsman described them. The set consists of a bass drum and two deep kettle drums, all bearing a crest with the Royal Coats of Arms. In addition the subscriptions of the officers and men made possible the purchase of cymbals and music stands, which will be presented to-night.

In addition to addresses, the following programme will be given:

March—Selected, Peterborough Battalion Band.

Recitation—"What Will You Do?" Master Percy Luther ("the little recruiting sergeant").

Overture—"Lutspeil." Peterborough Battalion Band

MORE EQUIPMENT HAS ARRIVED FOR LOCAL BATTALION

Consignment of Uniforms, Great Coats, Etc. Received This Morning Affording an Opportunity of Fitting Out the New Recruits---Yesterday's Concert Was a Great Success-- To-Day's Military News

The Peterborough Battalion received another consignment of supplies from Kingston this morning. The shipment included a further supply of tunics, trousers, boots, socks, puttees, shirts, underwear, etc., so that the recruits who have been drilling in mufti this week will be fitted out as far as possible. There was also a supply of great coats, the first received by the local battalion. These will be issued first to the band, physical drill squads, and the non-commissioned officers.

Capt. Carew of Lindsay, Paymaster of the 80th Battalion, paid an official visit to the Armouries this morning.

The local Battalion is varying the drill routine by a route march this afternoon.

The Band of the Peterborough Battalion wish to express their hearty thanks to Dr. Robinson, proprietor of the Empire Theatre, for his kindness in turning over the theatre, its staff and moving pictures yesterday to the Band, as a result of which the sum of $45.10, which will be devoted to buying music for the band, was raised.

Ottawa, Oct. 7.—General Sir Sam Hughes, Minister of Militia, announced to-night important changes and promotions in the Canadian forces at the front.

Lord Brooke, who was lately placed in command of the first brigade of the first division, will go to the corps troops under Gen. Mercer and will be second in command. The corps brigade is composed of the 42nd, the 48th, the Royal Canadian Regiment, the cavalry brigade under Col. Smart, and the Princess Patricias, which regiment has now been attached to the Canadian division.

Col. Rennie of Toronto, who has been in command of one of the Ontario regiments in the first division, will be promoted to be brigadier-general and will likely succeed Lord Brooke. Col. Loomis, of the 13th Highland battalion, Montreal, also is in line for promotion and will likely shortly be made brigadier-general.

Dr. Robertson, proprietor of the Empire Theatre, turned his theatre over to the Peterborough Battalion yesterday afternoon and the proceeds amounted to $45.10, which will be devoted to buying music for the band. The matinee, which was attended by most of the members of the Battalion, as well as by many citizens, was a great success. Two splendid pictures "Wild Fire" and "The Man on the Box," were given. The event gave some of the members of the band an opportunity to show their ability as entertainers. Bandsman Loader contributed a concertina solo in excellent style. Bandsman Hatcher sang "Boys of the King" very effectively, and a quartette consisting of Bandsmen French, Badley, Hatcher and R. Dyer were heard to advantage in "We'll Never Let the Old Flag Fall." The Overseas Band played several numbers in a most enjoyable manner. An orchestra composed of Bandmaster Hughes on the cornet, Sergt. Hartshorn, and Band Corp. Leader on the violin, Bandsman Smith on the cello, and Bandsman W. Dyer on the drum, rendered an attractive programme during the pictures.

Capt. Munro, Sergt. King and Pte. Kitchin of the Peterborough Battalion are on recruiting duty at the Warkworth Fair to-day. They have a tent with them which they will erect on the fair grounds.

Two recruits were added to the ranks of the Peterborough Battalion yesterday, the smallest number of the week. One of these was J. J. Moore of Keene, and the other Bandsman Victor Dallin, clarionet player in the 57th Regiment Band, who will join the Overseas Band.

The recruiting record for the first four days of the week at the local armouries has been thirty men. Of these twenty-two were born in Canada. The great majority are single men. Eighteen are residents of Peterborough and the remainder from the surrounding district.

420 men have enlisted in Peterborough since the first of August. The number includes over fifty bandsmen, which must come pretty close to a record.

The band and physical drill squad of the Peterborough Battalion will visit the Norwood Fair on Wednesday next.

Corp. J. P. Clarke is in charge of to-day's guard at the Armouries.

COUNCIL VOTE $500 FOR RED CROSS WORK

PTE. ERNEST MESLEY.
Peterborough Boy, who was wounded at St. Julien, and who will be home either to-morrow or Sunday, having received his discharge on account of his injuries.

PTE. E. MESLEY WILL BE HOME IN A DAY OR TWO

Peterboro Boy Wounded at St. Julien Has Been Invalided Back to Canada and is Now in Ottawa on His Way Home

SHOULD BE RECEPTION

Another Peterborough boy, a victim of the European war, is due to arrive home in Peterborough in a day or two, in all probability, to-morrow afternoon or Sunday morning. Mr. W. H. Mesley, 22 Dalhousie Street, has received word from his son, Pte. Ernest Mesley of the 57th detachment, 2nd Battalion, that he had arrived in Ottawa to go before a medical board in regard to a pension and that he would be home at the end of the week. Mr. Mesley is endeavouring to get definite information as to the hour of his son's arrival.

Pte. Mesley will be the first Peterborough boy who followed Major Bennett in that glorious charge in the early dawn at St. Julien, last April, to return home. He was shot in the leg in that engagement and has since been in hospital in Ireland and England. He has been discharged as unfit for further service.

Pte. Mesley was a well known member of the Peterborough detachment. He had been a member of the 57th Regiment for some time before the war broke out, and was a Sergeant in No. 2 Company, commanded by Capt. R. P. Watt, now of the Peterborough Overseas Battalion.

He should be accorded a glorious reception as he is the first member of Major Bennett's Company to return from the front.

Church Is Being Decorated

Sunday being Thanksgiving Sunday the St. Paul's choir is decorating the church with fruit, flowers, vegetables etc., and they hope that all their friends will remember to send their gifts as early as possible on Saturday morning to the church.

On Sunday evening, the service will take the form of a praise service, for which an attractive programme of anthems, duets and solos has been prepared.

ANNUAL MEETING

The annual meeting of the directors of the Peterborough Protestant Home will be held in the Board room of the Home on Tuesday afternoon, October 12th, at four-thirty o'clock. Public is cordially invited.

City's "Mite" Will be Added to the One Million Dollar Fund that is Being Raised For the British Red Cross Society

COUNCIL MEETING

At a special meeting of the City Council which was held last evening, the sum of five hundred dollars was voted towards the one million dollar fund that is being raised in Ontario for the British Red Cross Society and the French Order of St. John. This amount was recommended in a report that emanated from the Finance committee which met in the afternoon under the chairmanship of Alderman Stratton. The finance minister and his colleagues made a microscopic examination of the city's finances and after due deliberation decided to recommend the aforesaid mentioned amount. The post mortem incidentally brought out the fact that the city has an overdraft of about two hundred dollars.

Deputation Present.

Representatives from the Speakers' Patriotic League, the Women's Council and the local Red Cross Society were present at the Council meeting as Mr. J. H. Burnham intimated, "to strengthen the hands of the civic legislators." He was the first speaker. Among other things, Mr. Burnham said that this was the first occasion that the Motherland had appealed to her Dominions overseas for assistance in connection with Red Cross work. He regarded it as a very worthy object and concluded by urging the Council to be as liberal as possible.

Mr. D. O'Connell followed the Federal member. He thoroughly endorsed the appeal of the Motherland which had been made through Lord Lansdowne, who at one time was Governor General of Canada. The British Empire was confronted with an unprecedented crisis and Peterborough in common with the whole of the Empire would have to be prepared to make a great many sacrifices if this conflict was to be brought to a successful termination for the Allies.

His Honour Judge Huycke said there was one thing to be considered and that was the requirements of this terrible war, and the privileges we enjoy as British citizens. "The duty and responsibility is yours," continued the speaker. You are aware of the gravity of the situation and the nature of the appeal that has been sent broadcast throughout the British Empire. I am confident that the people of Ontario will rise to the occasion and equally confident that Peterborough will not fall behind in that respect."

A Demonstration Organization.

Mr. J. C. Davidson, representing the Canadian Red Cross Society, voiced that organization's endorsation of the proposal.

"We ask you from very full hearts to assist in this work," said Mrs. John Allan. "It is a noble organization and one of the most democratic in the world."

Mrs. (Dr.) Neal spoke a few words on behalf of the Women's Council.

Ald. Stratton asked the Red Cross Society's representatives if they would assume responsibility for the street collection to be made on October the twenty-first. The ladies signified their willingness to co-operate, but were of the opinion that the Council should assume a share of the work.

Mr. B. F. Ackerman suggested that the Council raise the grant to one thousand dollars. To this Ald. Stratton replied that the matter had been given very careful consideration and it was agreed that five hundred dollars was the most that the city could afford to give at the present time. It was proposed to create a special fund to deal with similar appeals that might arise in the future.

Mr. Burnham was of the opinion that arrangements for creating a special fund should be made right away and not postponed "because the day had not arrived."

After some further discussion the deputation filed out, leaving the matter in the hands of the Council, who decided to adopt the report brought in by the Finance committee. The vote was unanimous.

Mr. Worth, of the Bonner-Worth Company, made a mathematical computation of what this city's share should be of the one million dollar fund, based on the population of Ontario, which he estimated at two million and a half people. This works out at the rate of forty cents per head, which means that Peterborough's share would amount to about eight thousand dollars. Mr. Worth pointed out that a grant of five hundred dollars represented only one sixteenth part of what the city ought to subscribe.

PATRIOTISM AND PROFIT.

This war with all its horrors — its national and personal sacrifice — has done some good in Canada. It has created a new national conscience. It is doubtful if the recent popular condemnation of political corruption in Manitoba would have resulted, but for the awakening of the popular conscience and the popular loathing of crookedness and evil ways put into the hearts of the people by the actions of the German militarists. There has been created by the war and the monstrous methods of militarism a new patriotism; a new viewpoint of patriotic responsibility has been set up.

We, as a people and as individuals, willingly lend ourselves to sacrifices, we would not have thought we could make a few months ago. We offer our lives, we offer our sons and husbands, we offer our means; we pinch and spare that we may help the great cause of the Empire and country, and of humanity.

Both government and people see the necessity and gladly take or submit to the measures necessary to successfully wage the battle of right against wrong. Our governments impose taxes, for war, and the purposes of relieving the hurts of war. We pay them, without complaint, because our sense of patriotism compels us. The governments do everything almost, but the one thing needful. They impose a strict censorship to suppress news that may give advantage to the enemy, and thus indirectly weaken our powers of assault upon the enemy. Our governments and people are willing to do anything; submit to anything that will avert the weakening of our strength and the efficiency of our soldiers—except one thing.

One of the most destructive forces in the weakening of the efficiency, lessening the physical fitness and morale of our soldiers, is strong drink. The Ontario Government does not hesitate to impose direct taxation for patriotic purposes. It is a grievous burden, but the people see its necessity and gladly submit to it. But the government is hesitating, halting, even under the spur of public opinion, about such a half measure as closing the bars at 7 o'clock. Why should there be a moment's hesitation? Strong drink is directly and indirectly responsible for hindering recruiting. The government puts away, banishes or neutralizes, as far as governmental action avails, everything that hinders our most efficient prosecution of war work, except deal with strong hand with the worst hindrance of all, strong drink.

The government is now considering the pitiful half measure of closing the bars at 7 o'clock; and even in this the members of the cabinet are divided, while the welfare of the country; while the efficiency and morale of both the enlisted and the prospectively enlisted soldier are at stake. The military authorities demand that strong restrictions should be placed upon the supply of strong drink. The only reason why the demand is unheeded, or rather not promptly met, seems to be the restriction of profit of the only beneficiaries of the traffic. The people of the country, the people who produce, who benefit the country by their business and their labour, gladly suffer pecuniary disadvantage and incidental loss of profit, for patriotic reasons; yet the beneficiaries of a traffic whose fruits are only evil and that continually, which produces nothing but evil, which has no economic or moral locus standi, are to be the objects of careful governmental consideration, and tender solicitude.

We have, all of us others, to make sacrifices to help carry on the war, why then, should any class or interest be exempted, by specific act of government favour? We others, who better the country by our traffic and trading, our sowing and reaping, our labouring and toiling, have to make, and willingly make sacrifices; submit to money payments that virtually lessen the profits of our beneficent and productive industry for the sake of helping on the war; yet there is hesitation over a measure that may lessen the profits, or diminish the spoil of the spoilers.

Now, if at any time, in the time for the government to act, if it wishes to give beneficent administration of its trust. Now, if at any time, with the public conscience, aroused as it never was before to hostility against evil, and crookedness, and wrong; now, if at any time, will it strengthen public opinion to support government or other action, that promises to remove or diminish the evil to the state, to society, to the individual, to the soldier in khaki, that access to strong drink creates. We hang the spy, the enemy within the gates, who only problematically helps the enemy, who only problematically impairs our war measures and weakens our offensive. Why should we give quarter to the enemy within the gates, which positively, not problematically, helps the enemy by weakening the power of the people and demoralizing the soldier under arms? Shall pay on the one side and profit on the other be contrasting considerations in our patriotism?

FOLLOW BRITISH PRECEDENT

Can Sir Robert Borden find amongst his followers or among the people of Canada one single patriotic Canadian who does not recognize the evil of a war-time election? Then why can he not settle the question by a specific declaration that there will be no election while the war lasts? The Toronto News, which is hard to convert from the heresy of a war-time election, says:

> As the Imperial Parliament, like the Canadian Parliament, approaches the end of its days, The London Daily Chronicle urges that a general election must be averted while the war lasts. Speaking as the leading Liberal newspaper of London, The Chronicle says: "There must either be a dissolution or Parliament must pass a special Act amending the Parliament Act for war purposes. The latter is the obvious course to take."

We are loyal to British precedent; and if the Imperial Parliament amends the Parliament Act "for war purposes," why not at the same time provide legislation that would give the Parliament of Canada power to prolong the life of the present parliament from session to session, subject to the cessation of the war? If Sir Robert Borden will perform the obvious duty of declaring that there will be no election while the war lasts, he will have the help of the Liberal party to provide for a parliamentary modus vivendi during the currency of the war and immediately after.

A GERMAN DEFEAT.

Germany did not rush to war in August, 1914, in the expectations that Germany would need the help of Bulgaria in September, 1915. Germany designed a short and victorious war. The failure of that design is defeat for Germany. The prolongation of the war is defeat for Germany. Germany's doom is written in Germany's present need of Bulgaria's help.—Quebec Telegraph.

REVENTLOW'S COLOSSAL "SASS."

Count von Reventlow says that by failing to order the people of London to abandon the city on account of the Zeppelin raids, the British Government is showing "disdainful disregard of the principles of humanity, civilization and international law." Where does the Count think the British Government should order the people of London to go? The Zeppelins drop bombs indiscriminately in all parts of the country and if the people should try to leave the island they would be liable to be blown up by submarines.—Buffalo Express.

GERMANY'S REAL MALADY

What Germany is suffering from, and what her philosophers and statesmen are suffering from, is that most distressing of all maladies—the be in the soul. They believe themselves to be as immaculate, noble and magnanimous as they are powerful, disciplined and laborious. Not a doubt of it. But other nations know that the Germanic idea has been corrupted through and through by their worship of Brute Force, and they know Germany, by bitter experience, to be utterly without moral scruple. "Not on such terms can peace be concluded," is Sir Edward Grey's final word of stinging comment. The Allies and the rest of the world do not want to be Germanized. They want to be free.—London Daily Telegraph.

A TELEPHONE TROUBLE

Users of telephones and operators are continually bothered by the similarity of "five" to "nine". The long "i" being a strong, distinctive sound, is heard, while the consonants which are supposed to distinguish five from nine are apt to be confused. We have heard that in the United States they have tried the experiment of substituting "niner" for "nine," the two syllables making the necessary distinction between nine and five.

The vowel sound seems to govern, and yet we hear of no confusion between "four" and "o". It is reasonable to suppose, therefore, that if the letter "x" were substituted for nine, there would be no danger of confusion between "x" and seven, although the dominating vowel is the same. There would be a difference in the consonants, and also in the number of syllables.—Toronto Star.

GERMANY'S DREAD FINANCIAL SPECTRE.

Some time since we quoted the opinion of a neutral who knew Germany intimately and had recently been in Berlin. "Keep your teeth in," he said, "we don't worry. If Germany has to pay only her own share of the war bill she is beaten, and her own people will carry out the settlement with the war-makers." These words come back to us as we read the speech of the German Financial Minister, Dr. Helfferich, in the Reichstag. The estimate of war needs, he says, is still exceeded by the real war expenditure, and the expenditure in one month is higher by one-third than the total expenditure of the war of 1870. During the War Germany will not—i.e., cannot—"increase the gigantic burden of the people by new taxations." She will borrow the whole and borrow all the way. How, then, is she to get straight and avoid bankruptcy. "Our economic future," says Dr. Helfferich, "must be freed from the gigantic burden of the war. The heavy burden of thousands of millions must be borne through decades by the instigators of the war, but not by us."—Westminster Gazette.

THE ARMENIAN HORRORS.

After a month of investigation, and the amassing of evidence from sources whose veracity and authority are not to be questioned, the American committee on Armenian atrocities finds that the crimes now being perpetrated by the Turks upon the Armenian people surpass for horror and cruelty anything that history has recorded during the past thousand years.

After supplying in chronological order, beginning with April 27, 1915, brief statements reporting the growth of the Turkish movement against the Armenians and outlining the beginnings of the systematic attempt to uproot the Armenians by every conceivable means of torture and outrage the wholesale robbery and expulsion, the report of the committee takes up specific cases of terrible cruelty.

The burden of all these is misery and agony. It is a matter of fact story of untold misery, of disease, starvation, murder, deportation and the most shocking crimes against women—all directed to destroy utterly the Armenian race and banish the Christain religion from Turkish soil. Many portions of the report are absolutely unprintable.

Such shocking outrages as were only occasionally mentioned by Lord Bryce and his colleagues in their report dealing with German atrocities in Belgium occur on practically every page of the report, which deals with the expulsion and ruin of the Armenian people. And all through the terrible story runs the comment: "This is not due to fanaticism or to popular demand, but is purely arbitrary and is directed from Constantinople."

The committee's report is the work of an American body of investigators and is based upon the testimony of Americans, Armenians, Greeks, Italians, even Turks, and of travellers in various stations and ranks. There is no military advantage to be gained and there apparently is no pretence of military necessity. It seems rather to be an expression of the immemorial hatred of the Mohammedan for his Christain neighbor, a desire of the Turk to take advantage of the war between Christain nations to destroy by fire and sword the last Christian in his domain. The report says:

> No Armenian is left to-day in the extensive territory from Samsun to Sert and Diarbekir—the greatest part was slaughtered, another part was kidnapped and a small part was forcibly converted and so no longer can be classed as Armenians.
> The Allies are in no position to help these unfortunate people at the present time; indeed, the well-understood fact that the Armenians, in their anxiety to get rid of the Turkish yoke, are anxious for allied success, has but added to their sufferings. The one hope of relief is that the pressure of American public opinion upon Germany may lead the latter to interfere in behalf of the Armenians, but this is but to lean on a reed. The Turks after all, are only dealing with the Armenians in the same manner that the Germans dealt with the Belgians.—Brantford Expositor.

King Constantine is not a German, but of Danish-Russian stock, his mother being a sister of the Grand Duke Nicholas. His wife, however, is the sister of the Kaiser and has exerted to the full her influence over her husband to prevent any interference with German plans. She ought to know better, for the Kaiser supplied officers to the Turks in 1897 when the Turks badly defeated the Greek army and her august brother wired many congratulations to Constantinople. For years the Queen and her husband, then the Crown Prince, boycotted Berlin on their travels. Constantine is an autocrat, and is lacking tact, but he is not without courage. He was intensely unpopular until four or five years ago, and it was freely predicted that he would never be allowed to reach the throne. But Venizelos secured power, introduced many urgently-needed reforms, recalled Constantine from exile, created the Balkan compact, which doubled the size of Greece in the 1912 war with Turkey, and made a national hero of the disgraced Prince. To-day he is getting his reward in the shape of the basest ingratitude. Venizelos, the man who may be said to have made Constantine, saved the monarchy, and extended the kingdom, is dismissed from office for the second time in a year by the very man whom he exalted. First, his far-sighted policy which would have led to the reconstruction of the Balkan compact, with all the States on the peninsula warring against Germany, was brought to nought; now his move to fulfil Greece's treaty obligations to support Serbia has been blocked.—Toronto Star.

ANCIENT COLONY'S WORK

Splendid Sacrifice and Organization by a Peaceful People

An army administered by a committee of business men and carried free by patriotic railway and transportation companies, an army, moreover, without a single general, colonel or even lieutenant of its own appointing; such is the contribution made in men by the little colony of Newfoundland to the cause of Empire. True the "army" consists of but 2,000 men but considering the size of Newfoundland's population the ratio is a very fair one, to a little over 200,000 inhabitants.

Originally Newfoundland set out to raise but 500 men, so that its contribution of 2,000 goes far beyond its promise to the British War Office. It is probably the most democratic force which ever crossed the Atlantic since it was despatched to England for training without an officer of any kind, their appointing being left to the Imperial authorities. Two sons of W. D. Reid, the railway magnate of the colony, have gone as privates, and so did a stepson of the Premier of Newfoundland, Sir Edward Morris. The contingent was trained in Scotland and is said to have been the only non-Scotch force ever allowed to garrison Edinburgh Castle.

The raising and financing of the contingent was left to a committee of representative business men to whom was turned over the $1,000,000 borrowed from the British treasury for the purpose. They are also administering the patriotic fund of $100,000 which was raised. As the railway companies in Newfoundland carried both the soldiers and their effects free expenses were considerably reduced.

Newfoundland has also contributed many hardy fishermen to the Canadian and British navies and they are said to be of the very best class of seafaring fighters. All this has been done in a country among whose inhabitants not twenty had ever heard a shot fired in action previous to the outbreak of the present conflict. The war has not, according to reports, injured the trade of the colony to any extent. Its fisheries are prospering.

Bulgar Serves The Czar

PARIS, Oct. 8.—Considerable speculation is heard concerning the likely course of General Radko Dimitrieff, who conducted the Russian campaign in Galicia, which resulted in the capture of Lemberg and Przemysl. He is a Bulgarian, and served very successfully in the first Balkan war in command of the Bulgarian forces, which ultimately took Adrianople. He was afterwards appointed Bulgarian Minister at Petrograd, and when the present war broke out offered his services to the Czar in any capacity. For this he was dismissed from the Bulgarian army, and was thereupon made a general in the Russian forces.

He has had an adventurous career, and was one of the party of officers who, in 1886, forced a way into the royal palace at Sofia, compelled Prince Alexander of Battenberg, then reigning prince, to sign a decree of abdication, and then carried him into Russia. Dimitrieff was condemned to death for his part in the affair, but escaped, and became an officer in the Russian army. He returned to Bulgaria when amnesty was granted.

Many Reasons For Gratitude To God Even In Present Times

Inspiring Sermon by Rev. Dyson Hague at All Saints' Harvest Festival Last Night—Thankfulness For the Valor and Fulfilled Potentialities of the Nation

FESTIVE DECORATIONS

"Giving thanks always for all things unto God and the Father in the name of our Lord Jesus Christ."—Ephesians, 5. 20.

Emphasizing the duty of gratitude to God at all times and particularly during periods of trial and stress, Rev. Dyson Hague of Toronto, preaching at All Saints' church last night, specified reasons for thankfulness that are readily observed even in the present difficulties. The congregation was celebrating its annual Harvest Thanksgiving. Golden sheaves of grain blended with the subdued glories of the autumnal tints on foliage and shrubs, which with fruits and products of the field adorned the Chancel. These, Rev. Dyson Hague indicated as objective evidence of the providential blessing which attends man's use of the natural resources God has placed before him. Particularly were they referred to as testimony to God's existence and to His care and thoughtfulness for His children.

Speaking of the world conditions of the period through which we are passing, when sorrow has entered many of our homes and the hearts of some are in terror of collapse, when men's minds are filled with misgivings and only God knows the outcome of the latest tangled complexity in the Balkans, in these times of stress the question is asked, how can we give thanks to God and preserve a cheery and happy heart.

The answer is found in God's word, "Giving thanks always and for all things." Nearly all the psalms that vibrate with the tone of thanksgiving and a melody of joy were written under the cloud of dark days and severely testing times.

As an illustration of this fact, Rev. Mr. Hague quoted from the book of Habakkuk, "Though the fig tree shall not blossom, neither shall fruit be in the vines; the labour of the olive shall fail, and the fields shall yield no meat; the flock shall be cut from the fold and there shall be no herd in the stalls; yet I will rejoice in the Lord, I will joy in the God of my salvation."

It is not in the amount of things we have nor in the amount of blessings we receive that makes us happy, but in the blessings we perceive and value, in the gifts which we recognize as gifts from God.

Cure For Despondency.

Rev. Mr. Hague regarded thanksgiving as a cure for despondency and depression of heart. It showed a recognition of the merciful hand of God employed in our behalf. The exhibition of harvest fruits in the church is a testimony to God, the Creator, and an evidence of His Goodness.

The speaker denounced the materialistic conception idea that was abroad, especially in Germany, where they had politely bowed God out of the universe and would have it believed that fruits of the harvest, for example, arrived through a process of mystic evolution.

"I love to see you come to this temple of religion, this sacred fane and acknowledge His gifts, that He created these things and that every bud and full fruition was the outcome of His care."

Though the shadow of war is over us, Rev. Mr. Hague stated that we should find a reason for thanksgiving in the fact that God has placed us where we are. If ever there was a country unprepared for war it was England, but she went into it with her conscience clear and her hands clean. There were conditions of war for which we should be thankful. War was not the worst condition. Far worse than war was dishonor, slavery, tyranny, to break plighted word, to forget promises of help. One thousand times worse than the scars of valour would be the stains of dishonour. These were references to the fact that even at war we could find reasons for thankfulness. Gratitude should also be expressed for the unity and common faith now binding the people, the determination to see that tyranny should fail, for the valour and steadfastness our soldiers have evinced, thereby ennobling the honour of Canada. If some have gone we thank God yet. Not only should we express our thanks that our country has not failed, but that there has been awakened a deeper religious sense, even for the crisis that has brought the Empire to its knees.

Rev. Canon Davidson and Rev. Mr. White of St. Luke's assisted the pastor, Rev. Mr. Grobb, in the service. The singing of the choir is deserving of special mention.

"Y" BOYS DOWN THE RIVER ON SATURDAY

Bowling Alleys and Billiard Room Being Refurnished—Other Y.M.C.A. Notes

Saturday morning, Oct. 9, the Junior boys will have a trip down the river in the war canoe. A big time is promised the boys on this trip. A fire will be built so as the boys will be able to have hot dinner. Games will be played and a general good time spent. Bring your lunch and your chum.

To-night a group of the "Y" boys will give an exhibition of gymnastic work at the Y.W.C.A. The boys are delighted to cooperate with the young ladies in the work.

The new equipment for the bowling alleys has arrived, also the clothes tables. The bowling alleys and billiard alleys has arrived, also the cloths room will be put in first-class condition right away. The rooms, when finished will be an ideal place for the business men of our city to spend a pleasant hour.

The "Y" boys expect to carry off a number of prizes at the city championships which will be run off at the Riverside Park Thanksgiving Day.

Somewhat Uncertain.

"Our teacher tells us about birds," said a Belmount avenue six-year-old when he came home from school the other afternoon.

"What kind of birds?" her mother asked.

"I think it was the meadow lark."

"What did she tell you about the meadow lark?

"She said the meadowlark flies around in a circle before it alights on its nest."

"Yes, and she said it builds its nest on the ground—or maybe it was a quail."

"Anything else?"

"Oh, yes. She said it had some yellow and black feathers on it. Now I am not sure whether she said quail or bobolink."

"You seem to be trifle uncertain."

"Yes, I don't know very much about the birds yet, but I am sure it was either a quail or a bobolink or a meadowlark—or some other bird."—Youngston Telegram.

GEN. TURNER'S CAREER

Gen. R. E. W. Turner, upon whom was conferred the Order of the Bath, distinguished himself on several occasions during the present war. He won the V.C. and other honors in the Boer War. Gen. Turner was born in the City of Quebec in 1871, being a son of the Hon. Richard Turner, Member of the Legislative Council. The young officer has been a military man all his life, specializing in the cavalry branch, where he soon made a name for himself. In the South African War he was severely wounded, was mentioned in despatches, and won the D.S.O. and the V.C. The latter was given him because of conspicuous bravery at the battle of Komati River, where Turner, although previously wounded, led his men in a charge against the Boers and saved the British guns.

MANY PEERS BEREAVED

Britain's Aristocrats Lose Heirs in Battle—Lord Lincolnshire's Tragedy

One of the saddest cases of bereavement in the British peerage has been that of Lord Lincolnshire, better known under his former name of Lord Carrington. It was not until he had been married for close upon twenty years that his hopes and prayers for a son to inherit his title and estates were finally granted. The son was a singularly attractive and winsome lad, who bore the title of Viscount Wendover. He went to the front early in the war, as a 19-year-old subaltern of the Royal Horse Guards. Shockingly wounded about the head in the battle of Mons, the boy succumbed without recovering consciousness in the base hospital at Boulogne, in the presence of his parents.

Other peers to lose their heirs in battle have been Premier Asquith's brother-in-law, Lord Ribblesdale, whose only remaining son and heir, Charles Lister, was killed in the operations against the Turks on the Peninsula of Gallipoli, and whose eldest boy had given his life for his country some years ago in Somaliland; Lord Yarborough, whose eldest son, Lord Worsley, held a commission in the Royal Horse Guards; the Earl of Aylesford, whose son, Lord Guernsey, fell in action as a Captain of the Warwickshire Regiment, and the Earl of Ranfurly, head of that historic house of Knox which furnished the great reformer to the Church of Scotland in the reign of Mary Queen of Scots. Lord Ranfurly's eldest son bore the title of Viscount Northland.

GERMAN WAS REBUKED

Subtle Retort to Hun Impertinence by Frenchman

Even during the war the Germans are evidently out for business. A manager in charge of the splendid gardens of Hotel du Planet in Haut Savoie received the following circular letter from a Prussian seed merchant:" To my esteemed customers: Because of the war I am unfortunately unable to publish a catalogue and price list for 1915 but I beg to refer to my 1914 catalogue the prices of which remain in force with an extra discount of 10 per cent. I should be grateful for even the smallest order."

The gardener immediately replied: "Mr. A. Sturm, Schneidemuehl, Prussia: The air of France and particularly the air of the Hotel de Planet is like poison gas to German flowers. They all die even if they come via Switzerland. Our own florists, besides, are at least equal to those of Germany but even if they should be unable to provide us with flowers, we still have enough blue-bells, poppies and daisies to compose flower beds and bouquets in our national colors, which are honored and beloved throughout the entire civilized world."

A Good Sam Hughes' Retort

Meeting Major-General Sam Hughes at the Savoy, says an English club man, he told me laughingly, that the most arduous part of his visits to this country and France has always been the facing of the hundred and one interviewers and replying to their questions. "When will the war be over?" asked a journalist. "As soon as we beat the Germans," answered Sam quickly. "There can be no other end."

THE WEST HAS A LOT OF LOW-GRADE WHEAT

WINNIPEG, Man., Oct. 8—Resolutions requesting that the Government take immediate steps to have United States markets opened to Western Canadian wheat were passed by the Manitoba Grain Growers' Association.

The expressed opinion was that one-third of the grain crops in the northern half of Manitoba was materially reduced in value through August frosts, and the cost of production is enormously over last year's.

Frost and wet weather had resulted, it was said, in a large percentage of low grade wheat for which there is a large market in the States, and it is stated Duluth and Minneapolis wheat prices are higher than Winnipeg. The memorandum urges that the duty on wheat going into the States be removed at once, providing a market for no grade and low grade wheat and also opening American channels for transportating wheat to Europe.

RICHARD HALL & SON LIMITED

It Looks Like Early Closing

Chances Four to Two in Favour of License Board Recommendation Being Adopted by Government

TORONTO, Oct. 8. —As the time draws nearer for the Government's decision on the question of the early closing of all hotels in the province, indications are that the Cabinet will back up the recommendation of the Ontario License Board and decree that no house shall be sold after seven o'clock in the evening. Final consideration of the recommendation will soon be given by the Cabinet, but it is safe to say that the chances of the seven o'clock measure coming through Council in its original form are four to two, and it might also be said that this probably represents the way the Cabinet now stands on the question.

There is no doubt regarding the opposition to the early closing rule. The north country is especially against it, if the feelings of the members can be accepted as a guide. One member from the north said: "It would be folly to put such a measure in force. The only time there is anybody on the northern hotels is after seven o'clock at night. Such a cut in the hours would not appeal at all to the people of the north."

The big item now is this same influence from the north. Is it strong enough to have the seven o'clock measure so treated as to make it only apply to the big cities where concentration camps are to be established. The chances of the northern opponents winning are just about two to four. By Saturday night the hotelkeepers of the province will likely know the decision, but unless a surprise jolt is thrown into the Cabinet at the eleventh hour, hotelkeepers throughout Ontario can count on locking the bar doors at seven o'clock each evening.

Middy Is Tried On Charge Of Theft

Alleged He Stole $14 From Comrade at Annapolis

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Oct. 8.—Before a court martial, headed by Commander Christy, a midshipman, whose name has not been announced was put on trial, charged with stealing money from another midshipman. Every effort is being made to keep the matter quiet. After trying to secure the resignation of the midshipman, the officials of his class reported the matter to the academy authorities.

It is alleged that the money was taken during the summer, both midshipmen being detained here during the cruise. Fourteen dollars was taken from the strong box of one midshipman, and it was known that the midshipman now being tried had a key that would open it.

He was charged with the offense, finally paid the amount to the one who lost it. He never admitted taking the money, however, and claims he was coerced into paying the sum.

$16 Rug Sold For $12,000

NEW YORK, Oct. 8.—How new rugs are made to look antique, moth-eaten rugs to look as good as new, and how by the process one polonias rug bought in Paris for $16 was remade and sold in New York for $12,000 and how in another case, an Indian rug was bought for $250 and after repairs was sold for $15,000, were revelations in the rug industry brought out before Supreme Court Justice Goff in a suit by Paul M. Allo, an Oriental rug expert, against Benquial Bros. Fifth avenue rug dealers.

Allo, in his testimony yesterday, contended that in addition to his salary he was to receive a commission on sales, and to show how much his commissions, which he failed to receive would have been, he described how cheap rug materials were made to sell at fabulous sums. He asserted that new rugs were made to appear old through the use of pumice stone which wore down the fabric.

In certain rugs there were 600 nets to a square inch and it took an hour to cover an inch in the aging process, he said. In filling up holes in old rugs he said it was necessary to take the same number of stitches as in the original and then remove traces of the repairs by pumic stone. He said he had prepared cheap rugs for millionaires' homes and his services in enhancing the value of rugs was worth $500 a day.

Runaway Car Hits A Train

NEW YORK, Oct. 8.—A runaway elevated car, travelling at a high rate of speed, ended a wild half-mile dash early to-day by crashing into a crowded Bay Ridge train, injuring upwards of 50 persons. None are thought to be fatally hurt.

The car was being taken out of the yards by a new motorman and it stalled. Getting down from his station the motorman applied a "jumper" and the car lurched and whizzed away. The motorman made a futile attempt to grab the handlebars as it sped away, but failed. The guards on the loaded train saw the runaway, but were unable to avert the crash.

Eight of the injured persons were taken to hospitals. The rest were taken to their homes.

Much Water In Country Retarded Fall Ploughing

So abundant has been the fall rain that the countryside appears almost as if a spring freshet had visited it. In the swamp locations the water is near the high level mark; on the level stretches the ground is saturated to such an extent that a few days ago several fields were almost under water. In fact it was only by stepping on a succession of knolls that one could cross it. And this was no low surface. Farmers stated that even on the hills where drainage should be perfect the water was still held in the surface soil. This was in heavy loam sections. The sandy hill and stretches have irrigated themselves. However, the ground has been so moist that it has interfered with ploughing, has set the season back and unless drying weather is felt a great deal of this work may be thrown over to spring. Reports also state that farmers had to cut their corn with sickles because of the water, and in some fields the buckwheat was floating serenly around on ponds. Some of these examples may be exceptions, but the main fact is that the land has far more water than it requires just now.

Breeders To Demand Pay For Dead Cattle

Ohio State Officials to Decide Condemned Livestock's Value

COLUMBUS, O., Oct. 8.—Decision of a policy of paying for diseased livestock slaughtered by the state authorities faced the board of agriculture to-day.

The problem was considered one of the biggest that has come to the board since its organization several months ago, because scores of livestock breeders and dairymen are prepared to demand that the state pay the actual value for breeding or dairy purposes of animals killed in order of state veterinarians. To do so would cost the state millions of dollars, it was said.

Engine Back-Fires Killing Essex Man

Francis Adams, a Young Man of McGregor Township, Instantly Killed

ESSEX, Oct. 8.—Francis Adams, son of E. L. Adams of McGregor, was instantly killed while helping to start the gasoline engine in an elevator. There was some difficulty in getting the engine started, and when it stopped he put his head between the spokes of one of the drivewheels to tighten a nut. In some manner the engine back-fired, throwing him against the engine cylinder, crushing his skull. The young man was about 23 years of age and one of the most popular men in the vicinity. His mother is prostrated from shock.

Again Confer On Seized Beef Cargoes

WASHINGTON, D. C., Oct. 8.—Counsel for the Chicago packers whose cargoes of meat consigned to neutral countries recently were confiscated by the British prize court conferred with officials to-day at the State Department. Sir Cecil Spring-Rice, the British Ambassador, also called and submitted to the department the officials copy of prize court opinion.

Henry Veeder and Charles J. Faulkner, of Chicago, representing two of the packing houses and speaking for all of them, discussed the decision with Chandler Anderson, special counsel for the department, and later talked with Mr. Polk. They contend that the decision is arbitrary contrary to international law and permits citizens of other governments to sell products, while the same privileges are denied to the United States on the ground that the goods were destined ultimately for Germany.

The packers have been given notice of appeal from the prize court decision and will discuss with Messrs. Polk and Anderson to-morrow the various points in the direction which they believe should be the basis of representations by the American government to Great Britain.

$6,000,000 IS ESTIMATED NEED OF PATRIOTIC FUND FOR SECOND YEAR

Monthly Drain on Fund by Christmas Expected to be $500,000—Details of Finances During the First Year of War

SUPERVISION OF EXPENDITURE

Now that the fund is entering upon the second year of its existence local committees will be interested in the appended quotations from a report dated September 25th, 1915, submitted by the Honorary Secretary to the national executive committee:

"With 140,000 men called to the colours, and further drafts in contemplation, the efformity of the task of caring for the vast army of those dependent upon them is daily becoming more apparent. What was ample provision for the first year of the war, must needs be doubled during the second period. In the course of the year ending August 31st, 1915, there was raised by the combined branches of the Fund $4,900,178.61; there was disbursed $2,786,999.03; leaving a balance on hand in September 1st of $2,113,179.58, for future needs. As the amount requisitioned for August reached $360,985.85 and for September exceeded $409,000.00, it will be seen that the balance on hand, were peace to be declared to-morrow, would not be more than sufficient to care for the soldiers' dependents during the four or five months' period that will be required for the Canadian troops to be disbanded and the soldiers reinstated in civil life. Probably by Christmas, if not sooner, the monthly drain on the united Fund will reach $500,000, at which rate of expenditure it will require $6,000,000 to carry on for the ensuing twelve months.

The western provinces have undertaken to raise $2,200,000, while it is estimated that they will require, in addition to monies in hand, the sum of $2,250,000, leaving a deficit of about $600,000 to be made up through the central organization. Considering the fact that only about one-fourth of our total population lies west of the Great Lakes, while more than two-fifths of the families requiring assistance are in the western provinces, this demand upon the Central Fund is by no means unreasonable. Hence, of the $6,000,000 required for the coming year it is expected that $3,350,000 (or about $600,000 more than local requirements) will be raised in eastern Canada. The three maritime provinces expect to need $500,000 which they have locally undertaken to secure, but their Executives are of opinion that this part of Canada will have no surplus for outside assistance. It will be then to Ontario and Quebec that we shall have to look not only for what monies will be required for the soldiers' dependents within those provinces, but also for an additional $6,000,000. If the response of the first year be any criterion we shall not seek even this large sum in vain. A general and generous contribution will, however, be necessary and the Head Office of the Fund will doubtless receive, the heartiest winter to stimualte every community within reach of the Capital to put forth a maximum effort to reach the desired end. We shall require, and will doubtless receive, the hearty co-operation of every member of the National Executive, each in the province from which he comes.

The First Year's Surplus.

An examination of the sums contributed to and drawn from the central fund shows the following conditions: The province of Nova Scotia has, during the first year of the war, raised $18,200, the province of New Brunswick, $8,300 and the province of Prince Edward Island $22,900, more than in each instance has been drawn. These three provinces are already at work securing further subscriptions and do not expect to require outside assistance.

From the province of Quebec there has been turned in $953,380 in excess of what has been required for local needs; of this sum $940,325 was contributed by the City of Montreal. Three branches only have drawn more than they have raised: Hull, Chambly Co., and Levis. These are all suburban districts opposite large cities through which local collections have mainly gone.

Head Office Supervision of Expenditure.

During the summer months the Head Office has devoted much time and attention to the study of rate of assistance with a view of reducing the payments to soldiers' dependents whenever this can be done without causing hardship or creating dissatisfaction. A basis of comparative expenditure has been arrived at and as the monthly returns come in from the branches they are carefully examined to ascertain whether they show any evidences of extravagance. The Disbursement Sheet-Analysis form, approved by the sub-committee named by the Executive in June is now used as a gauge to try out the reported expenditure of each branch. Whenever this analysis makes it evident that a branch is neglecting to follow Head Office suggestions, the local committee is written to by our Assistant Secretary and asked to conform with the rates of other branches. Almost invariably this results in a lowering of the average monthly payment per family without leading to unfavourable criticism.

THE TAXATION QUESTION WILL BE DISCUSSED

Word having been received in the city that Frederick J. Dixon, M.P.P., the Independent progressive member for Centre Winnipeg, in the Manitoba Legislature, is to address a series of meetings in Ontario, as well as in Montreal and New York, arrangements have been made to bring Mr. Dixon to Peterborough on Wednesday of next week. Mr. Dixon will address Canadian Clubs, Boards of Trade, and other similar organizations in Brantford, Hamilton, Toronto, Ottawa and Montreal. It is fortunate, therefore, that it is going to be possible to bring him to Peterborough. Mr. Dixon is one of the best known public men in Western Canada, having been elected to the Legislature at the last election as well as at the previous one by over 4,000 majority, on each occasion.

While in Peterborough he will speak on the subject of taxation reform. He believes that as a result of this war it is doubly important that just systems of taxation shall be followed. Much, he believes, is going to depend upon the system of taxation adopted to pay for war expenditures. This is a subject he will deal with while in Peterborough. He is also an ardent advocate of the Commission form of government. It is possible that arrangements may be made for him to give an address on this subject also when in the city.

MAJOR-GENERAL HUGHES HAD NARROW ESCAPE

Gen. Sir Sam Hughes and Mr. W. F. Nickle, M.P., had an interesting and unusual experience at Queen's University Tuesday morning, which they are not likely soon to forget.

Following the early morning inspection of the troops Gen. Hughes, accompanied by Mr. Nickle, went to the University to see the results of some experiments with chlorine gas made by Prof. Walker, of the School of Science. The professor had a room completely filled with chlorine gases could easily be overcome by mans have used in the trenches, and its purpose was to show that these gases could easily be overcome by the use of a respirator, which he has made. To prove this, he opened the door leading into the room—first taking the precaution, however, to put on the respirator—and entered it. To his amazement—and to his great alarm—when he turned around in the room he found that Gen. Hughes had followed him in without a respirator and even in that brief moment was beginning to show the effects of the gas, these showing in a highly increased blood pressure, in a suffocating feeling and in a semi-blinding effect. The general, however, had presence of mind enough to, as the saying goes, "to hold his breath" once he began to realize that the room was in fact filled with the deadly poison, but nevertheless say, the professor insisted that the General should retire at once.

Later Mr. Nickle, with the respirator on, went into the room and remained for about five minutes, and when he came out reported no ill effects.

Gen. Hughes was much impressed with the demonstration.

Charged With Breaking Parole

Peterboro Boy Will be Returned to Kingston to Complete Unexpired Portion of Two Year Term—To-Day's Police Court News

A couple of sobbing mothers added a pathetic touch to this morning's police court proceedings. One of them was removed from the court room by an officer. Her son appeared in the prisoner's dock on a charge of breaking parole. It is alleged that he failed to report regularly to the police as required by the ticket-of-leave act. The accused claimed that he worked at night on munitions of war and was unable to make the required report. When released from Kingston, where he was serving a sentence o two years, he was instructed to report to the local police department for the length of his unexpired term, which was about eight months. Magistrate Dumble ordered his return to Kingston, where he will have to complete the remainder of his term unless representations that will probably be made to the department, are successful.

On the Prohibited List.

Walker Whitehead was put on the prohibited list this morning. He said he wasn't drunk but admitted feeling pretty good.

"Do you want to go on the prohibited list?" inquired the Chief.

"I don't see why you want to put a good man like me on the black list," pleaded Whitehead.

"Be a man and back up the law that is trying to save you," was the court's parting admonition.

Assault Charge.

Tony Longo's attempt to stage a hanging match on Bethune street found little favour with his victim, Harry Dainow, who preferred a charge of assault. Dainow claimed that Longo fastened a rope around his neck and tried to hang him much to the amusement of fifteen or twenty small boys. "He hurt me much," said the complainant, who exhibited a number of scars on his neck. Longo sought to place the blame on the boys who were in the yard with him.

The case was enlarged until Tuesday in order to give the parties interested an opportunity to produce more witnesses.

Remanded One Week.

Denham Jones was remanded one week on a charge of theft. The police claim he stole five dollars from Harry Tuesley.

Noted German Riders' Killed At The Front

BERLIN, Oct. 7.—News has been received here that Captain Count Frits von Koenigsmarck has been killed on the eastern front and that his brother, Count Walter, died on Sunday as the result of injuries suffered when he made a bad landing in an aeroplane in which he was taking a trial flight during a fog.

Mr. K. J. In the meantime he will continue to work in the Eastern Ontario district in which Peterborough is part of the territory.

Reception To The New Pastor

Rev. John Galt Welcomed at the Gilmour Memorial

A reception was held in the Gilmour Memorial Church last evening in honour of the new Pastor, Rev. John Galt. The gathering, which was congregational in character, was a large one, and Rev. Mr. Galt was given a hearty welcome. The different churches in the neighbourhood had representatives present to join with the people of Gilmour Church in extending greetings to Rev. Mr. Galt. Rev. Mr. McKee of the Bridgenorth Methodist Church, Rev. Mr. Slimon of the Lakefield Baptist Church, Rev. J. A. McKenzie of Knox Church, representing the Ministerial Association, and Mr. Petit, representing the Murray Street Church, in the unavoidable absence of Rev. J. G. Welsh, all made addresses of welcome. A solo was contributed by Mrs. J. Young and a duet by Misses Beatrice McGregor and Maggie Paul. Mr. T. H. Graham was chairman. The addresses were preceded by an enjoyable supper.

FIELD PATH CONSIDERED.

It is not only in England that the field path is considered as one of the rights of a district. In the South of Scotland this year, while searching for a path that we knew has been in existence some years before, we came upon a native, of whom we made inquiry. "Och, ay, it's there richt enough, but there's corn on it this year," he said in a friendly manner. "Jist gang you richt through it. It'll be a' trampit doon in a day or two anyway."

Groom Of Yesterday's Wedding Was With Troops In Flanders

Interesting Wedding of Miss Elizabeth Dumble to Mr. Charles Henry D'Oiley Reid Who Served With Montreal Heavy Battery

A pretty wedding was celebrated yesterday afternoon at 1:30 o'clock at the residence of Mr. and Mrs D. W. Dumble, McDonnel street, when their daughter Elizabeth was united in marriage to Mr. Charles Henry D'Oiley Reid, son of the late Dr. Reid of this city. The ceremony was performed in the presence of relatives and immediate friends, and an interesting feature was the fact that thirty-one relatives of the bride were present. Rev. Dr. Renar of Cobourg, an uncle of the bride, officiated, assisted by Rev. R. G. Peever of George street Methodist church. Miss Renar and Miss Cubitt of this city, were bridesmaids. The groom was attended by his brother, Mr. Charles H. D'Oiley Reid, who was one of the first active soldiers to return from the Flanders front to Peterborough. He enlisted with the Montreal Heavy Battery and after Salisbury's winter camp, crossed with the first Canadians to Flanders. He was invalided home with rheumatism.

Mr. and Mrs. Reid motored to Stony Lake yesterday afternoon, where they will spend their honeymoon.

Activities Of The Local Branch Of The Red Cross Society

Text of an Appeal of the British Red Cross to the People of Canada

At a special meeting of the Executive of the Peterborough Branch of the Red Cross Society, yesterday, the following appeal from the British Red Cross to the people of Canada was read. It was decided to send a deputation to the City Council in order to find out their feeling in the matter, and to offer the hearty co-operation in any undertaking of the Council along this line.

Final arrangements were made for the coming of General Ryerson, Surgeon-in-Chief of the Canadian Red Cross Society, which was planned early in the summer.

General Ryerson's visit will be an event in the history of Peterborough. He is an Empire figure, who, by his wonderful work and sacrifices, has made his name a household word in Canada.

All citizens will desire to come into contact with so eminent a Canadian.

Owing to Monday, Oct. 11th, being Thanksgiving Day and the Public Library being closed, there will be no work done in the work-room, but those who usually work on Monday are asked to come on Wednesday and Friday, in order to accomplish the usual amount of supplies for the week.

The following have been received and shipped, and are gratefully acknowledged by the Branch:

20 lbs. tobacco from Mr. Clysdale; 50 lbs. chocolate and gum from the Collegiate Institute.

The appeal mentioned, follows:

Appeal From the British Red Cross to the People of Canada.

The Executive Committee of the Canadian Red Cross Society requests that the Officers of all Provincial and Local Branches will take immediate action to make known the contents of this bulletin to their branches and to all others working for the Red Cross.

Cable From Lord Lansdowne

(President British Red Cross Society)

The following cable has been received by the Lieutenant-Governors of all the Provinces of the Dominion from Lord Lansdowne, President of the British Red Cross Society:

"I beg to inform you that the British Red Cross Society and the Order of St John in view of the growing demands upon their resources both in France and the near East, have decided to make an appeal throughout the Empire, by street and other collections, upon one day, which has been fixed for the 21st October. The money received from this appeal will be devoted entirely to relieving the suffering of our wounded soldiers and sailors from home and overseas at the various seats of war from all parts of the King's Dominions.

"We have already received generous assistance in our work, but with the increase of British and Overseas Forces at the front there is a corresponding increase in our expenditures, and we shall be truly grateful to you if you will help us by organizing an appeal, sending proceeds to us for the object which I have named.

"I shall be greatly obliged if you will communicate the following to your Government.

"Their Majesties the King and Queen and Her Majesty Queen Alexandra are giving us their gracious patronage, and I trust that you will be able to see your way to help us."

(Signed) LANSDOWNE.

President, British Red Cross Society.

A Letter from R.R.H. the Duke of Connaught.

The Executive Committee of the Canadian Red Cross Society, in order to ascertain the views of its patron, H.R.H. the Governor General of Canada as to the part which the Canadian Red Cross Society should undertake in this matter, at once communicated with His Royal Highness and received from him the following gracious letter:

2nd October, 1915.

Sir,—An urgent appeal sent to all parts of the Empire emanating from the President of the British Red Cross Society, Lord Lansdowne, has reached me in behalf of aid to the funds of that Society.

I need hardly say that both the Duchess and myself are in warmest sympathy with this movement, and that ew fully approve of any action which your Society may undertake in furtherance of the object in view. The organization of the campaign in Canada has been undertaken by the Governors of the several Provinces of the Dominion, and will culminate on the 21st October.

We shall be glad to hear that your Society will promote the object in view in every way possible through your branches, in co-operation with the committees established by the Provincial Governments, and that it may result in an offering worthy of the Dominion and the more so as this is the first appeal which has been made to the generosity of the Canadian people by the British Red Cross Society since the outbreak of the war.

Believe me,

Yours sincerely,

(Signed) ARTHUR.

Decision of Executive Committee.

A meeting of the Executive was immediately called thereon and the following resolutions were passed and are now promulgated for general information of Provincial and Local Branches throughout the Dominion:

Resolved, that all officers and members of the Canadian Red Cross Society be called upon to co-operate cordially with the Provincial Government Committees in every way possible to further the appeal of the British Red Cross Society.

Resolved, that all collections in response to the special appeal made upon October 21st, 1915, be paid directly to the Local Treasurers appointed by the several Provincial Governors and not to the Treasurers of Branches of the Canadian Red Cross Society, as this appeal is entirely separate from the ordinary appeal of the Canadian Red Cross Society, being Empire-wide and direct from the parent society.

Resolved, that the Provincial and other branches are clearly informed that this collection is limited to the operations of one day, viz., October 21st, 1915.

Be Sure when the Doors Open in the Morning

174 HUNTER STREET, Op. Oriental

A DIFFICULTY ON PARK STREET

Widening of the Road Has Interfered With a Number of Private Entrances

At last night's meeting of the City Council, Alderman Green, chairman of the Board of Works, submitted a problem that has cropped up in connection with the department of public works. It concerns an entrance to the W. C. Ackerman property on Park Street. Since the new pavement has been constructed and the street widened, the matter of constructing an entrance into the Ackerman property has become somewhat of an engineering difficulty. At present there is no sidewalk on the east side of Park Street, between Simcoe and Hunter Streets.

After some discussion it was decided to leave the matter in the hands of Ald. Green and City Engineer Parsons, who will endeavour to have the difficulty straightened out. The bank is very steep at this point and an attempt to construct an entrance to this or adjoining properties might interfere with the construction of a sidewalk should the Council decide to build one at some future date.

MERCHANT MARINERS PLAY USEFUL PARTS

Profession of Jellicoe's Father Makes Good in War—Reservists Flocked From Everywhere

The responsible part played by the Mercantile Marine in the present war was discussed in an address delivered the other day at the Sailors' Club, in Montreal, by Captain Walsh, Marine Superintendent of the C.P.R. Atlantic Steamships. "At one time," said Captain Walsh, "it was considered that on account of the officers and men being distributed all over the globe, the number procurable at short notice would be small. On this account, a short service scheme was created in the naval service, from which men passed into the Royal Fleet Reserve, and through it an immediate reserve was always available. But directly the R.N.R. was called upon, they flocked to the rendezvous in such numbers that it was difficult to place them all. They returned in very large numbers from positions on shore, even from farms in Western Canada and other places.

"The British Admiralty where possible allowed the masters and officers to remain in their ships. When we consider there are probably over 3,000 captains and officers of the Mercantile Marine, and, including men employed in the trawlers and other mine-laying and mine-sweeping operations, considerably over 32,000 men with the work of the ocean-carrying passenger and freight service going on as usual, it is indeed an honor to belong to a service that has done such excellent work.

Upper Lakes' Mate a Hero

"The work of the armed merchant cruisers, whose crews were mostly R.N.R. and Mercantile Marine men, also calls for special praise. The SS. 'Carmania' and 'Cap Trafalgar' met in fair fight, even matched. The 'Carmania' was commanded by Captain Noel, R.N., with Captain Barr, second in command. The Briton's skill secured them victory in an hour. The 'Carmania' was holed in over 200 places, being hit by almost 100 projectiles. Lieut. Murray, late chief officer of the Canadian Pacific SS. 'Lake Manitoba,' was working a gun on the forward decks, when a projectile struck the forward winch, a splinter from which struck him down, injuring his spine.

"Over 50 vessels were commissioned as armed cruisers and were represented in most of the early engagements. Mercantile cruisers suffered much, from one reason and another. Probably the most dangerous and comfortless of all the naval and auxiliary naval services is the mine-sweeping and mine-laying fleet manned almost altogether with R.N.R. officers and mercantile seamen and fishermen.

Kept Trade Moving

"With regard to masters, officers and men who were not in the R.N.R. and who were free agents at liberty to do what they liked, no praise would be too great. The German submarine did not frighten them; they put their country's honor first and left home and friends, to man their ships, and so transport troops, ammunition, horses and food-stuffs the world over, not to England or the British Isles only, but also to the distant parts of the world. Apart from all this, the masters, officers and men of the Mercantile Marine have done some excellent effective fighting work.

"The officers and men of the Mercantile Marine take great pleasure in knowing that the Admiral, Sir John Jellicoe, in supreme command afloat of His Majesty's Naval Services, is the son of a ship master of the British Mercantile Marine, and one who gave the people whom he served for a long number of years extreme satisfaction, and who always stood out as a fine example of the British Mercantile Marine ship master."

Perhaps you do not know the sensation of smoke-hunger although there are few smokers who have not felt it at some time in their lives.

Bad enough in ordinary conditions, isn't it? But what must it be to our boys in the trenches, weary and rain besodden after, perhaps, a long night's vigil the few hours' respite comes in the morning, that's the time they feel smoke-hungry. Nothing to smoke then is a tragedy. Won't you help The Examiner to avert it, for surely there is tragedy enough in the life of every soldier on the firing line!

$20,000 FROM BERLIN $500 FROM PETERBORO

BERLIN, Ont., Oct. 7.—At an enthusiastic meeting of the citizens called by Mayor Hett it was decided to ask the City Council to contribute $20,000 to the British Red Cross Fund on Trafalgar Day. This means that Berlin will contribute at the rate of $1 per head of population. It is not expected that there will be any opposition in the Council to the request.

The local Council last night decided to vote $500 for this fund. The two cities are much the same size. The comparison doesn't look well in print.

GERMAN ATTEMPTS ALL RESULT IN FAILURE

PARIS, Oct. 7.—The Germans are continuing to try with all their might and means to regain the ground they lost to the French in the recent allied offensive. So far their efforts have been entirely unsuccessful, the French War Office asserts in to-day's official communiques, adding that the Teutons suffered heavy losses in the failure of their counter-attacks.

Four successive counter-attacks near Bauches were completely repulsed, the War Office declares, while in the Champagne, too, "stubborn counter attacks" against the positions lost by the Germans recently failed. Equally as futile was an attempt on the Lorraine front, where the French allowed the Germans to advance to their wire entaglements and then showered a rain of shells upon them. The night communique tells of the destruction of a German captive balloon by shrapnel fire from a mitrailleuse in a French aeroplane.

The Germans admit that the French have made slight gains but on the whole claim to have repulsed the allied general offensive.

The towns mentioned in the two official communications very close to the Challerange-Bazancourt railway, which is their objective. St. Marie, to which the Germans say the French penetrated, but were driven out by immediate counter-attacks, is on that railway.

Threatened on Both Sides.

The capture of the hamlet of Tahure and the hill immediately north called Butte of Tahure is a considerable mark of resumption of the French offensive in Champagne, and as, besides, great significance with regard to the position in the West. The capture of Tahure, the farthest northward thrust of the French in Champagne, threatens the Germans on both sides.

THE WORLD OF SPORT

BOSTON CONCEDED THE EDGE IN BIG SERIES

Should it fall to the lot of a substitute to jump into fame and become a world's series hero, there is no denying the fact that Boston is better equipped in utility men than in Philadelphia. And it must be conceded that substitutes have been important factors in the world's clashes that have been in evidence all through the years of baseball history.

Many a column has been written of the feats of George Rohe, the too-headed pinch third sacker of the White Sox in 1906. Del Howard subbed for Frank Chance with rare skill in the conflict of 1908. The clash of 1910 saw Heine Zimmerman getting a chance to fill Johnny Evers' shoes, Johnny having broken one of his legs just a few days before. Zim is a wonderful player now, but the Cubs certainly missed Evers' brains and mechanical skill in 1910.

Fans remember how Olaf Henriksen earned the iron cross of baseball by his duties as pinch hitter in the series of 1912, while they also recall the failure of the New York second stringers to successfully sub for Snodgrass and Merkle in the combat of 1913. And baseball history also tells us that Harry Davis, considered a has-been, went back to first base and steadied the Athletics in 1911 and caused the Philadelphia fans to forget that Stuffy McInnis was not in the line-up.

The Braves were the ones that were unable to take the field with their regular line-up a year ago, but because of the excellent playing of Charley Deal, the National League champions were not weakened defensively.

Unless there is such an eleventh hour accident as there was a year ago when Red Smith broke a leg, or in 1910 when Evers sustained his injury, both teams will present all of their regulars when the series starts. But should any accident occur during the next few days or in the series, there is no getting away from the fact that Boston is better equipped for substitutes.

It still has Henriksen subbing in the outfield, but the Norwegian has done nothing to distinguish himself since he helped trounce the Giants in October, 1912. In a pinch, however, Babe Ruth, the hard-hitting southpaw pitcher, could be used in the garden.

Philadelphia has four outfielders it considers regular, Cravath, Whitted, Paskert and Becker. The first three, however, are the ones likely to start the battles with Becker and Weiser in reserve. Becker is a splendid hitter and fair fielder. Failure to think quickly is his fault. Weiser, who has but little chance to show his skill this season, led the North Carolina League in batting in 1914.

The Phillies will thus be seen to have the advantage in outfield substitutes, but when it comes to extra infielders, the National Leaguers are outclassed. Bobby Byrne, who is batting only .300, and Dugey, who has not been in enough games to get a batting average, are the only reinforcements that Moran can call upon to help out his first line of defence.

Luderus has no understudy except one of the regular outfielders, while Carrigan can send either Hoblitzel or Gainer to first and be satisfied. Should Jack Barry be incapacitated, either Heine Wagner, on of the bulwarks of the team of 1912, or Janvrin, by the way, in such a valuable player he is likely to be called upon to play short in place of Scott, who is much weaker with the stick. Janvrin is available to play short for the series or sub at either second or third. McNally, who shortfielded for St. Paul a year ago, completes the list of infield substitutes.

Behind the bat, Boston is also better equipped. Where Philadelphia has only Killifer as a first stringer, Boston has three high-class receivers in Carrigan, Cady and Thomas, three who have been taking their turn behind the bat all year. Burns scarcely can be rated as good as any one of the three, while Adams has caught but few big league games. He has the mechanical ability, but lacks the experience.

ROCHESTER, Oct. 8.—Smiling Johnny Riley displayed more artistic fighting ability in his ten round bout against Battling Kopin, of Jamestown, than he has shown in all of his previous battles in this city bunched into one. It didn't seem like the same old Riley, not from any angle of vison. To be sure, the same old punch—the deadly drive—was there but with it, also, was a show of science that puzzled and pleased. Some persons had the idea that Riley couldn't be scientific because of his rangy makeup. The answer may be traced largely to the cleverness of Jack Quinn, who trained Johnny for the bout. Such a metamorphosis did Quinn bring about in Riley that the Smiling Johnny of other days and of last night was vastly dissimilar.

A word about Battling Kopin. He is one of the most popular out-of-town boxers that has shown here in a year. His style is attractive, his workmanship clean and his infighting is dangerous. That he is game was evidenced last night and that he has fine recuperative powers is unquestioned.

When the boys squared off at the were unanimous in voicing the opinwere unanimous in voicing the opinion that "Riley has a tough job cut out for him." The Battler waded in furiously and forced the milling for about a minute and then one of Riley's wallops put a comma into the sentence. There was just a flash of cleverness in Riley's work and the fans really passed it over on the supposition that it was accidental. Before the round ended, Riley was on a shade better than even terms.

Kopin tried to make a cyclone of the second and chased Riley around the ring, making the latter give ground but it seemed as if Riley were backing away simply for the purpose of teasing Kopin in and then smashing him; at least that's just what he did. Kopin might be given a shade in the second. The third was really a repetition of the second, each following the same tactics, except that at the close Riley caught Kopin a wicked smash flush on the nose, evening up the score.

But the real Riley and the real fight was in the fourth round. The Battler came on with a rush and was stopped by a terrific slam straight on the jaw. Why Kopin wasn't keeled over is a puzzle. The blow sprung a leak in the steam pipes of the Jamestown lad and Riley, using his brain better than ever in his life, took advantage of the opportunity and gave the Battler the toughest round that boy has ever had. Johnny hit him everywhere, everywhere and whenever he wanted and he was wanting every second of the 180 in that period.

Crack after crack resounded from the face, head and body of Kopin who was forced, under the hurricane of swats, to cover up, duck, dodge and even cling to weather the blow. It was a thorough thrashing that Riley gave his rival. In the fifth, Kopin showed that he was slowed up. The steam wasn't there, the rush was missing and his tactics were defensive. Riley had a wide margin in this round. Somewhat recovered in the sixth Kopin stood his ground but a persistent pecking in the face by Riley with a rangy left hand stood Kopin off. Here's where Riley showed something new. Until yesterday his left hand seemed only unable for wild swings. Last night he screwed it through any kind of an opening and landed it on Kopin's nose, mouth and eyes repeatedly.

It was give and take in the seventh, Riley landing often and showing much better style at long range. In infighting, Kopin had the mastery. Riley tried to make the eighth a repitition of the fourth and almost succeeded. He won it by a large margin. His ability to get back of Kopin's guard was surprising; rather Kopin seemed unable to guess just what Riley was going to do until his face stopped a blow. Johnny feinted Kopin into several openings. Kopin slammed a sassy smash into Riley's mouth in the ninth and essayed to follow it up with a finish but John took one knee down, came up easily and went through safely. The 10th was a dandy from all angles and each got and gave as much as the other. It was Riley's bout by a good, safe margin.

Bad Weather For The Opener

Special to The Examiner:

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 8.—To-day dawned cold and threatening for the first game of the world's series.

The rain which poured down throughout yesterday and last night had ceased, but the sky was still overcast and the weatherman predicted unsettled weather with possible showers during the morning.

Be wise, advertise your wants in the paper that brings results. Put a result bringing want ad in to-morrow and watch the returns.

BELL OUTPOINTED GUNBOAT SMITH

MONTREAL, Oct. 8.—Bald-headed Colin Bell came just within an ace of knocking out "Gunboat" Smith at Sohmer Park.

A driving right uppercut to Smith's mid-riff in the ninth round bent the sailorman double, and made him stagger and clinch. With both arms around Bell, he hung on and so effectively locked the Astralian's arms that Bell was unable to cut loose a clean punch that might have ended the fight. The minute's rest before the tenth freshened the well-conditioned Smith so that he was able to show a good rally and hold Bell even in the final frame.

The ninth round margin was enough to give Bell a clean-cut margin on the bout. There was not much action in the early rounds, Bell showing some aggressiveness, but fighting cautiously away from Smith's right hand, and making the Gunner miss an average of a dozen wings and uppercuts per round. It wasn't until about the eighth that the men cut loose, when they battled a furious even round. Bell took the shade in the ninth and had the Gunner wobbly at the finish. The tenth was fast and even.

Bell showed speed and clever defensive fighting. He meets Silas Green, a big negro heavyweight at a popular-priced show in the Canadian Club gymnasium Saturday night, and this bout will give the dopesters an even better line on the Australian's wares, as Green is a fast, shifty fellow.

Market Opinions of New York Houses.

Shearson, Hammill & Co.—There is no doubt that the shake-out that the market has had will make it much healthier, and while we wish it might go still further so as to compete the good work and put us on a more stable basis, we doubt if the market will react much further.

E. & C.—Randolph.—Although the technical position has been much improved, it is probable that it is still weak in many quarters of the list, and commitments in this section should only be entered into with considerable caution. We are in a bull period, however, and the great underlying forces are still working for higher prices.—Evans.

Post & Flagg.&—Many of the recently over-hulled industrial specialties are likely to continue to be a sale on rallies, but the railroads and such stocks as Inspiration, Utah Copper, and United Railway Investment Preferred picked up on any moderate recession should prove attractive purchases.

World Series In The Mud

Shore and Alexander Are the Opposing Pitchers in Big Baseball Classics

Special to The Examiner:

PHILLIES FIELD, Philadelphia Oct. 8. The Phillies and Red Sox began the first game of the world's premier baseball struggle this afternoon on as rotten a playing field as the annual classic was ever contested on.

The infield was covered with a slimy, treacherous blanket of muck, which a small army of ground keepers laboured feverishly but vainly to make firm under foot.

Shortly before 1 o'clock the diamond was flooded with gasoline and a match applied. The conflagration dried off the surface, but scarcely touched the real seat of the trouble. Sawdust, crushed brick, everything was thrown on to the playing plot, but it still threatened to make the infielders crazy with grief and consternation.

The crowd, of course, packed the handbox park to suffocation. Hundreds stood outside the gates and gave up small fortunes for the coveted paper slips.

Speculators paid their winter expenses on the proceeds of to-day's barter.

The batteries were as follows:

Boston—Shore and Cady.

Philadelphia—Alexander and Burns.

Umpires—Klem, "Chief" Ryler, O'Loughlin and Evans.

LONDON, Oct. 7.—During the past month of fighting in the Dardanelles the British have gained on an average something more than 300 yards all along the centre of the four-mile Suvla front, according to an official statement given out to-night. The statement was embodied in a report from Gen. Sir Ian Hamilton, as follows:

"During the past month the fighting at Suvla Bay has not been on a scale calling for special reports. Every night there have been patrol actions and bomb attacks, and we gained an average of a little over 300 yards along the whole centre of the four-mile Suvla front."

The old and common method of placing lenses before the patients' eyes and letting him decide by asking "Is this better or is this worse" only too often fatigues the examiner and worries the patient, giving a dread or fear of inaccuracy, which is generally the case.

THE SEIZURE OF MACEDONIA SAID TO BE THE OBJECT

Bulgaria to Occupy That District at all Events---Her Future Conduct Depending Upon the Conduct of the Entente Powers After That Plan Has Been Carried Out

SOFIA, Oct. 3, via Berlin and London, Oct. 8, 3:40 p.m.—(Delayed in transmission)—Bulgaria, it is considered here, is certain to occupy Macedonia simultaneously with the launching of the Austro-German offensive against Serbia. What future action Bulgaria will take will depend upon the conduct of the entente powers after Macedonia has been occupied.

The conclusion that Bulgaria is making common cause with the central powers is asserted by prominent Bulgarians to be unwarranted and premature.

At the present moment, it is maintained, Bulgaria has not assumed an obligation to assist the Austro-German forces, and only the refusal of the entente powers to recognize Bulgaria's claims in Macedonia could have such a result. In the view, however, that the entente powers are bound to resent the occupation of Macdonia without their consent, Bulgaria is said to be prepared to meet whatever situation may be created through its action.

LONDON, Oct. 8.—"The appearance of an Anglo-French fleet off Piraeus at this moment," says the Pall Mall Gazette in an editorial, "would do more to impart 'settled convictions' to the new Greek Cabinet than volumes of verbal pressure. It is a mistake in the Balkans to let the velvet glove conceal too much of the fibre of the hand beneath it.

"Bulgaria has given us an example of how fastidious diplomacy may be turned to ridicule. There is an individual in Greece who is capable of playing a similar game. Greece should be given clearly to understand that there are but two courses in which her mobilization can head, and that unless she is prepared to act upon one of them she must accept the consequences of the other. Events have gone far beyond the point where euphemisms or temporizings can be of service."

PARIS, Oct. 9.—So decisively have the Serbians with the aid of the British naval contingent defeated the Austro-Germans who tried to capture the Belgrade-Constantinople railway, to-day's despatches from Nish asserted that it was predicted no farther advance would be attempted until Marshal Von Mackensen is heavily reinforced.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 8.—Charged with being a German spy, a 20-year-old student, Gustav Kenneth Wood-Triest, of New York, is being held for trial at London.

Young Triest ran away from Princeton last spring and enlisted in the British navy's wireless service. That he wrote a letter to the German Government offering to sell war information is the charge against him.

The State Department has secured postponement of trial from October 4 to October 18, and is seeking further postponement to submit affidavits of Princeton class-mates that the boy is unbalanced.

Game Fowl Scarce In Old Haunts On Lake And River

Birds Said to be Feeding in the More Inland Marshes That Are Filled With the High Water—Later Ducks May Arrive

The familiar haunts of the wild fowl in the bays that indent the Rice Lake shore line and in the widened, marshy sections of the river have seen little activity since the opening of the shooting season. October is usually the month when the black and wood ducks are numerous in the feeding grounds of the Peterborough waters. These are the early arrivals, in fact most of them spend the summer in the environs, hatch their young and depart for warmer climes with the first approach of cold weather. This season, however, few of them have been seen since the first shooting with the opening of the season. And the reason for this condition is found in the high water, and the consequent feeding grounds further inland away from the easy reach of canoeists. Other years these low lying sections dried and uninviting. Now, so the nimrods say, the game fowl are remote from the regular grounds and their accommodating marshes. It is also reported that the sloughs in the west are water-filled to a greater extent than usual and the birds are now forced to wing a flight to other grounds.

In the colder days of November the wood and black ducks are replaced by the bluebills, whistlewings, mallards and other arrivals from the north country which sojourn in these parts until winter forces them to resume their flight in the wake of the vanishing autumn. It may be that these varieties will be more numerous than the October birds, but the veteran hunters are not placing much hope in this prospect. However, it is early to look for them, although in the middle and northern lakes of the county they may flock in their usual numbers.

Bad Fire On Farm Of Shaw Brothers Damage Was Heavy

The farm of Messrs. R. and L. Shaw, of Otonabee was the scene of a destructive fire yesterday morning in which a large barn, with its contents, and the sheds adjoining, were completely destroyed. The entire crop, consisting of a large quantity of hay and a thousand bushels of oats, was consumed and a threshing machine destroyed. Just what caused the fire is a mystery. Mr. Wm. Shaw, father of the two brothers who own the property, was at the top of a silo beside the barn when the fire was discovered and he had a narrow escape from death, saving his life by jumping and catching the window at the top of the silo, pulling himself up and then sliding down a tin-pipe over thirty feet to the ground, a notable feat for a man of 70 years. The silo had quickly filled with smoke and his escape was a narrow one. There was insurance for $1100 on the barn and contents, but this will not cover fifty per cent. of the loss.

When the fire broke out the silo was being filled and the corn had been piled within six feet of the top.

Eight Years For Suddard

Kingston Man Charged With Manslaughter is Sentenced

Special to The Examiner:

KINGSTON, Ont., Oct. 8.—To-day Mr. Justice Lennox sentenced Albert E. Sluddard to eight years in the penitentiary, he having been found guilty by a jury of manslaughter in the case of the death of Mrs. Nancy Job, an aged woman, on July 31.

The prisoner, who is twenty-five years of age, has a wife and baby girl. After sentence was imposed he broke down completely. He hugged and kissed the baby and his wife, and it was some time before he could get up courage to make his way to the jail with a constable.

Suddard pleaded with the court for leniency, on account of having a wife and child, and said he would make good if given a chance. Judge Lennox said he had sympathy for the prisoner, but that he coincided with the verdict of te jury. Had he allowed the prisoner to go free, it would have been an appalling reflection on the courts of justice. He had no doubt that Suddard's love for strong drink had been the cause of all his trouble.

The jury he recommended mercy in their verdict.

A DETERMINED WOMAN

Finally Found a Food that Helped Her.

"When I first read of the remarkable effects of Grape-Nuts food, I determined to secure some," says a western woman. "At that time there was none kept in this town, but my husband ordered some from a commercial traveller.

"I had been greatly afflicted with sudden attacks of cramps, nausea, and vomiting. Tried all sorts of remedies and physicians, but obtained only temporary relief. As soon as I began to use Grape-Nuts the cramps disappeared and have never returned.

"My old attacks of sick stomach were a little slower to yield, but by continuing the food, that trouble has disappeared entirely. I am to-day perfectly well, can eat anything and everything I wish, without paying the penalty that I used to. We would not keep house without Grape-Nuts.

"My husband was so delighted with the benefits I received that he has been recommending Grape-Nuts to his customers and has built up a very large trade on the food. He sells it to many of the leading physicians of the county, who recommend Grape-Nuts very generally. There is some satisfaction in using a really scientifically prepared food."

"There's a Reason."

FAMOUS HOTEL MANAGERS SENT TO THE ISLE OF MAN

LONDON, Oct. 1.—There have been two prominent Germans living in London since the outbreak of war who will not thank the Kaiser for his latest attempt to impress Great Britain with her acts of frightfulness.

Since the Zeppelin raids have become more frequent the former general managers of two great London hotels have been interned. Herr Theodore Kroell, the general manager of the Ritz Hotel, and Herr Jacques Kraemer, general manager of the Carlton Hotel, have been sent to the Isle of Man.

Both managers left their positions shortly after the war broke out and have been living in London. They registered themselves as aliens under the Aliens act and have reported themselves at regular intervals to the police.

Herr Kroell before he came to the Ritz was manager of the Beverley Hotel, opposite, and with the exception of a few porters and menials, all his employes were Germans, and before he left the management of the Ritz his two assistant managers left for America.

Herr Kraemer, during his management of the Carlton made it almost impossible for other than a German to obtain a situation in the hotel and openly boasted of his German preferences, and it is significant that some weeks before the outbreak of employes left for home "on holiday." He had an extensive acquaintance among German officials who came to England before the war, but influential friends enabled him to enjoy freedom in London until a few days ago, when his appeal was dismissed, and he was taken to camp.

Herr Kraemer rose from kitchen boy to the management of one of the best known hotels in the world. He is a tall, handsome man, forty-two years of age, and succeeded Mr. W. Astor as manager of the Carlton nine years ago. Though connected with some of the best families in Germany, Herr Kraemer left his home near Darmstadt at any early age and started out to carve his own career. At Heidelberg he found himself short of money, and being too proud to write home for assistance he accepted the position of kitchen boy in one of the big hotels.

From Heidelberg he went to Switzerland and then to the Quirinal, in Rome, where he had charge of the King's table. He next went to Paris, where he met Mr. Caesar Ritz, the famous hotel proprietor, who at once saw the capabilities of this young German and employed him in several of his biggest ventures. Herr Kraemer was one of Mr. Ritz's most valued assistants in the successive openings of the Savoy Hotel in London, the Ritz in Paris, and later the Piccadilly Ritz, of which he was one of the managers till, in 1906, he was appointed to the position in the Carlton. Herr Kraemer was also manager of the Carlton restaurant on the transatlantic steamships, and one of his most valued possessions is a beautiful diamond pin, studded with rubies, presented to him by the Kaiser.

WHO STANDS FORTH

(Constance Smith, in London Daily Mail.)

Forward we rode from shore and shire,
Choicest of England's fighting sons,
From loom and desk and mine and fire
Splendidly gone to face the guns!
They were pioneers and they fought for the breach,
They carved a way where the track ran red,
That the rest might go where they could not reach
With one flag lording it overhead.

Who stands forth from those fearless hordes?
Who is for liberty? Who for the right?
The victor bugles are on the wind!
The dead are calling from lands of strife!
And never a cannon booms but we Must stir in your case, and never a roar
Of regiments thundering the battle through
But you know they are calling who went before!

Who stands forth? And was India's claim!
Melbourne and Ottawa rose with a shout!
Shoulder to shoulder, lo! how they came!
Who stands forth And the empire's out!
Who is for victory? Who for right?
The Gray Mother's calling from east and for north!
The sea-winds bear it, the stars in the night
Cry, "Who is for liberty? Who stands forth?"

BIG EATERS GET KIDNEY TROUBLE

Take Salts at First Sign of Bladder Irritation or Backache

The American men and women must guard constantly against Kidney trouble, because we eat too much and all our food is rich. Our blood is filled with uric acid which the kidneys try to filter out, they weaken from overwork, become sluggish, the eliminative tissues clog and the trouble begins. Then comes backache, bladder weakness and a general decline in health.

When your kidneys feel like lumps of lead, your back hurts or the urine scalds, full of sediment, or you are obliged to seek relief two or three times during the night, or you suffer with sick headache, dizzy spells, sour stomach, or you have rheumatism when the weather is bad, get from your pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts, take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia and has been used for generations to flush and stimulate clogged kidneys to normal activity, also to neutralize the acids in urine so it no longer is a source of irritation thus ending bladder misery.

Jad Salts is inexpensive and delightful; a tablespoonful in a glass of hot or cold water before breakfast each morning is said by those who take it regularly to keep one from ever having backache or bladder trouble. It is a mistake to buy a kidney salts that contains too much acid for the kidneys, as they may become irritated and cause more trouble than you had before. Jad Salts is made in the U.S.A. and is packed in glass bottles for your protection. Obtainable at any good drug store. Drink lots of water and you may take a glass of it before retiring, also upon arising in the morning, it is a splendid habit and helps to keep the kidneys active and flushing any time.

FREE ADVICE TO SICK WOMEN

Thousands Have Been Helped By Common Sense Suggestions.

Mrs. E. Pinkham

Women suffering from any form of female ills are invited to communicate promptly with the woman's private correspondence department of the Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman and held in strict confidence. A woman can freely talk of her private illness to a woman; thus has been established a confidential correspondence which has extended over many years and which has never been broken. Women have thus published a testimonial or used a letter without the written consent of the writer, and never has the Company allowed these confidential letters to get out of their possession, as the hundreds of thousands of them in their files will attest.

Out of the vast volume of experience which they have to draw from, it is more than possible that they possess the very knowledge needed in your case. Nothing is asked in return except your good will, and their advice has helped thousands. Surely any woman, rich or poor, should be glad to take advantage of this generous offer of assistance. Address Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., (confidential) Lynn, Mass.

Every woman ought to have Lydia E. Pinkham's 80-page Text Book. It is not a book for general distribution, as it is too expensive. It is free and only obtainable by mail. Write for it today.

Fed the Brute.

Sir Charles Tupper in his book "Recollections of Sixty Years," recalls an experience of his daughter in Canada during the Riel rebellion in the northwest. She was in the section of trouble, and on a day when she happened to be alone in her home "in walked a strapping Indian, all war paint and feathers. She thought the best thing she could do was to feed him. She cooked everything in the house—potatoes, meat and bread. When all was consumed—and these Indians will eat at a meal enough to last for three weeks—he had grown to a very large size. As he could not speak a word of English or French, he evinced his gratitude by patting his protuberant stomach with a guttural 'Ha, ha, ha,' and left.

Plague of the Black Death.

That terrible plague the black death, originating somewhere in the east, passed by way of Armenia into Asia and thence to Egypt and north Africa reaching Sicily in 1346. It spread over Italy, France and nearly all of the countries of Europe, including the British Isles. The mortality is appalling, some 25,000,000 of people dying from the dread epidemic. The nature of the great pestilence has been a matter of much controversy, but it is generally conceded that it was closely related to what is known today as the "bubonic plague."—New York American.

The worst of it all was that he insisted, as a matter of personal education, on coming to my room after breakfast to watch the expert maneuvers of Britton in kneading the stiffness out of my muscles. He was looking for new ideas, he explained. I first consulted Britton and then resignedly consented to the demonstration.

To my surprise, Britton was something of an expert. I confess that he almost killed me with those strong, iron-like hands of his. If I was not sore when he began with me I certainly was when he finished. Collingraft was most enthusiastic. He said he'd never seen any one manipulate the muscles so scientifically as Britton and ventured the opinion that he would not have to repeat the operation often. To myself I said that he wouldn't have to repeat it at all.

We began laying our plans for the 14th. Communications arrived from Italy addressed to me, but intended for either the countess or the rather remote Mr. Bangs, who seemed better qualified to efface himself than any human being I've ever seen. These letters informed us that a yacht, one of three now cruising in the Mediterranean, would call at an appointed port on such and such a day to take her out to sea. Everything was being arranged on the outside for her escape from the continent, and precision seemed to be the watchword.

Of course I couldn't do a stroke of work on my novel. How could I be expected to devote myself to fiction when fact was staring me in the face so engagingly? We led an idle, dolce far niente life in these days, with an underlying touch of anxiety and excitement that increased as the day for her departure drew near. I confess to a sickening sense of depression that could not be shaken off.

Half of my time was spent in playing with Rosemary. She became dearer to me with each succeeding day. I knew I should miss her tremendously. I should even miss Jinko, who didn't like me, but who no longer growled at me. The castle would be a very gloomy, dreary place after they were out of it. I found myself wondering how long I would be able to endure the loneliness. Secretly I cherished the idea of selling the place if I could find a lunatic in the market. I didn't suppose there was anybody in the whole world crazy enough to buy it.

An unexpected diversion came one day when, without warning and figuratively out of a clear sky, the Hazzards and the Billy Smiths swooped down upon me. They had come up the river in the power boat for a final September run and planned to stop overnight with me.

They were the last people in the world whom I could turn away from my door. There might have been a chance to put them up for the night and still avoid disclosures had not circumstance ordered that the countess and I should be working in the garden at the very moment that brought them pounding at the postern gates. Old Conrad opened the gate in complete ignorance of our presence in the garden. (We happened to be in a somewhat obscure nook and seated upon a stone bench, so he must be held blameless.) The quartet brushed past the old man, and I, hearing their chatter, foolishly exposed myself.

I shall not attempt to describe the scene that followed their discovery of the Countess Tarnoway. Be it said, however, to the credit of Elsie and Betty Billy the startled refugee was fairly smothered in kisses and tears and almost deafened by the shrill, delighted exclamations that fell from their eager lips. I doubt if there ever was such a sensation before.

* * * * * * *

They brought rather interesting news concerning the count. It appears that he and the baron had quarreled, and at the time of my friends' departure from Vienna it was pretty generally understood that there would be a duel.

"I never liked the baron," I said, with a grim smile that could not have been misinterpreted, "but I hope to heavens he isn't killed."

Mrs. Titus sighed. "Tarnowsy is regarded as a wonderful marksman."

"Worse luck!" growled Collingraft, gloomily twiddling his thumbs.

"What kind of a shot is the baron?" asked Jasper junior hopefully.

No one was able to enlighten him, but Billy Smith shook his head dolefully.

"Maria Tarnowsy is a dead shot. He'll pot the baron sure."

"Hang it all," said I, and then lapsed into a horrified silence.

When the Hazzards and Smiths departed the next morning they were in full possession of all of our plans, hopes and secrets, but they were bound by promises that would have haunted them throughout all eternity if they allowed them to be violated. I do not recall having seen two more intensely excited, radiant women in my life than Elsie and Betty Billy. They were in an ecstatic state of mind. Their husbands, but little less excited, offered to help us in every way possible, and to prove their earnest, turned the prow of the motorboat down stream, abandoning the trip up the river in order to be in Vienna in case I should need them for any purpose whatsoever.

We Happened to Be in an Obscure Nook Seated Upon a Stone Bench.

"You may rest easy so far as I am concerned, Mrs. Titus," said the young diplomat. "As a representative of the United States government I can't become publicly involved in this international muddle. I've just got to keep my lips sealed. If it were discovered that I knew of all this, my head would be under the snickersnee in no time at all. Swish! Officially suicided!"

At 10 o'clock the next morning I was called to the telephone. Smith had startling news to impart. Count Tarnowsy and Baron Umovitch had engaged in a duel with pistols at sunrise and the latter had gone down with a bullet through his lungs! He died an hour later. Tarnowsy, according to the rumors flying about official Vienna, was already on his way to Berlin, where he would probably remain in seclusion until the affair blew over or imperial forgiveness was extended to him.

There was cause for satisfaction among us, even though the baron had fallen instead of the count. The sensational affair would serve to keep Tarnowsy under cover for some weeks at least and minimize the dangers attending the countess' flight from the country. Still, I could not keep myself disappointed over the outcome of the meeting. Why couldn't Count Tarnowsy have been the one to fall?

The countess, very pale and distrait, gave utterance to her feelings in a most remarkable speech. She said: "This is one of the few fine things that Maria has ever done. I am glad that he killed that man. He should have done so long ago, the beast! He was—ugh!—the most despicable creature I've ever known."

She said no more than this, but one could readily grasp all that she left unuttered.

Collingraft rather sententiously remarked to little Rosemary, who could not have comprehended the words of course, "Well, little Rosebud, your papa may be a spendthrift, but he never wastes bullets."

Which was entirely uncalled for, I contend. I was struck by the swift look of dread that leaped into Alice's eyes and her pallor.

On top of all this came the astonishing news by cipher dispatch from old Jasper Titus' principal adviser in London that his offer of $1,000,000 had been declined by Tarnowsy two days before, the count having replied through his lawyers that nothing short of two millions would induce him to relinquish all claims to his child.

I had been ignorant of this move in the case and expressed my surprise.

"I asked father to do it, Mr. Smart," said the countess dejectedly. "It seemed the easiest way out of our difficulties—and the cheapest. He will never give in to this new demand though. We must make the best of it."

"But why did you suggest such a thing to him?" I demanded with heat.

She looked hurt. "Because you seemed to think it was the right and honorable thing to do," she said patiently. "I do not forget what you said to me days and days ago even though it may have slipped your mind. You said that a bargain is a bargain and—well, I had Mr. Bangs write father just what you thought about it."

There was a suspicion of tears in her voice as she turned away and left me without another word. She was quite out of sight around the bend in the staircase and her little boots were clattering swiftly upward before I fully grasped the significance of her explanation—or, I might better say, her reproach. It slowly dawned upon me that I had said a great many things to her that it would pay me to remember before questioning her motives in any particular.

As the day for her departure drew nearer—it was now but forty-eight hours away—her manner seemed to undergo a complete change. She became moody, nervous, depressed. Of course all this was attributable to the dread of discovery and capture when she was once outside the great walls of Schloss Rothhoefen. I could understand her feelings and rather lamely attempted to bolster up her courage by making light of the supposed peril.

She looked at me with a certain pathetic somberness in her eyes that caused my heart to ache. All of her joyous raillery was gone, all of her gentle arrogance. Her sole interest in life in these last days seemed to be of a sacrificial nature. She was sweet and gentle with every one—with me in particular, I may say—and there was something positively humble in her attitude of self abnegation. Where she had once been wilful and ironic she was now gentle and considerate. Nor was I the only one to note these subtle changes in her. I doubt, however, if the others were less puzzled than I. In fact, Mrs. Titus was palpably perplexed, and there were times when I caught her eying me with distinct disapproval, as if she were seeking in me the cause of her daughter's weakness, as much as to say, "What other nonsense have you been putting into the poor child's head, you wretch?"

NAILS IN STONE WALLS.

Easy Method of Placing Them So They Will Remain Firm.

Few women know how to drive a nail into a brick wall, and yet it is what they often need to do for themselves if there is no man about.

The following method is easy and has been found entirely satisfactory: Having decided upon the exact spot into which the nail is desired to be driven, which must be in the plaster between the bricks, provide yourself with a hammer and screwdriver. With these tools commence worrling out the hard plaster by tapping the handle of the screwdriver. As the plaster turns to dust it must be blown or dusted out so that the size of the hole may be seen.

When a space about one inch long and nearly one inch deep has been worked out get a small piece of wood about the same size and with the hammer wedge it tightly into the space. When it seems firm take the nail and drive it into the wood. It will go in nicely, without bending, and remain firm an indefinite length of time. This same method was used at one time when it was decided to hang a hammock between the fence and the wall, with the exception that the hole was dug out a little longer and deeper than for an ordinary nail.—Minneapolis Journal.

Homemade Barometer.

Those who love experimentation may try the following method of making a cheap barometer practiced in France: Take eight grams of pulverized camphor, four grams of pulverized nitrate of potassium, two grams of pulverized nitrate of ammonia and dissolve in sixty grams of alcohol. Put the whole in a long, slender bottle closed at the top with a piece of bladder containing a pinhole to admit the air. When rain is coming the solid particles will tend gradually to mount, little star crystals forming in the liquid, which otherwise remains clear. If high winds are approaching the liquid will become thick, as if fermenting, while a film of solid particles forms on the surface. During fair weather the liquid will remain clear and the solid particles will rest on the bottom.

Renovating Our Furs

The present cold snap in the air reminds us that it is time to take out our furs and see that they are in a good state for service. Naturally, if the furs are valuable and require much attention, it is advisable to take them to a furrier, and have them renovated by professionals, but it is hardly worth while incurring much expense unless the furs are good. If, however, the furs merely require relining, this is a very simple affair, and even valuable furs can easily be relined at home. Unpick the old lining and press it carefully with a hot iron, taking care not to pull it out of shape. Then examine the interlining of wadding, and add another layer if any of the parts have become unduly crushed. Finally, cut a new lining, using the old one as a pattern. The sewing in of the new lining offers little difficulty if the arrangements of the old one is exactly followed.

If the furs require no alteration in style it is not a difficult task to renovate them, but when a set is much worn, it may be possible to make either a good stole or muff out of the two articles—and match them for a new muff or stole, as the case may be. This winter, however, fur trimmings are so fashionable that the best parts of a worn stole or other separate piece of fur can be utilized to good advantage.

The remodelling and making of a worn set is quite within the scope of the home worker. The lining must be removed and the fur opened out and well beaten with a light cane. Do not use gasoline for cleaning furs, as it destroys the natural oil and renders the hairs brittle. Examine the whole fur and mark all the worn places on the skin side of the pelt. Next sever the skin with a sharp knife. Take care only to cut through the skin, or else the fur will suffer. The cuts must be perfectly straight and even and it is as well to use a ruler to guide the knife. The patches must be cut the exact size of the worn pieces that have been removed and both the color and length of the fur must be carefully matched, or else the patch will show very perceptibly.

The sewing of the pelt offers some difficulties for the novice. Bring the hair sides of the fur together, the skins being on the outside. Then work the hair down between the skin, so that none shows above the cut-edge. The edges are then top-sewn together using strong linen thread. Draw the stitches firmly but not too tightly. When the seam is finished open it out and press it quite flat.

When sewing in the lining place a card over the fur and hold it firmly in position while the sewing is being done. This effectually prevents the hairs getting entangled in the thread during the process of sewing.

Furs are easily cleaned at home, although the process is rather a troublesome one, explains the British Times and Mirror. Strong, natural, undyed furs are readily washed. Select a nice, fine, but breezy day. Prepare a good lather, and wash the fur until it looks clean. Wash through second lather and then rinse in clean water. Shake the skin in the open air to get rid of as much moisture as possible, then hang on a line in the shade. Shake the fur at intervals and pull the pelt carefully into shape, and as it dries, rub it between the palms to make it soft and pliable. The fur must also be smoothed to make it set nicely. Dyed furs are cleaned with hot bran rubbed on with a swab of clean flannel. When the whole surface has been treated brush with a stiff brush, and shake well to get rid of the bran.

FROCKS AND THEIR TRIMMING

Braid On Chiffon---Chiffon on Serge

CAPE COLLARS AND CHOKERS

NEW YORK, Oct. 9.—Winter fashions have been fully settled upon and it is gratifying to say that for many a season, if ever, they have not been as attractive as they are this year. There is a charming variety. Fabrics are rich both in quality and colouring, trimmings are artistic, amid designs are simplicity itself.

Trimming Notes.

The simple serge and garbadine frocks, so much favoured for all daytime occasions, are trimmed effectively with braid, designs in soutache, Hercules, and novelty braidings; but the touches that render them distinctive are the curious colour notes that are being introduced for contrast on many of the smart new French models.

Pink silk embroidery is often seen on frocks of dark blue serge, and a dull reseda wool embroidery is unusually smart on dark blue: this wool embroidery is one of the new notions of the winter; it appears on collars, cuffs, girdles, and trimming bands of frocks, coats, and blouses. Heavy wool worked out in a rib effect to imitate wide Hercules braid, is a detail of many of the imported serge and gabardine dresses. The various conventionalized soutache patterns on a foundation of net or chiffon, often edged with a band of a flat silk braid or an edge of fur, is much in vogue for trimming the more dressy frocks; the wide braids, in nonmeerless attractive designs, are popular as well. The standing soutache designs are favoured for yokes and chemisettes and for the half belts so much a feature of the smart panel Princess dress. The wide braids are often used for an entire panel or yoke on a skirt; also for cuffs, and the standing band collars which appear on so many of these cloth dresses.

Cape Collars and Chokers.

Another quaint and becoming detail of these dark cloth dresses is the collar. Many of the plain redingote serge gowns are made with single or double cape collars. Coloured collars of all descriptions are being worn; turnover collars of coloured velvet add a smart touch to the choker of the simple dress, and the idea of the coloured chemisettes of the summer is being carried out for winter in failles and brocades, striped and figured velvets. Chemisettes of pale and pink faille, made with high, unlined, unboned collars, buttoning at the side and wrinkling about the throat like a mousquetaire glove, are worn with gowns of serge or velvet. The neckline of the dress is usually rounded in an old-fashioned curve and finished with a straight band of the material.

At one of the fall openings in Paris a chiffon afternoon frock was trimmed with wide, heavy Hercules braid, following this idea comes a frock of serge trimmed with soutached chiffon.

Interesting Buttons.

Among the button novelties, both for service and for trimming purposes, there is a large gold button, patterned after the main, four-holed porcelain underwear button; another is an acorn button of brilliants.

TORTURING SCIATICA

A Severe Sufferer Cured Through the Use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills

Fierce darting pains—pains like red hot needles being driven through the flesh—in the thigh; perhaps down the legs to the ankles — that's sciatica. None but the victim can realize the torture. But the sufferer need not grow discouraged for there is a cure in Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. These pills make new, rich, red blood, which soothes and strengthens the feeble nerves and thus frees them from pain and restores the sufferer to cheerful activity. In proof we give the statement of Mr. Thos. D. Lemaster, Wapella, Sask., who says: "I was attacked with sciatica which gradually grew worse until I was confined to my bed; for three months I had to be shifted and turned in my bed as I was utterly unable to help myself. I suffered the greatest torture from the fierce, stabbing pains that accompanied every movement. I consulted several doctors and took drugs and medicines until I was nauseated, but without getting any benefit, and I began to believe I would be a continuous sufferer. Finally I was prevailed upon to use Dr Williams' Pink Pills and after taking them for about six weeks I was able to get out of bed. From that on I kept steadily improving until I was free from this terrible and painful malady."

The most stubborn cases of sciatica will yield to Dr. Williams' Pink Pills if the treatment is persisted in. These pills are sold by all medicine dealers or will be sent by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 by addressing The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

THE HOME CIRCLE COLUMN

Pleasant Evening Reveries—A Column Dedicated to Tired Mothers as They Join the Home Circle at Evening Tide

CRUDE THOUGHTS FROM THE EDITORIAL PEN

What the harvest shall be will depend mainly on what we plant and sow.

A happy home is within the reach of every family if they only choose to make it so.

Childish laughter is the echo of heavenly music.

Stirring up bitterness in a neighbor's heart is never profitable or pleasant.

Young man, remember this: All the friends who can gather about you can never make your life a success; neither can your enemies make it a failure.

Verily the mother is the angel spirit of home. Her tender yearnings over the cradle of her infant babe, her guardian care of the child and youth, and her companionship with the man of her love and choice, make her the personal centre of the interest, the hopes and happiness of the family.

Too little attraction is paid to the small courtesies of the home. Fathers, mothers, grandparents and children should remember that happiness is derived from the little kindly acts and words of each member of a family. One alone cannot make a cheerful home if the rest make no effort.

When once a home is regarded as only a place to eat, drink and sleep in, the work is begun that ends in gambling-house and degradation. Young people must have fun and relaxation somewhere; if they do not find it at home they will seek it at other and less profitable places.

Mothers, how do you rule? By love or the much and often unjustly used rod? Is it love to rule so that the child is obedient through fear of you? Be more patient. Give a word of commendation, kindly little smile when your boy does the best he can. He will remember it in after years and, sitting by his own fireside, with his little ones around him, will tell them of his mother, who was ever ready to smile away the clouds and make his little heart swell with gladness.

How many shiftless idlers there are sighing, "If I had but a thousand a year what wonders would I do. "There are other things which they need far worse than a "thousand a year;" it is ambition, stir around, application, push and wise economy. Without these capital would only make them spendthrifts. With or without capital, all who deserve it can and do win wealth and character. They are within the reach of all. A great majority of our most successful men started in life and business with only the prospect of a "thousand a year."

Take as much care of your money as you can if your means are limited, but don't try to save your smiles or kind words. The more liberal you are with these the more you will have.

It takes very little brains and much less piety to constitute a first class grumbler.

MY SON.

I that had yearned for youth, my own, again,
And mourned the wasted hours of younger days,
I that had sighed for spring, for summer, when
The snow of winter covered all my ways—
I that had prayed for years, for only one,
Have found that prayer answered in my son.

He is myself again, with hopes of old,
With old temptations and with old desires;
He is myself again—the clay to mold
Into the man, and all the man aspires.
Who says that youth returns to us no more?
He is as I was in the days of yore.

In my own days, in my own days of youth,
Ah, how I wished a comrade and a friend!—
To help me keep the quiet path of truth,
And through temptations my own feet attend
So shall I journey onward by his side,
His father,—yet, his comrade and his guide.

I that have failed shall shape success in him,
I that have wandered point the proper path,
A signal when the signal lights are dim,
A root to fend him from the storms of wrath—
So we shall journey upward, I and he,
And he shall be the man I meant to be.

—Douglas Malloch in American Lumberman.

Many a man who prides himself on being self made is simply a product of his good wife.

To spoil your wife, find fault, and keep finding fault.

SCENTING LINEN.

A formula for a scent to place among her bed linen is usually liked by the dainty woman, and here is a most excellent one: One ounce powdered gum benzoin, one of powdered cloves, and two of powdered cinnamon. Add to these seven ounces of powdered cedarwood, and the same of dried lavender flowers. Mix, sift, and put into flat bags to lay between the sheets and smaller ones for the ships, or, if pads are made to fit the shelves it will answer as well.

FRUIT JARS.

To sterilize jars: Wash jars and fill with cold water. Set in a kettle on a trivet and surround with cold water. Heat gradually to the boiling point, remove from kettle, empty, and fill while hot. Let covers stand in hot water five minutes.

Dip rubber bands in hot water but do not allow them to stand. Always use new rubbers and see that the covers are in perfect shape.

SOME SAFE BEAUTIFIERS.

Sweet cream is an excellent cold cream and sour milk is as good a whitener for the face and arms as anyone could wish. Lave the skin in it, allowing it to dry on, then wash with clear, warm water. A piece of cucumber rubbed over the skin will remove tan, and a face wash in buttermilk or sour milk, into which has been grated a teaspoon of horseradish to a cup of milk, will remove both tan and freckles. A scalded milk bath will often cure obstinate skin affections. The milk should be allowed to dry on.

Beet juice will be found a perfect rouge, and an equally perfect face powder is made of six raw carrots scraped fine with half a beetroot, and after three ounces of powdered cornstarch has been added, expose to the sun until "done" dry. After adding 40 grains of powdered bergamot, it is sifted and boxed for use.

FOR SCANT EYEBROWS.

Pale, sparse eyebrows and lashes make a face expressionless. They can be coaxed into a better growth by rubbing the eyebrows nightly with vaseline and applying to the roots of both the eyebrows and eyelashes a tonic made by mixing five grains of sulphate of quinine with one ounce of sweet almond oil. Apply this with a fine sable brush, which comes for the purpose.

To encourage the growth of wheat on new land with the design of increasing the acreage devoted to that grain, the Australian Government guarantees four shillings a bushel for all harvested.

THE HOME OF CONVALESCENT

The home invalid, or convalescent, is often much to be pitied. It is not that members of the family are unkind; far from it. They just do not understand how to look after an invalid. With the best intentions in the world, they either overload her with attentions or leave her alone; the latter probably because it is a popular idea that invalids require a vast amount of sleep. The amateur nurse must endeavor to strike the happy medium as regards both food and recreation.

Florence Nightingale, in one of her books on nursing, writes that the convalescent must be treated like a little child. This is especially the case with a slow convalescent after a long and serious illness. The mind takes a long time to recover its tone, and soon tires of even the most interesting surroundings. The books supplied should be light and entertaining, and not call for deep thought. Picture papers are generally liked, as they require no effort beyond a look.

The feeding of invalids presents some difficulties. Sometimes the convalescent must have her appetite tempted; a other times it must be restrained. Always find out from the doctor the diet that will be allowed, and make as much variety in it as the diet-sheet will permit. This is rather difficult, but even in a milk diet there is a considerable variation to be gained if the home cook will try to discover different ways of serving the same thing. Take, for instance, chicken broth. This can be served one day as a simple broth the next day it may appear as a jelly, and if the patient is allowed to eat the flesh a whole series of dainties can be prepared, and the patient will not weary of the sameness of the diet.

The tray on which food is served should be covered with a dainty tray-cloth, and each dish should be individual advises the Bristol Times. Nothing should be served as helpings from the family table. The tiny glass jars which contain potted paste make ideal little moulds in which to set jellies. Being so small, one or two make a sufficient helping for an invalid. Very tiny pie-dishes, just large enough for a baked custard, can be purchased at many china shops.

Serve everything in its own tiny individual dish. The smallness of everything appeals in an unexpected way to an invalid; besides, nothing looks so terribly forlorn as a tiny jelly set in the centre of a big plate or dish.

A WEAK CHESTED BOY.

"My boy, Frank, seemed weak chested and took a very severe cold," writes Mrs D. Stevens, Nimgo, Man. "The many medicines used did not seem to benefit him until we tried Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine, and found it to be exactly what was wanted to cure him. No treatment is so thorough and effective as a cure for croup and bronchitis."

GRATEFUL PAPA

Miss Curley kept a private school, and one morning was interviewing a new pupil.

"What does your father do to earn a living?" the teacher asked the little girl.

"Please, ma'am," was the prompt reply, "he doesn't live with us. Mamma supports me."

"Well, then," asked the teacher, "how does our mother earn her living?"

"Why," replied the little girl, in an artless manner, "she gets paid for staying away from father." Malignant.

No, No.

An Old Country farmer lost his barn last year by fire. They said at the time that he was insured for more than the building was worth, and that he was not sorry to see the old shed destroyed. Unfortunately for his hopes, however, the insurance people took advantage of an opening in their policy and replaced the barn instead of giving him the money. Not long afterwards the travelling agent of a life insurance company came into the village, and, among others, solicited the old man to effect an assurance on his life. "No, no!" said the latter, "I should feel as if I were going to die to-morrow." "Well," said the agent, encouragingly, "if that's the case, you don't catch me there," replied the old man. "I know the way of insurance chaps: you would just go and give me another shot and even worse than the first."

FACED FOUR LIONS.

Coolness and Daring of a Plucky Kaffir Herdboy.

Four lions attacked a herd of cattle on a farm at Romsey, South Africa, says the Rhodesia Herald. The herdboy was standing on an ant heap examining a pair of boots he had got the day previous, when he heard a low growl near him. On looking up he saw that three lions had got hold of three cows, while another lion stood looking on.

The boy pulled off his boots and threw them at the nearest lion, and then made a rush for them with a stick, shouting at the same time at the top of his voice to another herdboy to bring a gun.

In the meantime two lions had got their cows down, but, nothing daunted, the Kafir made a rush for them, and the lions moved away from their prey. The boy then rounded up his cattle (he had 108 head), and while he was doing so had to chase the lions away several times. When he was at one side the lions would try to catch the cattle on the other. However, he brought all his cattle safely home, though one of the cows afterward died, the claw of a lion having penetrated her lung.

For cool daring it would be hard to beat the chasing of four lions single handed and with no weapons except a pair of boots and a stick.

LEARNING HOW TO UNLEARN.

Modern Scientists Harking Back to Thales of Miletus.

When we were young and knew without doubt that the molecule was composed of two or three ultimate parts, called atoms, we listened complacently to the statement that "science progresses in a straight line, philosophy around in a circle, or at best along a helical spiral." Now that we are older and believe that the simplest atom has nearly 1,800 parts, we find that perhaps the helix is expressive of science as well, observes the editor of the Engineering and Mining Journal.

We believe, with the alchemists, that the so called elements are fundamentally the same. Whether we will transmute one to another remains to be seen; we follow the alchemists in attempting it.

Were one of the Greek philosophers, Thales of Miletus, for instance, to stroll into a modern assembly of physicists and chemists, the language would be more troublesome than the ideas. He would hear the physical chemist remarking cheerfully that there is no matter, for that which we call matter is only energy, and Thales would remark, "Plagiarist." The disciples of relativity, the ultra modern physicists, would tell him that space and time are one, and Thales would sigh to think of his boyish debates.

John Locke.

John Locke, whose "Essay on the Human Understanding" was the first work that attracted attention in England to metaphysical speculation, was born at Wrington, England, Aug. 29, 1632, and died at Oates, England, Oct. 28, 1704. The chief purpose of the essay was to find the original source and scope of human knowledge. The conclusions he arrived at in this study were that there is no such thing as "innate idea; that the human mind is as a sheet of white paper prepared to be written upon; that the knowledge thereon written is supplied by experience and that sensation and reflection are the two sources of all our ideas." He made the first sketch when he was thirty-eight years of age and finished it seventeen years later. The book was bitterly attacked.

BURIED UNDER PAPERS.

Between Litter and Fires Life in De Quincey's Home Was Lively.

De Quincey's greatest extravagance grew out of the morbid value he set upon papers and their not being disturbed. He was in the habit of accumulating these until, in his own words, he was "snowed up," which meant that when matters reached such an extremity that there was not a square inch of room on the table to set a cup upon and no possibility of making his bed for the weight of papers gathered there; no chair which could be used for its legitimate purpose, and the track from the door to the fireplace, always kept open until the last, was completely obliterated so that he had not even place in which to set his foot—then De Quincey locked the door upon his paper treasures and turned elsewhere. At his death there were at least a half dozen such places "papered" by him and being maintained at no small expense.

Such a thing had been experienced as his actually "papering" his family out of house, but in later years his daughters learned how to guard against such a contingency.

De Quincey usually spent the evenings with his family, who looked forward to these hours with much pleasure. Upon the arrival of the newspaper he would render the news in his own quaint manner, questioning the various members of the group about him and illuminating the various subjects touched upon with a wealth of memories, good stories or human experiences until the happiest flow of real conversation sprang from the circumstances of the moment.

He was not a tranquillizing companion for nervous persons to live with, as those nights were the exceptions on which he did not set fire to something. It was a common occurrence for one of his daughters to look up from her work and to say casually, "Papa, your hair is on fire!" to which he would respond casually, "Is it, my love?" and a hand rubbing out the blaze was all the notice taken.

On one occasion, when the maid rushed in to announce that Mr. de Quincey's room was on fire, he hastened to the rescue of his already "snowed up" apartment, refusing all suggestions that water be poured upon his treasured papers. Armed with a heavy rug he disappeared into the burning room determined to conquer without water or perish in the attempt, while the members of his affrighted household trembled for his safety outside the door, locked to prevent the abhorred water from being poured in. Presently, after occasional bursts of smoke and a very strong smell of fire, all were assured that the danger was over, the victor emerged triumphantly from his fight with the flames, and the dreaded element having been subdued for the evening all retired in a state of thankfulness.—From Caroline Ticknor's "Hawthorne and His Publisher."

Fully Explained.

"When and why did James G. Blaine get his sobriquet, the Plumed Knight?" asked the Boston Globe man, who needn't think everybody has forgotten that Blaine was a candidate for the Republican nomination for president in 1876 and that Colonel Robert G. Ingersoll in placing his name before the national convention launched the sobriquet thus: "Like an armed warrior, like a plumed knight, James G. Blaine marched down the halls of the American congress and threw his shining lance full and fair against the brazen forehead of every defamer of this country and maligner of its honor." (Business of looking wise and patting ourself on the chest.)—Manchester Union.

A Bit of Blarney.

An Irishman who was begging in the street was asked by a lady how it was that such a fine, strong man as he should be asking for alms. With native blarney he replied:

"Lady, begging is the only profession I know in which a gentleman can address a beautiful woman without having an introduction."

The remark was quite profitable.—London Answers.

Moss Bread.

Along the shores of the Columbia river a kind of bread is made by the Indians from a moss that grows on the spruce fir tree. This moss is prepared by placing it in heaps, sprinkling it with water and permitting it to ferment. Then it is rolled into balls as big as a man's head, and these are baked in pits.

PAVED WITH GOLD.

There's Money in the Street Scrapings of an African Town.

Travelers declare, says Harper's Weekly, that at Axim, on the Gold Coast of Africa, gold may actually be picked up in the streets. When one visitor, an Englishman, took the statement as a mere figure of speech his host immediately bade a woman servant go out into the main street, gather a bucketful of road scrapings and work it for gold dust.

In ten minutes the servant returned with two galvanized iron buckets, one filled with road scrapings and the other with water. She also brought three or four wooden platters, varying in size from a large plate to a saucer.

Removing several handfuls of the road scrapings and placing them in the large platter, the woman picked out and threw aside the large stones, pebbles and bits of stick and then moistened the remainder with water from the other bucket. This enabled her to remove smaller refuse.

The residuum she put into the next smaller platter, and she repeated the process until there was a quantity of sand and gravel ready for treatment. This she sprinkled freely with water and by a deft circular movement of the platter brought the small gravel to the outside, where it could be thrust over the edge. When she had repeated this operation three or four times she treated the material, which now looked more like mud than anything else, in a still smaller platter.

At last, in the smallest platter of all, she had the bucketful of sweepings reduced to a handful or two of black sand. This she carefully washed and sifted. At last with a dexterous twist she brought the sand into a crescent, the outer edge of which showed a thin rim of yellow. It was unmistakably gold dust. The whole operation had taken half an hour, and it had produced about a shilling's worth of gold.

PIGS AND FIGURES.

Porkers From the Standpoint of All Around Mathematics.

The educated pig of the old time sideshow, which gravely read figures on a blackboard, was only a type of a class. His modern prototype is quite his equal in devotion to the exact science. By both instinct and fate he is a mathematical animal. Subjectively and objectively he is great on figures. They are dealt out to him, and he deals in them himself. He desires his square meals to be regulated daily by the rule of three. In addition, he deals with his owner's indebtedness. He is able to reduce a mortgage to fractions with amazing rapidity. In measuring the available contents of a pail of slop he is a lightning calculator.

As a multiplier the pig has no equal, counting on six to the litter and two litters in the year. At this rate, barring accidents, the sow's progeny will amount to more than 1,000 in four years. A weak old pig is up in geometry, finding the way home along the hypotenuse short cut. An old sow's quickness in boxing the compass in a potato patch is amazing. And when it comes to a troughful of skimmilk she is the least common divisor; she wants it all herself.

Objectively the porker finds himself stacked about with a bewildering array of figures—his gains every day on pasture, his gains every day on grain, his gains to the pound of grain, his gains on pasture plus a daily ration, his gains on vegetables and roots—these and a hundred other tabulations surround him. Profit or loss, so far as the pig is concerned, is almost purely a matter of feeds and feeding, and these are in their turn matters of almost pure mathematical measurements; hence have resulted the long listed calculations available to the farmer.—W. J. Harsha in Breeder's Gazette.

Selling the Kettle.

Mrs. Campbell had engaged a new maid. "Martha," said the mistress on the first morning, "be careful always to boil the tea'kettle before making the tea."

Martha signified her willingness and, after an absence in the kitchen, returned to her mistress and said:

"Please, mum, there's nothin' big enough to boil the tay'kettle in, 'less 'tis the wash boiler, sure."—National Monthly.

War in the Air.

During the hottest fighting at the battle of Chichamauga an owl, alarmed by the unusual sounds, was frightened from its usual haunts. Two or three crows spied him and made pursuit, and a fight in the air followed. The contest was observed by a soldier. He dropped his gun to the ground and exclaimed:

"Whew! Even the very birds in the air are fighting!"

Train Of Thought Induced By a Letter About Fruit-a-tives

MR. D. McLEAN

Orillia, Ont., Nov. 28th, 1914.

"For over two years, I was troubled with Constipation, Drowsiness, Lack of Appetite and Headaches. I tried several medicines, but got no results and my Headaches became more severe. In a very short time, I began to feel better, and now I feel fine. Now I have a good appetite, relish everything I eat, and the Headaches are gone entirely. I cannot say too much for 'Fruit-a-tives', and recommend this pleasant fruit medicine to all my friends". DAN McLEAN.

FAMOUS WINTERS IN PARIS.

Once Every River in France Was Ice and Every Mill Idle.

Recalling famous winters in France, the Paris Petit Journal says that "the fifteenth century might justly be called the cold century.

"In 1408 the registrars of the parliament of Paris reported that it was impossible to issue any of its resolutions because the ink froze in the ink bottles of the clerks. Every three words they had to thaw their pens, and this with a fire roaring in their room. Every river in France was frozen, and not a mill could work. Twelve years later, in 1420, there was a repetition of this winter. Foodstuffs gave out, and poor people died by tens of thousands.

"In 1422 in less than three days the wine and the vinegar froze in the cellars; cocks and hens had their combs frozen; the streets were full of people who danced, jumped, wrestled and ran races, anything to keep off frostbite.

"In 1430 it froze for more than two and a half months, and the snow fell for forty days without stopping. All the birds hidden in the trunks of trees died.

"In 'the year of the great winter,' as 1608 was called, hundreds of persons died from cold. Everything was frozen hard, even the bread served at the table of Henry IV. In 1709 all the wheat was destroyed, and a new sowing had to be made in the spring. Buffon relates that no bread was to be had. Even Mme. de Maintenon had to go without it.

"In 1776 sentinels were found frozen to death outside Versailles, and the king put a stop to this service. In Paris great bonfires were lit in the streets. Bells were shivered into pieces as they rang, clocks stopped and in the cellars wine turned into ice. Hares and partridges came into the towns and hid themselves in the nooks and corners of houses, where they were subsequently found as stiff as a board and quite inedible."

HUNTING THE CARIBOU.

Curiosity Often Lures the Watchful Animal to Its Fate.

In hunting the caribou quietness is essential. Never break a twig if you can avoid it, for a cracking branch makes a noise which carries far and may give warning of your approach to the very stag you particularly want. Equally important is it to keep a sharp lookout at all times, especially when entering a barren, where a stag may be sleeping, for under such conditions they are hard to see. Among the numerous gray dead stumps and moss covered low trees the color of the caribou is so inconspicuous that the untrained eye will fail to detect the animal even at close range. The first intimation will be a glimpse of a disappearing patch of white as the caribou vanishes into the woods.

All these things considered, the caribou of Newfoundland is not as alert as any other deer that I know of and is therefore more readily approached. There is, of course, great variation among them, some being extremely alert and difficult to stalk, while others are so absurdly tame that they will allow a man to walk right up to within a few yards before taking flight. Curiosity is often a noticeable failing with them. When once it is aroused they will go to almost any length to satisfy it. I do not, however, advise the hunter to count too much on it, for the very thing which you imagine will tempt this curiosity will as likely as not frighten them away. Sometimes a strange noise will make them very inquisitive, and they will come within a few feet to find out what it is. Then, occasionally, a white handkerchief will have the same effect.—A. Radcliffe Dugmore in "The Romance of the Newfoundland Caribou."

WIGS, HOODS AND CAPS.

Shaven Saints and Sphinxheads of Old Egyptian Headgear.

The reliefs and paintings on the walls of the tombs and temples of the Egyptians show that that race of people were thick and elegant headdressers. Hats with brims were apparently unknown. Their headgear consisted of wigs, hoods and caps.

"The wigs were very likely made of hair or tow, for their great size could not have been made by dressing of a person's own hair; the caps were also very large and high and made of material which as to its kind can only be guessed at," says Charles R. Koster in a history and development of hats and headgear.

"The largest were cupola shaped, and their use was probably confined," he further says, "to those of royal blood. They were yellow, white and red. It is supposed that the yellow ones were made of brass and were a kind of helmet, that the white was the crown of upper Egypt and the red the crown of lower Egypt. The pschent, a combination of the white and red, was considered as the symbol of the rule over the land. Lower flat crowned caps were worn both alone and over a hood, and sometimes with a strap under the chin to hold the headpiece in place. The huge wigs were probably worn upon the shaven heads, as it is supposed that the clean shaven head was as prevalent in Egypt as it is now in tropical Asia."

A Reason For Years.

An amusing story about Dr. Archibald Pitcairne, the physician, Jacobite and scholar, is told by Francis Watt in "The Book of Edinburgh Anecdotes."

Dr. Pitcairne was not often a churchgoer, but on one occasion he took refuge in a church from a shower of rain. The sermon was commonplace, but the preacher was emotional, and he wept copiously and, as it seemed to Pitcairne, irrelevantly. He turned to the only other occupant of the pew, a stolid countryman, and whispered, "What on earth gave the man great (weep)?"

"You would maybe greet yourself," was the solemn answer, "if you was up there and had as little to say."

Misleading Bookkeeping.

Even bookkeeping is not an exact science. For behold! how often is it that one man will put into the expense account a given expenditure—say, the rebuilding of a machine—thus reducing his profits by this amount, while another will put such an item to the asset account, and each can advance weighty arguments and reasons as to the logic of his methods. But the net results of operation will differ widely with the same actual occurrences, so that even bookkeeping may be said merely to present results dependent upon the aspects of the situation as rendered by those who have the authority or opportunity to interpret.—Benjamin A. Franklin in Engineering Magazine.

Points of the Crescent Moon.

Why does the moon sometimes appears with points turned upward and at other times downward? There is one cause only—the rotation of the earth. If the moon rises with points turned upward then, when it sets, the points must turn downward—that is, the western horizon meets the points in its apparent approach; they point toward it, apparently downward, in the western sky.—New York American.

A Best Survival.

The dghaisa (pronounced dyzal, the gondola of Malta, is a survival, says John Wignacourt in "The Odd Man In Malta," of the oldest vessel ever used and varies little in shape from the Egyptian boats of the dead. Actually the eye of Osiris is still to be seen upon the prow. It is propelled by two experienced saramen, one of whom always stands. When the Gregale wind is sweeping the harbors and the steam ferries are unsafe you can still use the trusty dghaisa. It is a gay little craft, painted in brilliant colors—in this respect a contrast to the somber gondola of Venice.

Pleasant For the Callers.

Two ladies made a formal call on a distant acquaintance. The maid asked them to wait until she ascertained whether the person inquired for was in. Presently she tripped downstairs and announced that "the lady was not at home." One of the callers, finding that she had forgotten her cards, said to her friend, "Let me write my name on your card."

"Oh, it isn't at all necessary, miss," put in the maid cheerfully; "I told her who it was."—New York Globe.

Sensitive About Her Age.

An aged woman by the name of Samantha Skaggs, who for many years had resided near Riplet, Ill. and was known by her numerous descendants and all the people of the country-side as Grandmother Skaggs, was compelled to go to court to testify in a lawsuit over a disputed will.

"Mrs. Skaggs," said the attorney for the defense, in cross-examining her, "may I ask how old you are?"

"Do I have to tell you judge?" she said, appealing to the court.

"Why, yes madam," replied the judge. "It's a proper question, and at your time of life you surely need not be sensitive about your age."

"Well," she answered, I'm 97."

But she told it with evident embarrassment and reluctance.

She knew that everybody in the neighborhood believed her to be 100.

"The man who tells us of our faults is our best friend," quoth the philosopher. "Yes; but he won't be long," added the mere man.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

Ruben's Old Dad

What Ruined Him All to Squash

By M. QUAD

Copyright, 1915, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate

I got out at a small railroad station in Tennessee, to find a crowd in front of a saloon, and as I began inquiring the cause of the excitement a young man of twenty turned and replied:

"Stranger, I can tell ye all about it. Do you want to see the corpse?"

"Is some one dead?"

"Dead as a coon track, and it's my own dad at that."

"Been a row here?"

"Not a bit of it. Dad jest made a fule of hisself. He's in thar waitin' fur a cart to take hisself home to be laid out and buried."

"Never seed nuthin' to eka! it in all my bo'n days," said a man in the crowd.

"I was right yere or I wouldn't hev suiggered to it nohow," added a second.

"It was jest this way, stranger," continued the son as he picked a sliver off a pine box and began to whittle at it with a spring back jackknife: "Dad and me comes down yere this mornin' to buy a mewl. Dad was powerful frisky all the way down, and he sez to me, sez he:

"'Ruben, I kin outwalk, outrun, outshute, outholler and outlick anything on top of this yere airth's surface.'

"I sees dad was purty chucky, and I sez to him, I sez:

"'Dad, you's top of the heap round yere, and nobody kin deny it, but doan' you go and meet up with no fight in town. We's arter a mewl, we is, and we doan' want no fussin' nor nuthin'.'

"And with that dad jumps fo' feet high, and cracks his heels together, and whoops out that he's b'ar traps, pizen, powder and catamount all boiled down into one, and that he's dangerous if anybody goes to pick up his hind foot."

"Yaas, and I hears him holler when he's a mile away," said one of the crowd.

"Of co'se you did," replied Ruben; "of co'se. Dad was powerful on hollerin'. He'd holler a b'ar out'n a tree half a mile away. When he got down yere thar was a feller from Memphis with a patent liftin' masheen a-standin' right yere. Thar's the pieces of it agin this fence, while the feller hisself is ten miles away and still runnin'."

"But 'twasn't his fault," protested a man on muleback.

"I ain't sayin' as 'twas," placidly answered Ruben. "I'm sayin' as dad got mixed up and made a fule of hisself. No sooner had he set eyes on the masheen than he cracks his heels together and crows like a rooster and sez to me, sez he:

"'Ruben, I kin pull the hull state of Tennessee right up by the roots if I kin git a brace fur my feet.'

"Yaas, I heard him say them remarks," put in one of the crowd.

"Of co'se he said 'em," continued Ruben; "of co'se. He spit on his hands, grabbed them 'ere handles and when he straightened up I jest felt the ground tremblin' all around."

"So'd I!" called seven or eight voices in chorus.

"Dad had one side of the hull country lifted up two foot high when there was a rip and a smash, them handles tore out, the mashean flew to pieces and the airth sunk back with a chug which made us dizzy."

"Then your father had broken a blood vessel or something of the sort?" I queried.

"Skeesaly, stranger, skeesaly. Dad wasn't no man to stop at one blood vessel. He jest busted hisself all to pieces and was a goner afore we could reach him. I might say he sort of run together and caked. He was six foot high when he grabbed them 'ere handles, and now you can't make him over four foot eight as he lays in thar on a board. Jest pulled his knees up and his shoulders down, and I reckon his pants would hold his galluses up if inar was any outfolks to 'em. The man who owned the mashean wasn't to blame—of co'se he wasn't—but when he seed the calamity he started fur Knoxville on the jump, and he was jumpin' when he turned the co'ner of the hill up thar. Dad's in yere, stranger. Come and take a look. Mighty good man he was."

"And you are waiting to take the body home?" I queried as a wagon drove up to the shed.

"That's it, stranger."

"It will be a sad sight for your mother to see the body come home."

"Toler'bly sad, toler'bly sad," replied the young man, "though she's been expectin' it for the last ten yu'rs. I know about what she'll say. As the wagon drives up and she sees me she'll stand in the door and call out:

"'Has it happened this time, Ruben?'

"'Yep, maw.'

"'Smashed up or dead?'

"'Dead as a dead rabbit!'

"'Tackle an elephant, did he?'

"'Wurs'n that, maw.'

"'A hull circus?'

"'And wuss than that. He tried to lift the hull airth on one of them masheens.'

"'Shoo! Shoo! And it busted him?'

"'All to smash!'

"'Doctor look at him?'

"'Two of 'em, and both agreed that his prancin' days was over.'

"'Waal, I knowed they'd be if he kept whoopin' it up, an' mebbe he's better off. At least we'll allow that he is, and you cum in and cut some wood and feed the hawg and we'll git an early start to bury him in the mawnin'.'"

Census Reports Take Time.

Each United States census report represents a compilation of statistics for the entire country, and much time is required to make an actual canvass and to publish the results. For example, in the census of manufacturers uniform reports must be secured from more than 270,000 establishments and in the census of agriculture from more than 6,000,000 farms. In collecting statistics from manufacturers, farmers, electric light and power plants, electric railways and other interests it is necessary to allow a sufficient time to fill out the schedule so as not to interfere with the conduct of private business.

Kangaroo Tendons.

In Australia kangaroo farming is an important industry. The hides are valuable, and the tendons extremely fine. Indeed, they are the best known to surgeons for sewing up wounds, and especially for holding broken bones together, being much finer and tougher than catgut.—London Globe.

Defectives.

"Here's a story about a man with a cork leg, a cork arm, a rubber ear, a glass eye and a wig."

"He must be one of those defectives there's so much agitation about."—Buffalo Express.

NURSED A HOT TEMPER.

Something Had to Give Way When William Morris Broke Loose.

Though explosive tempers may not be admirable and temperamental explosions are not always harmlessly expended, they are always preferable to soreness, quiliness, brooding resentment or cold anger. Arthur Compton-Rickett in his study of William Morris—that "jolly vivid man," as he terms him—relates several new instances of Morris' violent thunderings of temper and swiftly ensuing sunniness and sweetness.

Once while he was painting he was called from the room, and presently his startled model heard him furiously anathematizing some one outside whom he dismissed or ejected and then returned a moment later still boiling with wrath. He could not resume his work, but made wild dashes about the room, growling and muttering, until at last in a culminating access of rage he took a flying kick at the door and with a vast crashing and splintering smashed in a panel. It was too much for his model's nerves, and he started to flee, but at that moment Morris, with his ire entirely gone now that the explosion was over, turned with a beaming smile, and assured him genially:

"It's all right, it's all right, but something had to give way!"

FLAVOR OF FOOD.

It Is an Important Factor in Digestion and Good Health.

If it were not for flavor we should not digest our food properly. Epicureanism in eating is the handmaid of good health. Flavor has been called the soul of food. The viands that are most agreeable to our sense of taste, those we enjoy most, are those we are most likely to digest well and from which we are most likely to derive the maximum of nourishment.

A book was devoted to this subject by Henry T. Finck of New York. He called it "Food and Flavor." In a review of it the Scientific American says: "The psychic factor of desire must precede ingestion or results will be unpropitious. To each cent spent for nutriment we add five more for flavor. Flavor, in short, has an appetizing value, a health value, a commercial value.

"The evolution of a discriminating appetite and the education of the cook must go hand in hand. But your glutton is never an epicure. Rational mastication must accompany the highest enjoyment of food, and in this enjoyment lie perfect assimilation and health. It is flavor that stimulates the flow of the digestive juices; it is the digestive juices that prepare the food for the extraction of nutriment."

The Professor Was Wrong.

Several decades ago a learned professor delivered a course of lectures, in one of which he proved to his own satisfaction that the Atlantic ocean could never be crossed by steam. Steam power had been discovered and applied on land, but he was confident it could never be applied to the ocean. Under the peculiar conditions of the heaving tides, the danger of storms, the rolling of the tide, and so forth you could never apply steam to navigation across the Atlantic. The book in which that lecture was published was on the first steamer that crossed the Atlantic. The captain took it along as a sort of curiosity. That book did not have a very large sale, but there has been quite a run of steamers ever since, and the professor ceased to argue that steam could not be utilized on the ocean.—Christian Herald.

Salting One's Smoke.

The strangest way of taking his salt was probably Dr. Parr's. Telfourd records that he used to fill his pipe half with the finest tobacco and half with salt. After that it is not very surprising to learn that he smoked "with a philosophical calmness." On one occasion when the two met Charles Lamb's furious smoking of the strongest tobacco filled Dr. Parr with astonishment. Gently laying down his pipe, he inquired how Lamb had arrived at his power of smoking at such a rate. "I toiled after it, sir, as some men toil after virtue," was Lamb's reply.—London Graphic.

Strychnine.

Strychnine is one of the most powerful vegetable poisons known, but it has very odd effects. Up to about one thirty-second of a grain it is often used in medicine as a stimulant. Very little more is required to bring on that peculiar state known as "tetanus," in which the muscles lock themselves up into such hard masses that they are as rigid as bone. An overdose, however, has been known in at least one instance to cure itself.—Exchange.

How He Felt.

"You act as though you thought yourself superior to the government."

"Well," replied the genial egotist, "I do feel slightly superior. As a taxpayer when I owe the government anything I pay. When the government owes me anything it does as it likes about the matter."—Washington Star.

Plenty of Hopeless Ones.

At the age of twenty-five a man can be forgiven for thinking he knows it all, but if he hasn't changed his mind at forty there is no hope for him.—Toledo Blade.

Faint Heart.

"Have you spoken to father yet?"

"Certainly. I said 'Good evening' when I passed him in the hall."—Pennsylvania Punch Bowl.

Doctor Said Only Hope Was In An Operation

Was Skeptical When He Began the Use of Dr. Chase's Ointment—Relief Came Quickly

Here is a plain, honest statement in regard to Dr. Chase's Ointment. Between the lines of this letter you can read the gratitude which its writer feels. One dose not suffer from annoying, distressing piles for ten years without appreciating a cure when it is obtained.

Almost every mail brings the report of someone who has been cured of piles by the use of Dr. Chase's Ointment. Such statements are never used without the permission of the writer, and until we are satisfied that the cure is genuine and the writer a person of responsibility.

You may believe in operations for piles, and think there is no other cure. Write to Mr. Ingles, enclosing stamp, and he will gladly verify his statement. He will tell you that the pain, the expense, the risk of an operation are quite unnecessary. That relief and cure come with the use of Dr. Chase's Ointment.

Mr. Ernest W. Ingles, Penticton, B.C., writes: "I suffered from piles for ten years, and though I tried all kinds of ointments and injections I really had no permanent relief until I used Dr. Chase's Ointment. When I began this treatment I had absolutely no faith in it, for I had been examined by a well-known physician in Vancouver, and he said that an operation was the only thing that would benefit me. It was surprising the relief I obtained from the very first box, and now, after using four boxes, I am practically cured. My case was so exceptionally bad that I received no relief day or night, and for this reason the results are wonderful."

You can obtain Dr. Chase's Ointment from any dealer at 60 cents a box. If you do not want to risk this much send a two-cent stamp to pay postage, and mention this paper, and we shall send you a sample box free. We are so certain that any sufferer from piles will obtain relief by using this ointment that we do not hesitate to make you this offer. Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto.

PARISIAN BEGGARS.

Clever Rogues Who Study the Weak Points of Their Victims.

An accomplished mendicant, like a clever salesman, studies his customers, discovers their weak points if he can and trades upon them. In this relation it is of interest to note the skillful methods whereby a certain class of Parisian beggars play upon the superstitions of their victims.

There is a common saying in France that giving alms brings good fortune, a saying that has not been overlooked by the Parisian beggar. If one visits the Sorbonne on the days of examination for the bachelor's degree he will see an interesting sight. The collegians approach, each with his dictionary under his arm, on his way to make the famous Latin version, on the success of which all his future depends. A crowd of beggars surround them.

"A sou, monsieur; a morsel of bread," the beggar will say to a collegian. "It will bring you happiness."

The candidate hurries on. "You will be blackballed, monsieur," the beggar continues.

This sinister prediction always takes effect. The collegian pulls out his purse, and the beggar turns away, chuckling.

A similar scene may be witnessed at the Hotel de Ville on the days of examination for certificate of ability for teaching. When there are no examinations in progress there may be races, and to them go the beggars, for gamesters and sporting men are notoriously superstitious.—Washington Star.

The Duke and the Artist.

In "Random Recollections" is this story of the Duke of Connaught. The incident happened at Windsor castle. The duke was criticising a water color done by R. Caton Woodville, representing a drummer in the guards:

"Look here, Mr. Woodville," he said, "you have made a mistake in the mounting of the braiding on this drummer's coat; the fringe on the side of the chest ought to run in this direction," indicating the line. "I am certain of it, for as a boy I wore the uniform, but I will show you what I mean," and, turning to his A. D. C., he asked him to have the bugler of the castle guard sent up. The bugler came, and the duke, turning toward him, said, "Now, Mr. Woodville, I will show you what I mean." And then, as he looked critically at the boy's uniform, he exclaimed, "By Jove, Mr. Woodville, you are right, after all!"

Not Due Yet.

"Does your wife ever nag you?" asked the first walking gentleman.

"No," answered the second. "We've only been married a year. She calls it coaxing so far."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Imaginary evils soon become real ones by indulging reflections on them.

ECZEMA AND SORE EYES.

"My daughter suffered from inflamed eyelids and eczema on her head," writes Mr. H. W. Lear, Port Planford, Nfld. "The child was in a bad state and suffered greatly. The doctor failed to help her and on recommendation of a friend I used Dr. Chase's Ointment, which made a complete cure. With a grateful heart I write you this letter."

An Indian's Joke.

Indians extract no little quiet enjoyment from what seem to them to be oddities in the speech, manners and customs of white people. An Arapahoe stepped into the store of a trader one day to purchase some tobacco. The trader's son was in charge of the place. Now, this son was of that embarrassing stage of growth when the voice is changing, so that he never could tell whether many tones would issue from his lips or babylike falsetto or de profundis bass. On this occasion when the Indian asked for tobacco the youth's bass notes held the right of way, though they were speedily followed by ascending tones up to a squeaky falsetto.

He asked the Indian, "Will you have fine cut tobacco or a plug?" beginning in a growl and ending in birdlike soprano.

The Arapahoe listened gravely to this vocal variety and then without a smile reversed the process and, beginning with the youth's highest note and ending with his lowest, scaled, "I think I'll take some plug."—Southern Workman.

Music Born of Sorrow.

There is no nation naturally musical, according to Henri Bideu, critic and historian. If a nation is musical, he says, it is because it has passed through such tribulation that it has been driven to express its sorrow and anxiety in its airs and compositions. Bach, he declares, is the culminating expression of sufferings induced in Germany by the Thirty Years' war, fifty years before Bach's time.

People sing "like cowards," he continues, to keep up their spirits in bad moments, and he finds that the real countries of music are nearly all frontier provinces exposed to external vicissitudes.

England he finds exempt to a large extent from the occasions in which poets "learn in suffering what they teach in song" because it is protected from invasion by the girdle of the seas. Music, then, he argues, is not an art of peace; it originates in strife and anxiety, not in tranquillity and concord. The overprosperous countries, he discovers, "not only have no history; they have no music."—Chicago Inter Ocean.

COST OF FEEDING PRISONERS IS THREE CENTS A MEAL

Interesting Figures Gleaned From the Annual Report Concerning the County Gaol—Three Hundred and Five Prisoners Were Incarcerated During the Year

The high cost of living holds no terrors for the inmates of the county gaol. According to the annual report which has been forwarded to the department, the average daily cost of feeding each prisoner, is nine and a quarter cents or slightly over three cents per meal. How this is accomplished is somewhat of a mystery which only Harry Waters, the gaol chef, can solve. The prisoners look fat and sleek.

The gaol contains eighteen cells which open out on four corridors.

CHOICE RECEIPTS

Eggless Cookies.

One cup sugar, one cup lard, one cup buttermilk, one teaspoonful of soda, one teaspoonful of nutmeg. Sprinkle granulated sugar over top just before cutting. Bake in a quick oven.

Peach Pudding.

Fill pudding dish with whole peeled peaches, pour over one pint water, cover and bake till peaches are tender, drain off juice and let cool; add to it two cups milk, four well-beaten eggs, one scant cup flour mixed with one teaspoon baking powder, one cup sugar, one tablespoon melted butter, pinch salt; beat hard four minutes, pour over peaches in dish, bake to rich brown and serve with cream. When fresh peaches cannot be had canned peaches do very nicely.

Chocolate Cookies.

One cup sugar, two eggs, half a cup milk, one cup raisins and nuts, one teaspoon vanilla, half a cup melted butter, one teaspoon soda, two cups flour, three squares chocolate. Mix the melted butter with the sugar, add the beaten yolks and melted chocolate, to this add soda to the milk and then add the milk and one-half the flour to the sugar and eggs, mix well, add the raisins with remainder of flour, add beaten whites and vanilla and beat well. Drop from the spoon to bake on buttered baking sheets. May be frosted with fudge frosting.

HINTS TO HOUSEKEEPERS

Layer Cake Baked in one Pan.

When you have not the pans in which to bake individual layers, try putting into a loaf cake tin a very little batter, smoothing it down and then adding paraffin paper cut to fit the tin; continue as before, alternating layers of batter with paper. The cake will come out whole and can be easily separated into layers by lifting the paper beneath each section. When this is done, using a rectangular pan, the cake is novel in appearance and very easy to cut into a number of pieces.

Removing Rust Spots.

To remove rust spots on cotton or linen, rub with table salt and squeeze lemon juice over it or put the juice on first and then salt. Either way will do. Then lay on grass in the sun if in summer time, if not, just hold the spot over the teakettle spout and the steam will do what the heat of the sun will, take it out.

Starching Sheer Collars.

If borax is used instead of starch for the thin collars now in vogue, they will be more transparent. Use one tablespoon of borax to one quart of soft water.

Ironing Help.

When ironing I use the inside wrapper which comes around soap to wipe the iron on. You will find that the iron will not stick on the starched clothes if the irons are kept polished in this way.

Novel Uses for Potato Ricer

It is such tedious work putting vegetables and fruit through a colander. A quicker and more effective way is to use a common potato ricer. Use a spoon to stir the food around first to get most of the juice out. Then press the handle of your ricer down. Tomatoes for soup, pumpkin for pies, fruits for butter, etc., are some of the articles which can be treated in this way.

Clean the Stove Pipes.

Stove pipes should be thoroughly cleaned of soot before being used in the autumn, not only as a precaution against fire, but because the soot acts as an insulation, and keeps the pipe cool. Instead of the heat radiating from a warm pipe, it is carried up the chimney and wasted.

Work Without Worry.

The picking up of toys is a task much disliked by most children, but when the fairy "Make-believe" with a wave of her magic wand turns the toy box into a tall-masted ship with great white sails, and Bobby begins to whistle, "like a policeman's" the loading of the cargo becomes a delight.

EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

LADY'S BOX PLEATED SKIRT.

By Anabel Worthington.

No skirt is more in favor just now than the box pleated one. This is not by any means an easy skirt to make with satisfaction to the wearer, because the adjustment of the pleats around the body is a rather difficult matter. It demands an accurate pattern and great care in the making.

In the design herewith submitted to our readers we have this skirt cut in one piece, or at least in a single length. The pleats are laid as closely together as possible and must be taped to hold them in place.

Some women run a line of stitching down the inner edges of each pleat as far as the hips, or even further, and this holds the material in place better than any other method in general use. It is then easy to press the skirt if it gets damp and out of shape.

Material counts for much in a pleated skirt. It is a type which shows well in plaids and stripes especially. Plain fabrics are also suitable and do not weary one as do the plaids after continued wearing.

These skirts are favored for use with short jackets of various sorts, and they always look well with a coat that is not too long.

The pattern, No. 7,329, is cut in sizes 26 to 34 inches waist measure. Medium size requires 7⅝ yards of 54 inch material.

This pattern can be obtained by sending 20 cents to the office of this paper.

When ordering patterns be sure your name and address as well as the number and size of pattern required, and age of a child.

Price 10 cents, or 2 for 25c.

The Women Fighters On The Russo-Austrian Front

LONDON, Oct. 1.—Mr. Francis Molnar, the well known Hungarian war correspondent, in describing the Galician "Ukraina Volunteers," a force some 2,000 strong, reveals an interesting fact. He says that many women have fought among the ranks of this force, dressed in regular men's uniforms, since early in the war, and that the same curious conditions exist in some of the Russian regiments also.

"The most interesting characteristic of the Ukraina Volunteers," he writes, "is that there are women soldiers among them—women dressed in the regular uniform of the force, with a yellow-blue cockade on their caps—the volunteer sign—some twenty in number, some of them wearing the Order 'For Valor,' and promoted to non-commissioned ranks. They perform the same duties as the men and are engaged in the very same work at the front as their male colleagues, walk about with an air of sincerity, and carry their rifles just as the ordinary soldier does. According to international law, they come into the same category as men armed and uniformed, and the Russians treat them and regard them in the same way as we regard the Russian women fighting among their forces.

"I have had a long conversation with one of these girl soldiers, Miss Sophie Haletchko. She is a most feminine, fine faced, but delicately built girl of twenty-four, very earnest and pretty. She wears a shabby looking uniform; the three stars on her collar denote her rank as a sergeant. She tells me that she has been fighting for a year now, feels perfectly fit and has only been ill for nine days.

"She comes from Lemberg, and before the war was a student in the Graz University, where she studied German and Slav philology. When the war broke out she joined the Ukraina Volunteers, for she thought everybody ought to go. She received her medal for cavalry patrol work, and her rank was also given to her for patrol services. Around Huane village she succeeded in slipping through the Russian lines with the cavalry patrol under her command and brought important information. As Synovodzko she was also in command of a patrol of hussars, and after this she received the medal.

"She tells me that her friend, who joined the force with her, Miss Olesa Atepaniw, is a prisoner of war in Russia. She is also a Lemberg girl, nineteen years old, and she was one of the most gallant and brave soldiers in the force. A patrol commander also, and a sergeant, she has had her decoration as well. She covered the retreat of the others with a handful of men at Belechow until the Russians surrounded them, and then took them prisoners."

HOW YOU MAY THROW AWAY YOUR GLASSES

The statement is made that thousands wear eyeglasses who do not really need them. If you are one of these unfortunates, then these glasses may be ruining your eyes instead of helping them. Thousands who wear these "windows" may prove for themselves that they can dispense with glasses if they will get the following prescription filled at once. Go to any active drug store and get a bottle of Bon-Opto tablets, fill a two-ounce bottle with warm water and drop in one Bon-Opto tablet. With this harmless liquid solution bathe the eyes two to four times daily, and you are likely to be astonished at the results right from the start. Many who have been told that they have astigmatism, eye-strain, cataract, sore eyelids, weak eyes, conjunctivitis and other eye disorders, report wonderful benefit from the use of this prescription. Get the prescription filled and use it; you may so strengthen your eyes that glasses will not be necessary. Thousands who are blind or nearly so, or who wear glasses, might never have required them if they had cared for their eyes in time. Save your eyes before it is too late! Do not become one of these victims of neglect. Eyeglasses are only like crutches, and every few years they must be changed to fit the ever-increasing weakened condition, no better are if you can, like many others, get clear, healthy strong normal eyes through the prescription mentioned. The Valmar Drug Co., of Toronto, will fill the above prescription by mail, if your druggist cannot.

THE FRENCH GAINS ARE IMPORTANT

THE FOE LOSES HEAVILY IN THE WEST

ENEMY SUFFERS GREAT LOSSES IN VAIN COUNTER ATTACKS

Cut to Pieces by Artillery Fire When They Attempt to Regain Lost Ground--French Guns Are Now Preparing The Way For Another Advance--Important Gains Have Been Made in Tahure District

PARIS, Oct. 9.—Tremendous German losses in the Kaiser's offensive around Loos on Friday were shown in to-day's official summary of the results. The Germans were described as attacking in three dense lines followed by many columns.

The French artillery wiped them all out.

Other violent German attacks about Neuville and St. Vaast were also completely repulsed.

The Germans captured part of the first line French trench near Leintry on Friday night in the course of a series of reconnaisance attacks. Leintry is in Parroy Forest in French Lorraine. In the western Argonne the French batteries silenced the German bombardment of the Gallic trenches.

Throughout Friday night there was occasional intense cannonading along Lihons, Quienneviers and Nouvron sectors.

East of Navarin Farm the Germans made a fierce counter-attack which was repulsed. The same fate met similar German rushes against the positions south of Tahure taken by the French on Friday.

LONDON, Oct. 9.—From vantage points which the French wrested on Friday from the Germans south of Tahure, a furious bombardment was being directed to-day against the Teutonic trenches. Le Trepeze is one of the captured positions mentioned in the despatches from the front as an especially important French gain. Artillery operations to-day plainly were part of the programme of clearing the German trenches ahead for continued advance.

In the Loose region indications were that the British had decisively checked the German attempt to recover the previously lost positions.

PETROGRAD, Oct. 9.—In fierce fighting in the Dvinsk region the balance of the latest gains have been in Russia's favour, said an official statement issued to-day. There was no vital change in the positions.

The Russian captures included an armoured train with 1,300 prisoners and many machine guns. Fifteen hundred prisoners were taken near Loutsk and several villages. At a few points German progress was admitted.

From Drisvyatitza River crossings to the Smorgom region a "protected battle" was reported raging.

Details were lacking of the destruction of a German transport by a British submarine in the Baltic, but it seemed to be probable.

Off Schloke region Russian warships silenced the German shore batteries and destroyed their launches.

PETROGRAD, Oct. 9.—Though officials here said the new Greek Cabinet had made an "excellent impression," the newspaper Retich asserted: "Sooner or later King Constantine will be obliged to stake his crown on the German card or reconcile himself with Venizelos," the ex-Premier who was crowded from office because of his pro-Ally views.

PETROGRAD, Oct. 9.—An official statement says that a British submarine sunk a German transport near the German coast in the Baltic Sea.

LONDON, Oct. 9.—The London Post calls for the resignation of Sir Edward Grey, and other papers assail him heavily.

LONDON, Oct. 9.—The British steamships Silver Ash and Scawby have been sunk by German submarines, the Admiralty announced to-day.

AMSTERDAM, Oct. 9.—The Kaiser is about to leave for the Servian war front, it was reported here to-day from Berlin.

SOFIA, Bulgaria, Oct. 9.—"Bulgaria's favourable opinion of Greece will no longer be justified unless the latter changes her attitude concerning the recent events at Salonika," including the Allies' landing, the Bulgarian Minister at Athens was instructed to-day to warn the Greek Government. He was directed to say that Bulgaria cannot accept the responsibility for the future if there is no change.

ATHENS, Oct. 9.—That Bulgaria will invade Serbia within two days was indicated by Sofia despatches to-day.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 9.—A bomb from a German aeroplane fell near the American Consulate at Nish, Serbia, on Oct. 4, and killed three Austrian prisoners, according to a State Department despatch to-day.

OTTAWA, Ont., Oct. 9.—Major A. V. Roia, of the 22nd French Canadian Regiment, has been killed in action in France. This is the first news that this regiment has been in action. Casualties now being received indicate that most of the Canadian regiments in the 2nd Contingent were recently under fire. The 16th, 21st, 31st, and 25th, 26th, 29th, and the Princess Pats have all sustained some casualties recently. So far, however, no heavy lists have been received.

PACKING OF JAM FOR SOLDIERS PROGRESSING

The donors of jam recently collected through the Red Cross Society for the soldiers will be interested to know that the packing operations are about completed. Warsaw, Keene, and other places have forwarded donations, some of which have required re-packing.

$237.41 COLLECTED FOR BAND FUND

Concert in Brock Street Rink Last Night Was Great Success—Band Won Fresh Laurels by its Finished Performance

A GOOD PROGRAMME

The concert in Brock street rink last night arranged by Adjutant McElhiney in aid of the Overseas Band Fund, was a splendid success from all points of view. There was a big attendance and the funds of the band were augmented to the extent of $237.41. Of this sum $80.41 was paid in cash during the concert, while on the slips that were given the audience as they passed into the rink and that were afterwards collected, $146 was promised. The latter amount includes a splendid donation of $50 from the Soldiers' Wives' and Mothers' Club. The collections were made by the soldiers and the result is a substantial contribution to the Band Fund. It is possible, too, that the amount will be increased.

From the enjoyment point of view, too the affair was a great success. The programme was entirely contributede by members of the band and the battalion, assisted by the little recruiting sergeant, Master Percy Luther, who has been adopted by the soldier boys. The Overseas Band, under the direction of Bandmaster Walter Hughes, was responsible for most of the programme, and the new organization made a splendid impression. It was the first opportunity that many citizens have had of hearing the band in concert numbers, and their work, considering the short time they have been together, was a revelation. Their offerings last night included two overtures, "Lutspeil" and "Northern Lights," two numbers that were most effectively presented and that were greatly enjoyed. Several marches were also given with a refreshing snap and vim, while in addition the band played patriotic airs during the taking of the collection, and also supplied the music for the exhibition by the physical drill squad. Altogether their performance was a triumph for Bandmaster Hughes and his capable musicians, and a guarantee that the band of the Peterborough Overseas Battalion will prove an organization that the citizens of Peterborough will be proud of wherever they are.

Bandmaster Hughes contributed a most enjoyable number to the programme, his cornet solo, "Columbia," being one of the features of the evening. Band Corporal Wm. Leader also starred with a splendid rendition of "Silver Threads Among the Gold" as a euphonium solo. The band is indeed fortunate with two such clever solo performers.
